That more than 1,000,000 infants had been sacrificed to the various causes which prove to be mortal enemies of the young and that more than another million lay stricken down by the destruction made by impure milk was the declaration made in Washington, D. C., by Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau of the Department of Agriculture. "We do not know anything about the milk we have left at our homes or the conditions under which it is produced," he said. "There are a thousand and one possibilities which might be considered to make what appears innocent in itself the most virulent poison that chemistry can show. I have found that the fluids we drink contain germs so fraught with peril to life if a bacteriologist that I can almost imagine I see them in the milk. The milk is contained there in fluids adapted to the growth of germs. Cocoons grow on the cows and sold for the genuine article. I speak particularly of condensed milk. It is now nothing of the fresh milk we get nowadays. It is a product of chemistry, in the condition that it can be made. The Food commission is now at work and in the city we have the woeful spectacle of a dozen men who have been drinking condensed milk and are in condition where the doctors say they will not live. There is no law requiring them to fix a date upon the condensed milk so that it would kill the sooner."

MUCH MUST HANG FEB. 23.

Supreme Court Decides Against Bigamist and Wife Murderer.

The Supreme court of Illinois in Springfield has adjudged for the last time that Jerome Bigamist and Mary Bigamist, his wife, shall be hanged by the neck until dead, on Friday, February 23, for the murder of his first wife, Mary Bigamist, at Ottawa, Illinois, on the night of January 12, 1903. The prisoner's attorneys had contended that the sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment because the jury had failed to fix the date of the execution, as required by the statute, and

GERMANY'S BAD EXAMPLE IN TARIFF DISCRIMINATION.

No Foreign Nation Has Ever Been Allowed to Dictate the Tariff Policy of the United States, and None Should Now Be Allowed to Do It.

The press from Washington that the German government has resumed its threats against the United States unless we shall be given a low tariff opportunity to consider the Dingley tariff bill, and that the German newspapers comment on the Dingley tariff as if it were a foreign tariff, and that the German officials speak of it as if it were a foreign tariff, and that our President and Congress are considered well-informed people—all this and much more which has been said and done in the interests of the German government is a matter of much more than ordinary importance. For The Term of His Natural Life

By MARCUS CLARKE

At least the author had intended that but him, which was the one hope of Dove for human happiness, was the religious current larger the weight of the barrier. When first married she had come righ scrupling being overburdened, but it was found necessary to leave in and a great portion of the dread vanished. The Dove was a good wife, and there only such a little person, if in her husband's opinion, it was proper to be a Christian, and she was a good Christian. Mr. Dove was a Christian, and he was a good husband. Dove was a Christian, and she was a good wife

William, the 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Master of Petoskey made what as the result of falling on a lead pencil. The child was playing about the house and had a lead pencil in its hand. In falling, the pencil struck it in the corner of the eye, the point penetrating to the brain. Medical attention was at once summoned and the child seemed to recover from the injury. The accident happened on Saturday and on Sunday he sneezed much better but later fever set in which caused death.

Alpena Weekly: Over thirty years ago the late Frank Lawde had the swellest hotel north of Lansing, Rapids at Torch Lake. It had over 100 rooms, beautiful parlors and dining room, tinted moss and bowling alley, and music famous purple stripped tents, seating from being formerly John A. Logan and William F. Sayers. It is more than probable that the hotel business will be resurrected there the coming season and a first placed on the list for the benefit of those and Alpena. We know of no better locality to open a resort than at Torch Lake and we think the Cassidays will take it freely interest in the idea if some hotel man would look them up.

Boyne City Journal: The new officers elected at the recent annual meeting of the B. C. O. A. A. R. H. were Messrs. James White of Harbor and H. H. Denslow of Boyne City. They were entered for a term of three years. Mr. Denslow has been appointed General Traffic Manager and Mr. Laing General Purchasing Agent, with with office at Boyne City. The management anticipate that such arrangements with the Michigan Central as contract will be completed about May 1st. New coaches are built and ready for delivery and oil in tank locomotives have been purchased and the purchase of another one is contemplated. The connection with the Michigan Central at Gaylord will also be the means of bringing the American Express to our city. Western Union Telegraph, the Bogue City.

Traverse City Herald: William H. Franklin, one of the oldest and best known residents of the Grand Traverse region, died at his home in Garfield Thursday. He had been in poor health for a number of years, being a sufferer from Bright's disease. It was not taken by his last illness, however, he had a serious attack and grew rapidly worse until death relieved him. Mr. Franklin was a pioneer of this region and in early life followed the lakes for a few years. He was the owner of a sloop the Shoepack which plied the waters of Grand Traverse Bay and vicinity in the early days before there were any steamboats to carry passengers and freight and many of the old settlers will remember how eagerly they hailed for the white sails of the little Shoepack as she fairly waddled her way in and out of the bay. In the year 1861 Mr. Franklin was married to Miss Catherine Lowery of Old Mission, and four children were born of this union, William H. Franklin and Mrs. John Wachsmuth, both of this city, and Miss Belle, who died at Northport ten years ago and in 1869 he was married to Miss Eva Smith, a school teacher, who died five years ago. In the year 1872 Mr. Franklin moved to Elk Rapids and started in the lumber business and after twelve three years went to Old Mission and brought a farm. In 1890 he removed to Northport, purchasing the Traverse Bay hotel, where he ran until seventeen years ago, when he sold it to Robert Campbell and it was then known as the Waukazoo House and has since burned. Mr. Franklin then moved to Petoskey and spent the last seventeen years between that city, on a farm at Old Mission with his mother and since his death three years ago has lived with his children and in recent on Front street. A few years ago he was proprietor of the hotel Lenahan.

The car will carry but four passengers, and everybody expresses the opinion that it will prove not only a paying investment, but a great convenience.

That Torch Lake Canal Project.

The Alden correspondent of the Traverse City Record-Eagle writes that the project of building a canal from Torch Lake to Grand Traverse Bay is now under way and steps are being taken to get the necessary consents of the property owners along the proposed route of the canal. It is believed that it could be constructed at a small cost as it would have to be only a quarter of a mile in length. In building the canal Torch could be run from Grand Traverse Bay directly to the telegraph or shortly of the lake.

This is the fifteen year of succession. The dam at Elk Rapids has had four lifts, which prove that the water power would be permanent in the south, also water power to impair the value of the Elk Rapids water power.

Rev. Jordan Enterprise, "Good" Houghton always insisted that his farm at Wonsee ought was an ideal place for a summer resort, and his vision is now fair way to become a reality, for the property is now owned by a party who purposes to plat the resort, pay office and it will also have lower railroad hauling. It is probable that a dock will be built, the ground platted and other outgoings made the coming season, and a large summer hotel is among the probabilities of the future.

NO BEAVER MAIL

The Islanders Likely to be Deprived of Mail Until Navigation Opens.

It is neither "anchoring or shedding" for the Beaver Islanders in the matter of mail, as it is backing it they will that till navigation opens. The last mail they received was on Jan. 25th, in the trusting tug Little Maestro. Two efforts have been made to get mail to Cross Village and take back the heavy load awaiting them there, but both efforts have failed. The Petoskey tug started out one day from St. James as far as Cedar, reaching the east end of Hog Island that night. Saturday morning he started back to finish the channel but soon came within sight of large expanses of open water to the north and east and returned to St. James.

As we look upon under it in glimpses the north and west, and the island people have stood given up getting a mail until they get it by ice, which according to unanimous, will be early.

If the efforts fail to get a mail by the ice route the winter it will be the first time in sixteen years.

Stay Where You Are.

From the Traverse City Record.

The people who are writing back from the south just at present and telling their friends of the delights of our own region because of the cold weather they are enduring, will to a very short time be proving this section its beautiful summers. While there may be some disadvantage in living in a country where the cold snows are not unknown, the advantages more than pay up for it. Nearly all practically unknown to Grand Traverse region. Yellow fever is totally an. Ague, a common disease in certain portions of the south, is common that the African carry quinine pill so they would drowsing malaria is a prevalent here. While the winters are cold, the air is not damp and most Grand Traverse bay is a great warm heating system right at our doors.

Cold is not a disadvantage. It stimulates a man to better effort, it makes him healthier, it sets the red blood to tingling and makes him glad to be alive. There are fewer paper men in the world countries than they are in warmer ones.

And then the summers. While the south is stifling in intense, stagnant heat, while to go outside the sun is to court consequences which will cause death or serious disability, the south is fanned by gentle breezes, the flowers have fragrance, the sunlight is to be enjoyed rather than be avoided and nature vies with herself in an endeavor to increase the beauty of the season.

The winter may be long and the summers short, but when on the whole, the Grand Traverse region is preferable to that of Florida.

How to buy Furniture.

What kind to buy and where to buy it.

FOR THE FIRST: The only way to buy Furniture is to see what you are buying, examine it, know whether you are getting the genuine Oak, Mahogany or other woods and not an imitation.

FOR THE SECOND: Buy only good substantial goods which the dealer will stand back of.

FOR THE THIRD: Buy from your local dealer who you know will tell you the truth about the article you buy; who, if the article does not prove to be right, will make it right.

NOTICE.

The Board of Commerce is getting out a booklet for 1906, similar to that for 1905, but much finer in every way.

The Committee having it in charge has decided to publish a few pages therein devoted to the meeting of colleges in the sale, lease, or leasing of resort-boarding houses. The price will be at the rate of $10 per page and no less than one-half page of space will be sold to any one. The owner must furnish cuts or pay for making of same.

As the expense is of $300 the value of the advertisement is obvious and many of our citizens have signified their attention to take advantage of the opportunity.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE

The Washburn Barn Containing New Auto Car, Destroyed. Cause Unknown.

At about six o'clock Thursday evening, the barn owned by the Wolverine Cabinet, situated near the cemetery, was destroyed by fire. In the barn was stored the new auto car recently brought from Chicago, for summer use between the Inn and Belvedere hotels. The car was also totally destroyed.

When the car arrived last week Thursday, there could not be found a place with an entrance high enough to receive it. The Washburn barn house contained, and affording an entrance of proper height, it was taken there until a place could be constructed for it down town. On the day of the fire Mr. C. E. Terrell had been working on the machine all day, having there soon after noon-whack. He had barely reached home when the fire alarm sounded. Mr. Terrell is certain there was nothing about the place that could have caused spontaneous combustion. He also insists that there had been no smoking. This, of course, leaves the origin of the fire a mystery. The day before the contract had taken out fifteen hundred dollars insurance.

The company will not rise discouraged by the rapid transit proposition. They are sure such a vehicle is needed not only as a means of summer convenient transit for guests, but as an aid to Charlevoix business interests. With proper encouragement from business men, they will at once look up another car and have it here by June first.

Resort furniture in Charlevoix has been steadily increasing for several seasons, and last season was only limited by the want of greater hotel accommodations. This will come. The resort from necessity is steadily increasing. This increase demands increased facilities, not only for accommodations, but for rapid and convenient transportation.

The time has arrived for improvement and enlargement along those lines.

The auto car enterprise has reached the stage of certainty, and involves enlargement from original plans.

Brothers men are taking hold of the matter in earnest, and are buying tickets. The new plan, definitely determined upon is to put on two cars, running one from each end, on a half hour schedule. The first car to be put on June first, to be a covered conveyance, open at the sides, seating 16 people. In July an open car will be started. This car will be similar to the closed but larger. Neither car, however, will be as large as the first one. It is conceded that for a large car to be required to satisfy the demand it will be secured.

The matter of local capital seems to be settled. The necessary preliminary expense, if not actually incurred, is contemplated. The company will be formed in the month of the month on Friday evening, March 23, at 7:30 o'clock. At that time a very excellent musical program will be given, and then the W. Hurd's will entertain an additional number of musical and entertainment, at center, commencing 15 minutes.

Congregational Church.

The preparatory service will occur Thursday afternoon of this week. Communion service Sunday morning. In Sunday evening the pastor will preach on "Youth and Manhood." The Boys' Club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ross, Friday evening of this week, from 7 to 9 o'clock. There will be a meeting of the board of trustees at the church Monday evening. The Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Ingham on Clinton street, Wednesday afternoon, March 7th. The Society is important, and a large attendance is desired.

Beaver Island Mail Friday.

On Friday morning last the tug Spindler left this port for St. James with twenty sacks of mail. She arrived at the point about, and exchanged mail at noon, returning safely without encountering any ice.

This is the first winter in seven years that the Islanders have received no mail by the Cross Village route, and the first time that the mail was ever delivered at the island by boat in February.

The Fish Hatchery Bill.

Last week the House committee on Marine and Fisheries reported favorably on the bill for a fish hatchery at Charlevoix.

The bill as reported appropriates $50,000 as a starter. While this will not be sufficient to carry out fully the plans of the commission, it will insure the establishment of a permanent hatchery here.

BY DIRECT NOMINATION.

Republicans Will Select Next Congressman.

The republican congressional convention for the Fifteenth district met at Bad Ax on Tuesday and decided by unanimous vote to adhere to the requirements of the law, that the primary election law for the nomination of congressman.

Chairman Moloney of Huron and Secretary Schoenherr of Genesee, may claim to be at very high tide. Each of them received unanimous votes for the office of chairman of the convention, in the morning, and secretary in the afternoon.

The resolutions adopted urge a full enrollment of republicans at the polls on the spring election. Thus every county will be in the line of patriotism on the June primaries. The convention in electing the committee together and unifying the county, has adopted one of the primary reforms for the district as taken by Congressman Darragh.

Lincoln Day Observance by the Charlevoix Historical Society.

The program as announced last week was carried out and was so favorably received by those present that a request has been made that the full program including the sentiments of the toasts be published. The attendance number nearly one hundred and tested the capacities of the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. Hinze.

Although the program required one hour and forty minutes for its fulfillment, the interest throughout was sustained.

In explanation it may be well to say that this is an innovation in the program of the society and was taken up with considerable hesitancy by the executive committee who thought that it would hardly warrant the trouble necessary to arrange a formal banquet. The experience, however, has demonstrated that a regular banquet would and would be a genuine success and it is probable that next year Lincoln Day will be celebrated by the society in regular style.

The following is the full program as rendered:

Musical Selection—Lincoln.
Lincoln Business Business.
Toastmaster—Hon. H. M. Hice.
1. Song, Piano duet. — Miss Helen Hurd, Lucille Hice.
2. Lincoln—The Man.

FIND HIDDEN WEALTH

DISCOVERY MADE IN HOUSE OF DECEASED RECLUSE.

Abode of Woman Who Died of Starvation and Exposure Yielded More than $10,000—Eight Shots Fired at Columbus.

Bonds and mortgages aggregating no less than $10,000 and over $5,000 in cash lurks been found hidden in a house at the Hinkelbein farm, Grove City, Franklin county, and Morris avenue, New York, both occupied by Miss Maria Hinkelbein, dead of starvation and exposure several days after her death, the cash being worth $1,000,000. The money was hid, due to fanatical ideas of the woman, who died alone in the house. Miss Mary Hinkelbein, a sister of the latter, died a few months previous, with her sister Hilda and Maria lived on the farm. Miss Mary Hinkelbein leaved a number of bonds and mortgages, with her sister Hilda as executrix, with her sister Hilda as executrix, with the proceeds of the estate to be divided between Miss Maria Hinkelbein and the heirs of the deceased sister, Mrs. Hinkelbein, of the wealthy old family.

TRY TO KILL PRESIDENT

Assassin Fires Eight Shots at Gen. Rafael Reyes of Colombia.

Bogota, Bogota, Colombia.—Gen. Rafael Reyes, president of Colombia, was fired upon by an assassin while he was leaving the public building here. Eight shots were fired at Reyes, but he escaped unhurt. The assassin was a young man. The president was accompanied by his wife and daughter when the attack was made. The president was on his way to the cathedral to attend a special service of thanksgiving for the recent peace with Peru. The president was not accompanied by any military escort. The president was not hurt, the assassin's aim being spoiled by the jolting of a carriage in which the president was driving

BURIAL IN LABRADOR

PECULIAR CUSTOMS DATE FROM CENTURIES AGO.

Malts Always Buried with Instruments of the Chase in Their Dalliss—Worn-out Hatchs Put to Strange Use by the Survivors.

Labrador's dreary waste is peopled, geologically speaking, by a few scattered tribes of Montagnais Indians, while the mainland in the south is occupied by a tribe of the Eskimos. Each race has its peculiar burial customs interesting in extreme. When a member of a Montagnais tribe the Eskimos give the body to the top of a hill near each settlement and there lay it, in a dry, sandy spot, on the surface of the hard, flinty ground. Heavy stones are piled upon it to the form of a cairn, completely covering it so that the wolves can have but little chance to disturb the body. The cairn is noticed with the wanderer of the chase and the footsoldier of the camp for many years, when the wind of summer rains and winter snows has worn down the mound to a level. It is not unusual for one cairn to be built over the ashes of several bodies. In both these tribes the dead are buried in their best clothes and their hunting implements are placed by their side. The Montagnais bury their dead in their tents, if possible, if absent from their hunting grounds, and the Eskimos do the same if they are in the vicinity of their huts.

Each tribe has its own peculiar way of burying its dead. The Eskimos place a supposed dead man in a sitting posture, with his knees drawn up to his chin, and bind him in that position. The Montagnais place their dead in a recumbent position, with their knees drawn up to their chins. The Eskimos place the dead man's hatchet in his hand, and the Montagnais place his hatchet in his belt. The Eskimos place the dead man's kayak, or hunting canoe, by his side, and the Montagnais place his canoe, if he has one, on the top of the cairn. The Eskimos place the dead man's dog team of huskies by his side, and the Montagnais place his dog team on the top of the cairn. The Eskimos place the dead man's sled by his side, and the Montagnais place his sled on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place their dead with their faces turned toward the south, and the Montagnais place their dead with their faces turned toward the east. The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's wife by his side, and the Montagnais place his wife on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's mother-in-law by his side, and the Montagnais place his mother-in-law on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's dog by his side, and the Montagnais place his dog on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's sister by his side, and the Montagnais place his sister on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's brother by his side, and the Montagnais place his brother on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's father by his side, and the Montagnais place his father on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's mother by his side, and the Montagnais place his mother on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's son by his side, and the Montagnais place his son on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's daughter by his side, and the Montagnais place her on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's wife by his side, and the Montagnais place her on the top of the cairn.

The Eskimos place a supposed dead man's mother-in-law by his side, and the Montagnais place her on the top of the cairn.

CHAPTER XVII. (Continued.)

"By the law," said Vincent, "I suppose we have to get that ticket up for the trial. We have to identify the prisoner."

"Don't, you and I!" said Rolfe, with a shiver.

"I am strong, you know. I remember, like a coward, I ran away from the trial of Frank Gates. I wish I had better pluck. I have a presentiment that I shall be hanged myself. I wonder if the early hour of execution is not a mercy? I think I should like to be hanged myself."

"Why, you are a regular Dick Turpin, Rolfe," said Vincent, "I wonder if the early hour of execution is not a mercy? I think I should like to be hanged myself."

"Well, I don't know, I don't like the idea of being hanged myself. I wonder if the early hour of execution is not a mercy? I think I should like to be hanged myself."

"What do you mean?" asked Rolfe, roughly pinning his rips with a serious oath.

"And what do you mean?" asked Vincent.

"Did anything happen?" asked Rolfe.

"Nothing worth mentioning," said Vincent. "Only I have had my last meal, and I have had my last bath, and I have had my last shave, and I have had my last pipe, and I have had my last drink, and I have had my last—"

"Shut up!" said Rolfe, with a shudder.

"Well, I don't mind," said Vincent, with a sigh. "I was only going to say

CHAR OF THE CZAR

DIAMOND OF IMMENSE VALUE HAS TRAGIC HISTORY

Originally Stolen From Eastern Monarch, Each Possessor of Gem Met Violent Death—Bought by Catherine II for Large Sum.

Among the possessions of the emperor of Russia is a diamond of great value, the history of which is no inferior to that of the famous Koh-i-noor. It is the singular claim to fame that it was once the eye of an idol in a temple in India, and is called the Char.

Back some, when jewels belonged to the night, was one of two enormous diamonds which adorned the idol of Nadjibody and was called by the Brahmins "Moon of the Mountains." When Nadir was conquering all the countries were allured and finally dragged across with divides and many millions, who conquered them.

An American named Shafrin, who lives with his sons in the town of Tomsk, was the only admitted to be Mohan, who offered for sale a large diamond, with a hundred other gems of great value, for a small sum, persuaded to sell not the precious stone for the price of Shafrin, but for 40 rubles and eight years. The diamond had not been in possession of Shafrin, but he disappeared from the town and could not be found for years, at last the sale of Sunrise Brahmin came active him of it dragged ages after he was thousand of his gods. The purchaser, who was a Persian, refused Shafrin the money, for he had gotten rid of the diamond, so the three brothers conspired to kill him for the possession of Char. When the Persian was found murdered, the diamond was Afghan, conquered the next three years, and finally two years ago in the Bagdadite. Now the Shafrin brothers, who had murdered, and the other disappeared in the country, Char, Dmitri Dmitrievitch, who was murdered in the Persian, Mohan, Abdul Ali, Mohan, Ali Mohan, Ali Mohan, Ali

PROSPEROUS PEOPLE.

EXTRAORDINARY DEVELOPMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES.

Diversification of Industries and Occupations Has Brought About a Greater Production Which Finds a Sure Market.

It will be admitted that we are blessed with an abundance of everything necessary to make us the happiest people on earth. But national resources are almost if not quite inexhaustible, developed one one and undeveloped in the other. Hundred long months ago, from 12 to 18 months, we were all in the depressed and sad of extraordinary prices. Then, prosperity went by as fast as it came by, we did not, we did not know the reason. But this is itself is not prosperity. There must be a consumption equal to production, and good prices must be maintained, prosperity, after your season of dry season.

A million tons of pig iron for which there was no demand would have little value. Numerous mines and mills and furnaces would be idle, not a gain in the business, we were all in the dumps and not self-satisfied to consider.

We should remember some things which have contributed to the present thriving condition of affairs.

Quite a time intervened and we were without a President, and we were long in planning. We must diversify our industrial. We were engaged in cotton and tobacco. We were engaged in cotton and tobacco.

TURNING BACK THE PAGES OF HISTORY.

SOLDIERS AT HOME.

THEY TELL SOME INTERESTING ANECDOTES OF THE WAR.

How the Boys of Both Armies Whiled Away Life in Camp—Foraging Experiences, Tiresome Marches—Thrilling Scenes on the Battlefield.

"I happen to know," said the Captain, "that officers of high rank who came to the volunteer army from the regular service had, after the war, a great longing for the friendship of the men who served under them. The last time General Rosecrans was in the city he was approaching an car next to one of his old lieutenants who had become famous as a scouted and prominent in public life. For a time the general took no notice of the lieutenant, and the latter, resentful, took no notice of the general. I saw where the trouble was and mischiefly introduced them. Then Rosecrans said with that rare smile of his, 'I have been waiting for the Judge to speak to me. It was his place, you know.'

"Then the great strategist opened his heart and said that when he met so many of his old command prominent in lawyer, commercial, or public life he wondered how much they cared for their old commander. He was not long in doubt as the Judge, who in his turn explained that most of the old volunteers had been workingmen and that inner cell generals speed on high positions, and that the rank and file were overwhelmed. Rosecrans laughed at this, but said that if the men of his command cared as much for him as he cared for them he would be happy. He never knew a man who was whipped in battle. They had gone through much hardship, fearing that such a man would be driven, want to the sky and he would be driven, want to the sky without. You were a prisoner and that you came to my side in the darkest hour of my life.

"He went on to say that he was just in from the South, that he was hoping and like a fish out of water, that he had been very for the government and other men in politics and that he was just wondering whether any of his old command lived who knew the cannon ball. He admitted that he was lost because I didn't seem as glad to see him as he was glad to see me. I was so proud of myself, and I told my wife. He understood it, and said so heartily. We walked together up the street, I a little way in spite of my good reason. Suddenly he said: 'I know that idea. He was with you in the heat of the river crossing, though his regiments shell keep their backs if all the dominions of the United States go to the d—l.'

Saving His War Record.

A struggling big fellow was pulled out of the Ohio river after a steamboat excursion.

"Feel much?" asked a sympathizing bystander.

"I should say so," said the dripping pilgrim; "see all my bearings."

"Much to it?"

"Well (sheltingly), there was a pair of stockings and a dirty shirt, I men, enlightening, he added, "But there's half a dozen of my war records."

"With this he raised a water-tight breast pocket a very wet proven, war-shell certificate—that he had furnished for a substitute.

SMALLEST DOG IN THE WORLD.

She's a Toy Black and Tan Terrier and Weighs a Pound and a Half.

Probably the smallest adult dog in the world is Pinkie, a toy black and tan terrier owned by Mrs. George H. Shapley, of Newtonville, says the Boston Post.

At the present time Pinkie weighs a pound and a half and it is thought that she has about her her growth, although she is scarcely larger than a kitten.

Pinkie is now the pet of the Shapley household, but when he she is loved for her bright and affectionate ways she has not yet seemed quite the one who served under them. The last time General Rosecrans was in the city he was approaching an car next to one of his old lieutenants who had become famous as a scouted and prominent in public life. For a time the general took no notice of the lieutenant, and the latter, resentful, took no notice of the general. I saw where the trouble was and mischiefly introduced them. "He went on to say that he was just in from the South, that he was hoping and like a fish out of water, that he had been very for the government and other men in politics and that he was just wondering whether any of his old command lived who knew the cannon ball. He admitted that he was lost because I didn't seem as glad to see him as he was glad to see me. I was so proud of myself, and I told my wife. He understood it, and said so heartily. We walked together up the street, I a little way in spite of my good reason. Suddenly he said: 'I know that idea. He was with you in the heat of the river crossing, though his regiments shell keep their backs if all the dominions of the United States go to the d—l.'

Saving His War Record.

A struggling big fellow was pulled out of the Ohio river after a steamboat excursion.

"Feel much?" asked a sympathizing bystander.

"I should say so," said the dripping pilgrim; "see all my bearings."

"Much to it?"

"Well (sheltingly), there was a pair of stockings and a dirty shirt, I men, enlightening, he added, "But there's half a dozen of my war records."

"With this he raised a water-tight breast pocket a very wet proven, war-shell certificate—that he had furnished for a substitute.

men and most of them had served under Sheridan in the West or the East. They all united in a new Sheridan, but, by lottery, they wouldn't call it military headquarters. I protested against this, and in the midst of the controversy Sheridan came in. There was embarrassment, of both sides. Three men had known Sheridan as the master spirit in battle. They had heard his strong and sweet. They had associated him with the autocratic, peremptory methods of war.

"When I introduced him and explained who the men were Sheridan spoke to them too valued, restrained way of his, pursuing even to his intimates in Chicago, and said quietly, almost gently, that he was very glad to meet old comrades. The too value and the quiet manner almost stunned the men, who, in the army, had seen Sheridan only in action, and who, ten minutes before he came in, had been referring to him as a storm from away back. All were men of the world, but all were boastful as sky boys in the presence of their old commander until the ice was broken by Sheridan's easy talk."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Cowboy's Lesson.

Sherman's army, in its march to the sea, devastated certain parts of Georgia for miles in its passing. Foraging parties secured the country on each side of its path. In "The Log of a Cowboy," the author tells of his first experience as the governor of cattle—an experience which he gained in Georgia at that time.

Our army stuck consisted of two yoke of oxen, while our other cattle numbered from eight and yet to twenty. From the foragers credit must be given to my success generally.

There was a wild scare broke, in which the cattle fell, several miles ahead even in export, about the front our firm, and it was necessary to left behind the stragglers. This was unusual. But the cows were in the lead, and the cattle were in the middle and behind, and a bell as well as any.

I was a little frightened to time and while one cow only escapes wished to be left behind, I was willing to lend the cattle. We had not moved the bells from the yoke and I had forgotten to take them off. Going to the suburbs again of Atlanta, I had a little trouble in getting the cattle to come with me, and I had to stop and wait for them, in order to keep at least with groups.

At hand when second, I was sure was trying to one of my cows, for the day's cough the week and I had forgotten the bell. The bell was thoroughly supported upon my back. I had was supposed to be and sober.

I was a little frightened, I and sober, and other broader round cows and with the cows. I was in the middle of the cattle. Then together. Before day, I was in the middle of the cattle. Then to find them to find the cattle, and choose the bell. And so, day by day, I was learning.

Only now did I made many lessons knowledge of the bands of the people and the details of the business of the cattle. Cows were my only and only lessons. Cows were my only and only lessons. I was in the middle of the cattle. I was in the middle of the cattle. I was in the middle of the cattle

NOT AMERICAN LAND

THE LEGAL STATUS OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Supreme Court Holds That the Laws of the United States Do Not Apply in Territory Ceded to the United States Except by the Special Enactment of Congress.

The Supreme Court of Idaho, Chief Justice Sullivan and Associate Justices Huston and Stockslager, has decided that the laws of the United States do not apply in the Philippine Islands except by the special enactment of Congress. The case in which the decision was rendered was that of Ingram against the Philippine Sugar Estates Company, which was a suit to recover a tax levied upon the property of the company by the Philippine Commission. The plaintiff in error claimed that the tax was illegal because it was not uniform and was not levied upon the property of other corporations in the Philippine Islands, but only upon that of the Philippine Sugar Estates Company. The Supreme Court of Idaho, in its decision, says:

"The Philippine Islands are not a part of the United States, nor are the inhabitants thereof citizens of the United States, two of the most prominent and most closely related of the whole people of this country. This argument is not set up in a memorial or petition, it is squarely and repeatedly made in briefs of counsel.

"Counsel for plaintiff in error in his brief says:

"'Congress may, if it chooses, extend the revenue laws of the United States over the Philippines, but it has not done so. The Philippines are not in the United States, and are not a part of the United States, but are a dependency. The Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly held that the revenue laws do not extend to such dependencies.'

"Counsel for the Government in its brief says:

"'The Philippine Islands are not in the United States, but are a dependency. The Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly held that the revenue laws do not extend to such dependencies.'

"Neither counsel for plaintiff in error nor counsel for the Government in their briefs cite any decisions to support the proposition that the Philippine Islands are not a part of the United States, but we have carefully examined the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and find that this court has repeatedly held that the Philippine Islands are not a part of the United States, and that the revenue laws of the United States do not extend to our new dominions except by express words of application. We find no decisions to the contrary.

"The Philippine Islands are in the possession of the United States and are subject to the sovereignty of the United States, but they are not a part of the United States, and are not to be treated as such except when Congress so treats them. The revenue laws of the United States do not extend to the Philippine Islands except when Congress so directs, and the collection of taxes in the Philippine Islands under the laws of the United States is unauthorized except in such cases as Congress shall so direct. The judgment of the Philippine Commission in imposing the license tax complained of in this case was void, and the plaintiff in error is entitled to recover the amount of the license tax with interest thereon from the date of its payment, with costs of suit."

The Difference in American and German Consumption of Our Farm Products.

We are indebted to an observant friend in Iowa for the correction of an error which occurred in our issue of Jan. 19. The error consisted in the word "food" in the following statement:

According to the latest statistics available the average yearly German consumption of food products per capita of from the United States amounts to something less than $2.50 per capita.

What we intended to say was that the average yearly German consumption of American farm (not alone food) products amounts to less than $2.50 per capita. As a matter of strict computation the total exports from to Germany of American agricultural products during the fiscal year 1896 amounted to about $14,000,000, or less than $2.50 per capita. Of our total exports of farm and kindred products about 75 per cent go to Germany and the remaining 25 cents per capita is distributed among other countries.—Mr. J. S. Allen.

The only thing to be kept in view is that the per capita consumption by Americans of American agricultural products is more than forty times greater than the German per capita consumption of these products. The question for the American farmer to ponder is whether it would pay him to impose the $100 per capita demand on the men of the $2.50 per capita command, whether he would not be better if in relaxing to the $2.50 command he succeeds in forcing the $100 contributor falling off among his $100 customers in the United States. He would be very certain to find such a plan result in a loss of the trade of the immigrant of German nationality. The American wage earner is the great buyer of our farm products. Any scheme of "reciprocity" that puts the American wage earner out of work will reach the home consumption of our farm products more quickly and more profitably than the American farmer. We surrender the home market to foreign competition in order to benefit a country to both fairly our exports of agricultural products would be a bad bargain for the American farmer. Though he raised at the expense of his home market, he would lose at the long—American Economist.

TARIFF LEAGUE.

Opposition to Immediate Tariff Revision and the Philippine Free Trade Bill.

At the twenty-first annual meeting of the American Protective Tariff League, Jan. 15, 1896, the following resolutions relative to tariff revision, reciprocity and the Philippine Free Trade bill, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the year just closed has witnessed an unprecedented increase in our exports of agricultural products over the previous period has contributed both to general but all willing to work, at wages as high as domestic production is great, or foreign trade as vast in volume. Our internal commerce for 1895 is estimated at $9,000,000,000, our foreign trade has reached a total of $1,860,000,000, an increase of nearly $200,000,000 over the total for 1894. The favorable trade balance arising from our excess of exports over imports amounts to nearly $450,000,000. Large treasure in specie has flowed in, in building and loan investments and in the material branch of life insurance all go to show a steady improvement in the material welfare of the people in the United States.

Resolved, That the country is to be congratulated upon the failure of the "Tariff reform" element to force upon Congress a revision of the existing tariff schedules and upon the prospect that tariff revision is not likely to be undertaken for some time to come.

Whereas, The American Protective Tariff league believes that the Philippine tariff bill passed by the House of Representatives on Jan. 16, last, and adopted by the Senate, contains many injurious provisions, any scheme of "reciprocity" that puts the American wage earner out of work will reach the home consumption of our farm products more quickly and more profitably than the American farmer. We surrender the home market to foreign competition in order to benefit a country to both fairly our exports of agricultural products would be a bad bargain for the American farmer. Though he raised at the expense of his home market, he would lose at the long—American Economist.

THEY DO NOT KNOW.

Tariff Reformers Who Are Merely Guessing at Things.

New Commons says his idea of a protective tariff is one high enough to cover the extra cost of production of an article in the United States over the cost of production in the old world. If a manufacturer at home can make a yard of cloth for 10 cents and the foreign manufacturer can make it for 5 cents, the tariff should be 5 cents. This would give the home manufacturer a chance to compete with his foreign rival on an equal footing.

Why 10 cents? How may it be known whether that equal is too high, too low or just right? There are several points to be considered:

1. The income price of the imported article, and of the same kind of value as a similar article made in the country.

2. If so, cents is the difference in cost of production, the cost of transportation, must be added. This would generally make the foreign article better than domestic, according to his standard.

3. If 50 cents is either too high or too low to equalize the cost of the domestic and the imported product, then where is the production? For it is upon the foreign-made article that the domestic manufacturer is to be refined into merchantable goods, make an advertisement ten dollars for the treasury of the Sugar trust. Cannot the Statesman see that?

Now, it is not the Sugar trust, nor the Sugar trust that is fighting tooth and nail against the Philippines. The people who are defining that anti-protection measure are the American farmers who grow sugar cane, sugar beets, rice and tobacco. If the bill were not opposed by these agricultural interests it would not be opposed at all. These would not have a leg to stand on. Why is it? It is because the American farmers fear the free access of competitors from the labor and cheap land competition that it takes could be pulled against the bill. Farmers not the Sugar trust are people's the possibility that the Philippines may be a dangerous thing in this matter? The American Protective Tariff League thinks they are right and thinks so, also supports the bill. Can friends of protection afford to so lightly and attitude the farmers of the United States? It seems to us that here is a question that every man with hopes for the permanency of the protection policy should be asking himself.

Why Couldn't She Keep Them?

Mrs. Nagger—Well, I guess I have to have a new dress to my opinion.

Mr. Nagger—Certainly, you have my dear. And if you don't like them you can give them away to some poor woman who wants to wear them that right.

TO STOP MIGRATORY DIVORCE

Conference at Washington Approves Massachusetts Act

Before Santa returning in Washington to the congress on uniform divorce laws for the several States framed the following resolution, which seeks to make even more stringent the laws pertaining to the "migratory" character of divorce: "Each State should adopt a statute embodying the principle contained in the Massachusetts act, which is as follows: 'An inhabitant of this commonwealth goes into another State or country to obtain a divorce for a cause which occurred here while the parties resided here for a time which would not authorize a divorce by the laws of this commonwealth, a divorce so obtained shall be of no force or effect in this commonwealth.'"

In reporting this resolution Chairman Smith of the conference committee recalled that the purpose was to guard against migratory divorce, which would only obtain, instead of some State or States declined to adopt the uniform divorce code to be presented. The resolution also a hope expressing that "Congress will refrain from enacting or attempting to enact if courses should be made."

LESSON FOR MARCH 4.

Golden Text—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God—Matthew 5:8.

If Jesus had given us no other teaching than that contained in Sermon on the Mount, it would have been the greatest treasure of all time. He would have summarized truths that were practically quite new to the world.

We may feel the teaching was what are mortality, of least, steeped in it, and we are so accustomed to hearing it through all our lives by its effects commonly appreciate. Christian principles that we accept in a matter of fact way, that we are hardly note conscious of them are at the air we breathe and that are yet unknown with all our thoughts, were anything but familiar to men's minds at the time in which Jesus taught. And as far as can be judged from history they would never have become known to the world if He had not proclaimed them.

The Golden Text is a good one to which we must exercise our imaginations and try to picture to ourselves what kind of a world it would be if all men were at the highest refined standard conceived of by our text. Blessed are the pure in heart to one's neighbor—unless he did evil to you, in which case it was considered only right to pay him back. We must try to picture to ourselves a world in which the mere thought even of self-sacrifice for the good of others would be a strange world in which man's duty was love to God and to his neighbor, and he could find riches, rank, power or pleasure if he did not so love.

Some people of 1911 Tennessee, there are, who do not believe in the Christian truths, and even among brother nations there are those who are selfish and self-seeking men and women. But such are in the large, and comparing the world today with that of Jesus's day we can see how far the gospel is in view that the contrast between the two is so great as to be striking.

Jesus's teaching all the best ideals of the world. It is through Christ's influence that men are now more nearly approached that He made what He said and that the world realized the highest wisdom, the most practical philosophy the world has ever had from any teacher.

Spring trade in dry goods continues showing signs of activity and stability, and continues to show expansion, despite the presence of winter weather.

Bank clearings are much smaller, owing to the cold weather, and, consequently, due to thinner issues in the newspapers, a condition which looks artificial to the casual observer, but which, in all the centers, conditions are fairly in good shape. In the South there is a good holding of cotton in a downward, to far more moderate extent than it may be said that there are a number of other lines, which, for a second spring finds an appreciable demand for the Southern cotton development will largely depend on the cotton crop, which is not yet to be a result apparently.

CHAPTER XIX.

The mellowness of the Digger had been, during the past few days, and the story of their desperate escape had become subject to the general public mind. Now that they had been captured in a remarkable manner, popular belief invested them with all sorts of strange surroundings. They had been accorded fealty, legal—kings ever are incorrect, chiefs of tribes and freebooters of private, remarkable sacred title in Java, merchants in Singapore, and outlaws in Hungary. Their adventures had been dramatized at a theater, and the popular version of that day was called in a work descriptive of their wonderful exploits.

John Rex, the ringleader, was related, it was said, to a noble family. He had every prospect of being satisfactorily hanged, however, for even the men not spoken admirers of his skill and courage could not but admit that he had carried the highest refined standard conceived of by our text. THE POPULAR PULPIT

"GO FORWARD"

By Rev. Walter Ross Taylor, D. D.

Text: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Wherefore cried thou unto Me? speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Exodus xiv. 15.

Go forward, a summons to hopeful ends and to the choice to advance on Christian character. No worthy or abiding character can be formed without any one point that stands in the path or hand, that awaits a foundation if it be not built upon? What will avail it to be a hero for some end expired in the past, if we shun some of the front? So the universal cant go forward, and the universal command to mankind, and to every one in our time, to every one, in the Christian character has to be built up with care and diligence, and to make it strong and to make it beautiful. Some one the world has found, and it is the world's belief. But on the side of the character, the foundation, or the right life, because it enlarges so much in the direction of the right life, or the wealth the owner the most of

INHERENT EVIL IN GAMBLING.

Fundamental Error Pointed Out by English Philosopher.

Listen to a conversation about gambling; and, where reprobation is expressed, note the grounds of the reprobation. That it tends toward the ruin of the gambler; that it risks the welfare of family and friends; that it alienates from business, and leads into bad company—these and such as these, are the reasons given for condemning the practice. Rarely is there any denunciation of the fundamental evil. Rarely is gambling condemned by reasons it is a kind of action by which pleasure is obtained in the part of pain to another. The abnormal sentiment or gratification of the person which produces gambling is tempting, but, that there has been yet birth equivalent effort a said which, in some way, furthers the general good, and begins accordingly, that those from whom the money is won receive, or, directly or indirectly, involve architecture. But to gamblers the opposite happens. Beside, personal does not make effects set forth, and the happiness of the winner involves misery of the loser. This kind of action is therefore essentially antisocial—wants the sympathies, cultivates a hard egoism, and so produces a general deterioration of character and conduct.—Herbert Spencer

TORNADO RUINS TOWN

DEALS DEATH AND DESTRUCTION IN MERIDIAN, MISS.

Twenty-one White Persons and Over 100 Negroes Are Killed—Five Miles in Add to Loss, Which Will Reach at Least $1,500,000.

A destructive tornado visited Meridian, Miss., at 6:30 Friday evening, killing twenty-one white persons and over 100 colored people and damaging property to the extent of $1,500,000.

There were also scores seriously injured by being caught in wreckage of houses. The tornado made the city on the southwest and traveled to the northeast and trained in two mile path, which many negroes were killed and injured, a whole industrial district being wiped out.

Two large wholesale stores, one handle ware, the principal hotel, the electric lighting plant and all the smaller property between the Mobile & Ohio Railroad depot and the business part of the city were badly damaged. Twenty-one men were caught in a restaurant and several were killed. Two stores of the M. & O. A building were wrecked and other buildings suffered to the same extent.

Three Weeks Work Fire.

The negro tenement district to the north of the city was demolished and the debris caught fire, threatening a new danger for the fire department with the hard pressed men, and women this after a hard fight. They were assisted in the torrential rain following the tornado by the business men of the city who about one foot of water in the streets.

The Union and Queen and Crescent depots were among the buildings unroofed and it is reported that a dozen persons were killed in the vicinity of the depots.

D. E. Benoit, Claud Williams and Frank Woodruff, employed in the Meyer Neville Company were buried in the debris when that building went down. Benoit escaped but the other men were caught beneath the ruins.

Phone Way Through City.

The telephone disappointed in a heavy rainstorm struck Meridian shortly after dark. The phone center was one of the southern portion of the city and particularly heavy along Front street. One of the principal business streets at the town. Nearly every house on Front street is reported to have been demolished.

The Armory parking plant was left standing and the roof of this was only slightly damaged.

The city was crippled for many days yesterday, the electric lighting plant having been put out of business. The engine did secure enough of other machinery to run it at a reduced capacity. Many residences were damaged.

The Western Union Telegraph company reported to the Postal Telegraph company, who suffered great damage.

The wires from Meridian to St. Louis, Birmingham, Memphis and other points.

Whole Squares Demolished.

The tornado passed over in either side of the city and practically wiped out whole squares were demolished. A conservative estimate places the number of houses blown down at between twenty and forty. Among the business houses the Meyer & Lyon Hardware Company, Tom Lyle & Co., wholesale dry goods and grocers, Jack Moore, wholesale dry goods and grocers, The New Orleans & Northeastern Railroad yards and shops, depot and other buildings were destroyed.

The Mobile & Ohio depot is safe as well as the Southern hotel, the Grand Avenue hotel was considerably damaged. From the time the tornado jumped to the east end, where a number of residences were blown down.

Ohio's Bridge Court Probe.

Attorney General Ellis of Ohio has made his preliminary inquiry into the charges of graft in the bridge business and is satisfied that there is ample ground for an investigation. He says he has not taken any action yet. Several of the men who have been mentioned in the inquiry have been taking over Saturday and Sunday in the hope of being called to the stand. He says he has evidence showing that the bridge trust has made profits amounting to from 1000 to 1500 per cent on the cost of the bridges they have built, showing a big margin of profit. He says he has evidence that the bridge trust paid to the company, as a bribe, one with him, a director named Wherry and William H. Ely, of Cincinnati, a personal staff.

Gen. Schofield Passes Away.

Lieut. Gen. John M. Schofield is dead, former head of the army, died at Washington. He. He was attended by evident hemorrhage. His wife and son, Major Schofield, and his daughter-in-law, Wherry and William H. Ely, of Cincinnati, a personal staff.

Armours Suffer Loss by Fire.

Fire caused by the explosion of a gas stove destroyed the storage and distribution plant of Armour & Co. at Junction and Norris streets, Philadelphia. The loss is estimated at $150,000. The building was filled with dressed meats and provisions.

Sea Takes Thirty Lives.

Thirty men were drowned by the wreck of the steamer Hargrove and Norgen of the Norwegian coasting steamer. The wireless cable broke during a hurricane and she was blown against and sank. Only three of the crew were saved.

GEN. J. M. SCHOFIELD DEAD.

Former Head of Army Succumbs at St. Augustine, Fla.

Lieutenant General John M. Scofield, U. S. A. retired, former head of the army, died at St. Augustine, Fla., Sunday night. He was attacked Sunday morning with cerebral hemorrhage. His wife and young daughter were with him.

He was born in New York seventy-four years ago. His father, a clergyman, was born in Illinois when his son was 12 years old, and John went to West Point as a cadet from Freeport, Ill. He graduated from West Point in 1853, standing seventh in the class, which included among its members generals McPherson, Sheridan, Sill, Terrill, R. O. Tyler, and the Confederate Hood.

When the war broke out he was serving as professor of physics at Washington University, St. Louis, after being seven years a captain in the Second Regiment Missouri Volunteers, he entered the volunteer service of Missouri, and in November, 1861, he was appointed brigadier general of volunteers. For several months in 1862 he commanded the district of the Missouri.

In the early part of the next year he organized and commanded the army of the Frontier, which was later fighting in Missouri and Arkansas. He went back again in 1863 to the command of the Department of the Missouri, which he retained until late in 1864.

GEN. J. M. SCHOFIELD.

that date he was assigned of the regiment of General Grant to the command of the department and army of the ohio, forming the left wing of Gen. Sherman's army on Georgia. Subsequently he commanded the Twenty-fourth Corps in the battle of Nashville, and for his services in the campaign General Schofield received the thanks of General Jehnson's army.

Lieut. Gen. Schofield's last active service he was Secretary of War from May, 1868, to March, 1869, and in taking command of the lieutenancy of the Military Division of the Pacific he resigned the field office for one year, with headquarters at St. Louis, where he was transferred to the command of the Department of the Missouri, with headquarters at San Francisco, and in the fall of 1888 he succeeded Sheridan, in command of the lieutenant of the Pacific Division to relieve General Sheridan, in command of the lieutenant of the Pacific Division.

He was made lieutenant general last April, the rank being created for him.

SEA SWEEPS PACIFIC ISLANDS.

Thousands Die Amid Devastation by Hurricane and Monster Waves.

Advices received by the steamer the Galveston flood has brought the Society Island, Samoan Islands, the Tonga Islands, which have been swept by a hurricane of awful violence and unprecedented tidal wave. The violent storm was the worst in the memory of the oldest inhabitants. The damage that may reach $1,000,000. Papeete, the capital of the Island of Tahiti, has been submerged, and its principal buildings crushed like cardboard, and the accumulation of the tidal wave swept away. Some of the islands are said to be completely submerged and thousands of persons have been made homeless, and calls for relief have been sent out by the consuls representing the governments.

Details of the storm were brought to San Francisco by the steamer Marmora, though the cause left Papeete before the full extent of the catastrophe was known had been ascertained. The Marmora arrived for Auckland Sunday, on Feb. 5, she said, reckoning a velocity of more than 100 miles an hour, coming in from the direction of Samoa, leaving the island of Tahiti, she left behind her a wreck. The storm came up in the night and continued for two days and above the point to the company, as the ship was approaching the island, many commissioners knew what was going on and prepared for the worst. The Legislature has been asked to amend the law so as to compel the capitals to reply without self-incrimination.

Marconi Wins Patent Case.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has decided that the Marconi patent granting as the originator of wireless telegraphy, is valid, and is not against the De Forest company. The Marconi company, which is a British concern, brought the suit against the wireless company, which is a British concern, to enjoin the De Forest company from selling its apparatus in the Hertzian wave.

A STRONG PLEA

National Master Hetherington Wants and Means Committee

A strong plea for distributing labor was made in National Master Hetherington of Washington's address. Says our country has grown so rapidly, the home manufacture of manufactures and the employment of farmers at home, who are gathering in large numbers, should be encouraged. The protective tariff is the only means of securing this. Our farmers are the most independent class of people, and should be encouraged. I am a pet among the guards and the upper and cap prisoners and I can do anything I like, and I forge like a gaol bird! I forge well, don't I? Why, I forged Hunt, and he was considered very clever indeed. Why, what's the matter, Maurice?"

He had not seen her smile from such dreary, sad grave to the window, gazing across the sloping garden at the bay below, shooting in the sod evening light. The sunbeams which had brought the witnesses from Port Arthur lay on the abutment and touched the top bar of the flattened gaol to the dull evening brown. The sentinel on the wall ceased to wager bets for, as the sun fell in the bay, he could see the shapes of sharks and turnout coaches again. Some sudden desperate thought was in the girl's face. "Suppose I had not done all you think would and not been a convict?"

Her eyes raised to his face with such a strange intensity as the moth who had so flown into the flame felt his heart leap for joy.

"Why, a gentleman, I fancy, sir, suppose I should not do this, sir, or this, sir, or this, sir, or

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Dr. H. T. Gaskins, of Petoskey, the oldest practitioner in Northern Michigan, died last week of heart disease.

Samuel Hess, of Hess Jordan, agents for the Everett & Clark Co., has to accept of a better treatment upon their arrival at Manistee, which they definitely state that the proposed steel warehouse there will be built.

"Uncle" Dan Whipple, the oldest man in Northern Michigan, probably the oldest man in the state, and the most active man for his years in the country, quietly celebrated his one hundred-and-sixth birthday on Thursday, a few friends calling in the afternoon.

A logging train of empty cars on the Klondike branch of the Boyne Mountain railroad, was derailed one night last week, it was going on the track. Fortunately the crew escaped without a scratch in the engineer in charge. The original intention in getting down the broken car, which it is supposed caused the wreck. The track was torn up for half a mile. The ties were scattered broadcast over the right of way and some of them thrown clear from before they stopped.

The Ann Arbor railroad has issued a contract with the Anderson Supply building Company, to build a new road carry to be known as "Ann Arbor No. 2." It will, in a general way, be a counterpart of No. 1, the only difference being that it will have more accommodations for passengers, and will be equipped with a large expansion engine. This will give the new road much stronger motive power than any now in use by the railroad company. "Ann Arbor No. 2" will be launched about the middle of August, and will be ready for duty by November 1. The new road will operate between Frankfort and Manistique and with No. 1 will take care of the business between these two ports and between Frankfort and Manistique. At present No. 2 makes afternoon trips between Frankfort, Benzonia and Frankfort, and Manistique but if the present increase in the cross-lake business of the road is maintained there will be a daily trip between Frankfort and Manistique.

"My stands are all gone the sign he had, "and I'm taking this good-bye to you boys and girls. I'm sorry that I have not this little sign a little sooner."

Then the place immediately was worse of chaos. His voice had not advertised the fact that he was about when an enterprising lad, a gray haired lad, who looked as old as the oldest exhibitor, in a gray hat, and the twelve's pocket not free of the business accumulated an outline of the stands, and hurt the last advertising and hurt the last advertisement. We all laughed. I bet, laughed and the lad, red, but the laugh's the joke is on the joker.

"Let me see, I have received so many kinds of stands that I don't remember. Oh, yes, I remember, I had a stand where you can hammer a man a good, hard, hard, and ring a bell, and the twelve's pocket not free of the business accumulated an outline of the stands,

Band of Moro Outlaws Exterminated by U. S. Troops.

BATTLE LASTS 2 DAYS

Fifteen Enlisted Men and Three of Constabulary Are Dead.

Fierce Fight Takes Place on the Isle of Jolo—Americans Lift Their Cannon 350 Feet, Some Cabanas and Bamboo Stockades Form the Fortress—All the Defenders of the Stronghold Are Killed—Fifteen Men Soldiers Wounded.

An important action between Moro outlaws and loyalty Moros took place near Jolo, Philippines, which was reported by Major John Pershing, commanding the Jolo district, to Brigadier General Kobbe, commanding the division of the Philippines, and received at Manila the night of the 8th inst. It was a fierce battle, lasting two days, and resulted in the killing of 600 of the outlaws, with a loss of 15 men killed and 15 wounded. The engagement opened during the afternoon of May 5, and lasted in the morning of May 6.

Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Phillips, Twenty-ninth Infantry, with a force of 400 men, left Camp Vicars, Jolo, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of May 5 and marched in the direction of Bud Talipao, the stronghold of the Moros, which was found to be a very strong position. The Moros had built a fortification of bamboo and cabanas, with a bamboo stockade in front, and had cleared the jungle for a distance of 350 yards in front of the stockade. The Moros had a large force in the fortification, and had prepared for a long siege. The Moros had a number of guns, and had dug a trench from the stockade to a spring, so that they could get water without exposing themselves to the fire of the attacking force. The Moros had also cut down a large tree so that it would fall across the approach to the stockade, and had placed a large number of bolos and other weapons in the tree, so that it would be difficult for the attacking force to cut the tree away. The Moros had also placed a large number of bolos in the ground in the approach to the stockade, so that it would be difficult for the attacking force to advance in the dark without being cut by the bolos. The Moros had also placed a large number of bolos in the branches of the trees in the approach to the stockade, so that if the attacking force should climb the trees they would be

LUMBERMAN PROVED RIGHT TO INSCRIPTION ON MONUMENT.

Youngster Wouldn't Engage In Personal Combat, but He Had Nerve Enough to Face the King of Terror Without a Tremor.

It was a man from the west who was talking, says the New York Press. "Twenty years ago," he said to a group around the sidetable beside Dick, "I was out in the far west, fifty miles from anywhere, over mountains such that water in the mine in fall looking after some timber property for a friend of mine. It was a man's life to me and so interesting that I stuckered up over to the camp and stayed six hours for all a month. For a month of that time I lived on a bluff hung around a mountain in the very touch of the great woods. The most striking there were out of the dispute drop in gold of silver and the usual grams, but they had the nerve of heroes and their hand a sweep.

"Among them was a young fellow who was more rich pitch in his face than any other because he had refused to fight a man who had insulted him a fool. He had been down for his weakness, but then in him was some remnant of the man that he achieve the man who had spoke ment to they engraved it. The town of Dick, which was a small town, shortly after the incident, was made up of men who had come out there to know him quite well and found him out more and through no more than the way he did not know it out with the man who had insulted him. He knew nothing of the incident in which he was concerned, but he came to know it, and he came to know the man who had insulted him. He was a man of nerve, and he was no coward, and he was a man that contained beyond any question of doubt.

One afternoon while sitting alone on the porch of his cabin, Dick, the fellow—John Chadwick, was his name—was approached by a man he was acquainted and felt a an amount and was off leave the tower and one day he was sitting on the porch. He had thrown his arm out in falling and the sun had caught it.

The boots or shoes man wearing them, the shoes were paralyzed. In the Dick's was not and not found. The shoes matched from the second glove. He said it was plain that he would die in short order, and he was thinking over how and when he would. The man gathered that why he Dick's to take the man and give Chadwick a chance to live was why he Dick realized that Chadwick was a coward. The coward was the man and he was and he had up with his back against a log in the wood. He was a massive man of his age, and he knew what they meant. Chadwick was a man of his age, and he knew what they meant. He was the man to take the man to the camp. He was a man of a country where life was worth more than a dollar. Subjectively he measured himself away from those who were trying to shake the dust and shadow of the river. Objectively he was a man in the river. Objectively he was a man in the river.

KIDNAPED BOY BREAKS AWAY

Bankers's Son, Held for $20,000 Ransom, Escapes and Returns Home.

Vincent Bonsall, 11 years old, who was kidnaped a few days ago and held for a $20,000 ransom, has returned home safe from New York. He had run out from his captors, he said by breaking out of a house where a saloon is Fifty-ninth street. The boy says he was enticed in similar fashion by two Italians who sidled him up to him and spoke in Italian. Taken in the upstairs room, he was bound and a handkerchief placed over his mouth. There now starting black marks then entered the room and a conference ensued he said he remembered him in which a letter is taken to his father demanding a ransom. After which he was released.

FIFTH OF GLOBE IS BRITISH.

Census Gives Area as 11,908,378 and Population as 400,000,000.

The result of the first organized census of the British empire has been issued in a Blue Book. It shows that the empire consists of an aggregate area of 11,908,378 square miles, or more than one-fifth the entire land area of the world. The population is about 400,000,000, or about 1 to the square mile. The population is made up roughly as follows: Asiatic, 315,000,000; African, 45,000,000; European, 45,000,000; Australasian, 4,000,000; North American, 7,000,000; Polynesian, 2,000,000. The most populous of the four Dominions in Canada. The highest proportion of married persons is in Australia, the lowest in Canada, the highest number of the dead and aged in the Dominion of Canada, the highest number of children in Australia. Increasing in India despite disease and pestilence, the population in Canada and Australia increases, perhaps mainly by immigration. The population in Ireland is stationary, the population in Scotland is increasing, in England and Wales it is increasing at the rate of 1 in the full fifty years of the census. The population of the Jews is increasing and the Jews are increasing in England.

DEAD LIE IN HEAPS.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION IN FRANCE KILLS 1,000.

Disaster Shocks a Nation—Mine Inspector Becomes a Blazing Furnace—Flame Bars Vent and Gallantry Cave in on Bodies.

The list of victims of the mine disaster in the Lorrieres district of the Pas-de-Calais, France, numbers 1100, and the whole region stands stupified at the tragedy, which has brought a score to every village, relatives and children. The last secret some time prior to France entered in 1885, when 262 persons were killed and 50 injured but that and all others sank into insignificance before Courrieres.

After fifteen hours of perilous effort, all attempt to rescue the men entombed in the burning coal mine at Courrieres, near Calais, was abandoned.

The explosion occurred at 7 o'clock in the morning when after 1,200 men had descended into the mine to begin their day's work. Twenty-two thousand persons crowded around the mouths of the shafts, helpless to aid. The entombed miners or aroused to bring out their bodies. The whole country of the mine was a roaring furnace of flames for miles. All the wooden shoring burns away, and it was announced that the galleries, which extended the only possible place of safety for the imprisoned men, had fallen in.

M. Ernest Paul has been profoundly shocked by the disaster, of the mine by which is said to be the greatest in the mining district of France. Chief Fallieres sent his secretaries to inquire about the situation and Premier Gautier and Minister of the Interior Dubief on a special train to the scene of the disaster.

It was learned that there had been a fire in one of the pits, the Fosse Dahomey, which spread to the main shaft, where it was thought that the fire was confined. Then the workmen were gassed to extinction all day and late in the night.

Director Pinchon, Assistant of Mines Lecoq, Inspector Lemaire and Engineer Lefebvre, who descended into the mine to ascertain the cause of the explosion, were overcome by the gas and perished in the flames. Their bodies were not found for hours, when they were found they were burned to a cinder. Their bodies were taken to the pithead in a blazing furnace. Flames burst from the mouth and nostrils of the victims. Their bodies were burned to a cinder.

Fifteen hours after the explosion the flames were still burning and the fire had spread to the main shaft, which was the only means of egress for the miners.

Rescuers who had descended into the mine were forced back by the flames. Two hundred persons were killed in the mine, 300 persons were killed and 50 injured but that and all others sink into insignificance before Courrieres.

SPRINGFIELD AGAIN QUIET.

Ohio City Has Recovered from Its Race Lynchin' Negroes.

Springfield, Ohio, is once more quiet. The negro-baiting mobs which raged through the streets during the days of last week have ceased and threatening to take flames that seemed sure to the province of the militia. Save for the blackened ruins of several buildings in the negro quarter, there is not a general indication of the raging fever which polluted through the veins of the city, terminating disaster beyond reckoning. The law-abiding citizens, business men and men, who have lived in the city for years, are at a loss to find a reason for the inexplicable outbreak, which there and mobs outlawed. Into the hospital, which was then closed, in behalf of the fair name of the city that the mob sent to the dark, modest of boys and irresponsible young men.

A year ago a negro named Hayes, who shot and killed a policeman, was taken out of a jail and lynched. A week after Hayes and attacked the negro quarter, setting fire to several dwellings. The militia were called upon at the time, and for a week Springfield was under a martial law. Not a lynching, though there never would be a repetition of those disgraceful scenes for the best citizens, disapproved of the taking of human life.

Two hundred soldiers of last week were caused by the shooting of a white boy by a negro, who was in the act of his life sentence. Hayes had and Dayton for safety. Also carnage was the signal for a reign of terror, the mayor of the city and his several days and order was restored. Not a lynching, though negro lynchings, despite the protests of the militia.

The immediate killing of a white man by a negro in a northern city would not seem to be a sufficient cause for such determined mob violence, but it must be remembered that Springfield has a few in one of the pits, the Fosse Dahomey, which spread to the main shaft, where it was thought that the fire was confined. Then the workmen were gassed to extinction all day and late in the night.

PROSPERITY FOR ALL

EXTRAORDINARY DEVELOPMENT OF NATIONAL RESOURCES.

Diversification of Industries and Occupation Has Brought About a Vast Production, Which Finds a Sure Market Because of Wise Legislation.

It will be admitted that we are blessed with an abundance of natural resources such as no other country possesses. But natural resources are of no value to us unless labor is employed. Our ore and coal are useless lying in the ground. Further, labor produces those resources which are of absolutely no value until manufactured into articles of use and adornment. Prosperity depends upon the proper balance between the farmer, without a purchaser, anxious for his surplus, simply lives and toils as hard as possible. We would become an idle, impoverished people. This condition is owing to the pursuit of overdrawn. We have had the actual experience.

But how different when we protect our labor and industries and so graduate all our own wants! We have an almost endless demand for our manufactures, and consequently a ready market for what we produce in exchange for what we need. Let us illustrate. Suppose we did not manufacture our own cotton goods, but sent our raw cotton to Europe to be made into goods, and then had to buy it back again. We would be at the mercy of the manufacturer, and be compelled to accept what he chose to sell us. But we do not. We have our own factories, and can pick and choose. We can buy the best, and at the lowest price, because we have a market for our cotton. The same reasoning applies to all other products of our farms, mines, forests, and factories. We have a home market for them. We are independent of the world. We have created a country as self-sustaining and independent as any country on earth. We have built a nation from the raw material, and have made the wilderness to blossom as the rose. We have done this by diversifying our industries, and by protecting our home market from the ruinous competition of the pauper labor of other countries. We have created a home market for our farmers, miners, lumbermen, manufacturers, and mechanics. We have made a home market for the farmer's wheat, corn, potatoes, and other products of the farm. We have made a home market for the miner's coal, iron, silver, gold, lead, copper, and other products of the mine. We have made a home market for the lumberman's pine, lath, shingles, and other products of the forest. We have made a home market for the manufacturer of cotton, woolen, iron, steel, glass, paper, leather, and other products of the factory. We have made a home market for the mechanic who makes into articles of use the products of the farm, mine, forest, and factory. We have made a home market for the merchant who distributes the products of the farm, mine, forest, and factory among the consumers. We have made a home market for the professional man who ministers to the intellectual, moral, and sanitary needs of all the people engaged in the various occupations named. We have made a home market for the preacher who ministers to the spiritual needs of all the people who are employed with the farm, mine, forest, and factory.

Look at home, and see what we have accomplished and developed our national resources because of home consumption of home products. Let us be consistent. We formerly sent our raw cotton to Europe to be manufactured, practically all of which came back to us as finished goods. Suppose we had continued to pursue that policy, and had made the raw cotton into goods, and then had sent the goods back to Europe to be washed and bleached, and then had sent the goods back to us to be dyed and printed, and then had sent the goods back to us to be made into dresses, would we not have paid the cost of transportation for our goods, and would we not have paid for the labor of the men who made the goods? Yes, we would, if we had continued to pursue the policy of purchasing goods from foreign countries. We would have lost a home market for our cotton, and would have lost the profits of the manufacture, and would have lost the profits of the transportation of our goods, and would have lost the profits of the labor of our people in the manufacture of our cotton into goods. Instead of this, we have built up a home market for our cotton, and have made the profits of the manufacture, and have made the profits of the transportation of our goods, and have made the profits of the labor of our people in the manufacture of our cotton into goods. We have made the profits of the labor of our people in the manufacture of our cotton into goods, and have made the profits of the transportation of our goods, and have made the profits of the manufacture of our cotton into goods, and have made the profits of the labor of our people in the manufacture of our cotton into goods, and have made the profits of the labor of our people in the manufacture of our cotton into goods, and have made the profits of the labor of our people in

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued.)

Roused in the morning and stretching out his arms to the warm sunshine, Rufus Dawes opened his throbbing eyelids upon a strange scene. A small fire had burned low, and a black swagman, rolling off the bed and rose in his blankets, was blowing the ashes into life on his wooden dwelling-place, and he remembered when last passed. With which he yawned, and scratched his sunburnt head, and contented his gummed eyes. The man was a little fellow, with long grizzly beard—like Rufus Dawes himself—and a pair of black eyes, which twinkled and danced in the sunshine. He was hoarse, and his speech was in a strange tongue, which he muttered when he had coughed long and painfully. The degraded Rufus Dawes, who had forgotten his own language, and learned his native tongue from the convicts, recognized the speech of the Scotch Highlands, and listened like one who awakes into a dream. Presently the man, having lit his pipe, and coughed himself quite exhausted, turned round on his knees, and looked at his companion. Rufus Dawes, who had been watching him through his lashes, feigned to be asleep in his blankets, and waited to see what this man meant. He had seen enough of the world to know that there was no being alive in Sydney who would do a man a good turn. The convicts hated one another, and were ready to betray on the slightest hope of reward. The stranger was a little man, very old, and very feeble, to judge from his cough and his shaking limbs. He had a long, thin face, with a sharp nose, and a pair of black eyes, which twinkled and danced in the sunshine. He was unshaven and unshorn, and his long, grizzled hair was matted and knotted with the burrs of the bush. He had a pipe in his mouth, which he smoked with a tobacco of his own growing, and his clothes were patched with kangaroo skin. He coughed as he smoked, and groaned as he coughed, and groaned when he ceased coughing. Rufus Dawes watched him from his lair with a curious interest. He was a type of a class of which he had heard much in his wanderings—the class of the old, the feeble, the harmless, who, by some means or other, had escaped the clutch of the law, and had lived out their lives in the bush. He had heard of such men, who had lived for years among the aborigines, who had married black women, who had children who could hardly speak their mother's tongue. He had heard of such men, who had lived for years in the bush, who had never seen a town, who had never heard the roar of a city, who had never looked upon a ship. He had heard of such men, who had lived so long in the bush that they had become as shy as the kangaroo, as cunning as the opossum, as much at home as the native dog. He had heard of such men, who had lived so long in the bush that they had become half savage, half brutish, and who, when they came into towns, stared at the people like bewildered children. He had heard of such men, who had lived so long in the bush that they had forgotten their own language, and could only babble in the speech of the savages with whom they had herded. Such a man, he had heard, was Jack Jeffries, the bushranger, who had escaped from a party of mounted police by the aid of his native allies, who had been hunted like a wild beast for his life, who had been shot at, speared, and boomeranged, but who had escaped to the Port Phillip District, where he was living like a king among his black allies, when a stray bullet from a different gun from that which had killed his native king had killed him.

Rufus Dawes had heard of this man when he was a boy, and had dreamed of him when he was a convict. He had dreamed of him when he was a convict in irons, when he was a convict at large, when he was a convict in the bush. He had dreamed of him when he was a convict in the city, when he was a convict on the seas. He had dreamed of him when he was a free man, and had sought him in the Port Phillip District, and had lost his track at Sydney. NINE DIE IN A WRECK.

TRAIN RUNS INTO WASHOUT AND TURNS OVER.

Work of Rescue is Delayed by Flood, Missing Bridge and Snowstorm—Three Dead Brakemen to Cleveland Star Innocent Bill Man.

An accommodation train on the Chicago and Northwestern railway's new branch in the Sioux City district ran into a washout on the prairie connecting with west of Chapin. Nine persons were killed and a dozen injured. Most of the killed were in a caboose and water-tank car. The caboose left the road and is heavy steel tank car back of it plunged into the caboose and crushed it. The injured, including the people in the caboose, are in Sioux City hospitals. Almost the entire train was made up of coaches and was filled with people. The train was bound from Sioux City to the county fair at Spencer, and was filled with people going to the fair. Among the dead are three brakemen, who were in the caboose, and a Sioux City man who was on his way to Cleveland to see his mother, who is said to be very ill. The injured are all from Sioux City, and the list of dead is not known to be complete, as the wreck is in a deserted part of the country and the wires are down. The train was made up of coaches, and was filled with people going to the fair.

- Prison for Ohio Dynamiters.

Judge Sater, in Federal court, sentenced dynamiters of the Indianapolis Bridge company, Frank Ryan and Wesley Gaston, to two years in the penitentiary at Michigan City. Ryan was the man who placed the dynamite under the bridge, and Gaston was the man who lighted the fuse. Ryan's sentence is to run from the expiration of Gaston's sentence, which is for one year.

- Steamer Burns at Dock.

The steamer Dunham, of the Dunham line, caught fire at her dock at Newport, R. I., the entire roof of the upper deck being burned before the burning and damaged portions could be cut away and the flames extinguished. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

- Wife Sues Man Will Wed.

Charles Hamilton, a name famous in Pittsburgh, Pa., who is wanted by a dozen divorced women, some of whom he married, is sued for divorce by his wife, who charges cruelty. Mrs. Hamilton, who is a sister of Mrs. Harry Thaw, stated that her husband had married her under false pretenses, and that he had married another woman before he married her, and that he married another woman after he married her.

- Children in Theater Panic.

Several hundred children were injured in a panic in a theater in Long Branch, N. J., which the theater owner, Joe Fox, blamed it on a boy who had been ejected from the theater for throwing a stink bomb. Fox said the boy had come back and started the panic, which almost ended in a tragedy. The theater was packed with children, most of whom were there to see a moving picture show of the life of Christ.

- Loss Lives in Burning Car.

F. M. Mackey, of Mount St. Vincent, with eight horses and a car, were reported to have been in a freight car at Perry, N. H. The men were coming from Ayrshire, Iowa. The horses were all dead, and the men unable to get the door open.

- Three Against Chauffeur.

In Pinckney Township, Ind., an Italian who had run over and killed a little girl while driving a truck, was fired at twice by a school boy, who had been warned by his father that the Italians are too numerous to be safe.

- Suicide in Sawyer Work.

Mrs. S. Sawyer, accompanied by her sister Mrs. Sawyer, went to Portland, Ore., to take up the work of sister-of-charity in compliance with the last wishes of her husband, Samuel H. Sawyer, who died at his home, Mount Hood, while the Chapin campaign. Miss Anthony will go to Portland.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BANQUET.

Dr. W. P. Merrill Says Many of the Hymns Are Dirges.

That the hymns commonly used in Protestant Sunday schools are trivial, prosaic and beautiful, designed to the spirits of the Rev. William P. Merrill, pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church of Chicago, expressed in an address at the Protestant Sunday School Banquet held in the Second Presbyterian church. Dr. Merrill spoke on "Music in the Sunday School." "The results with our church and Sunday school music," he said, "is that it is looked upon as a bastard service the most which has been in his time. We don't have any thought for music during the service after we get into the pews. We don't have any idea of music, which we can in fact do if we practice it. We don't have any idea of music. We are content to sing a chorus so bad that God hates the sound of it. We don't have the courage of Christian to which we belong. We don't have any thought of music in our Christian life Deliberate Attempt to Mislead Farmers Is Shown Up by Congressman McCleary—Present Tariff Policy a Good One to Stick To.

In his speech at the Lincoln convention dinner of the Republicans at the city of New York, on Monday evening, Feb. 12, 1896, Congressman James T. McCleary of Minnesota said:

"The Democratic revenue law reduced the duties on foreign goods and put them on the same footing with the products of domestic manufacture, but it contained provisions for taxes. There is no reciprocity about that, no an equivalent for the same taxes, no the protection of home industries, no special

The experienced convict disciplinarian did not rate the ability of Jem Hoy highly enough. He was amazed to discover and learn his existence of life harassed by bad treatment upon the aspiring and bad language all the powers of his wits and intelligence were bent to the consideration of the best method of achieving his purpose. The pretended party had a confederate (but of his best friend) in Sergeant Major Mouldy, and was that worthy accomplice's duty to provide a strange and lost traveler. He gave the man, as well as a description, of a tall, black-bearded, big-limbed, strong man whom he had met the evening before, who was transported for a forgery, using the dial and counterfeit. Pretty Dick, who was a young professional coining gull and decoyer, on an income, had learned to his cost at Long and had lifted himself as fairly—and in the same way—as he was able in the post system. Mouldy was to be the man's friend, and to bind blonds for him. Hitherto he had been a sergeant and had not had to bind on the marks.

Two men were to be his victims. One, a young man, was coming down from Van Diemen's Land, and was to be met at the Sydney Wharf. The other was a country man, who was to be met at Parramatta. Jem was to be a gentleman, and was to have a fine suit made and a watch, so as to remain Anna Maria ignorance of his mission. Mouldy was to be a Sydney Cockney pickpocket. He was to be well dressed, and was to be made to look as well as possible. He was to be a sly, knowing, cheerful, good-natured rascal, and was to be well dressed. He was to be

An Ordinance Regulating the Keeping of Dogs Within the City of Charlevoix and Providing for Licensing and Taxing Dogs.

The City of Charlevoix Ordains:

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to keep within the limits of the City of Charlevoix any dog without a license therefor.

SECTION 2. No person shall make application for a license for a dog until such dog shall have been assessed a tax for the current year, and shall have paid the tax so assessed.

SECTION 3. Any person shall make application for a license for a dog by filing with the City Clerk a written application therefor, which application shall be in substantial form as follows:

I, ... hereby make application for a license for a dog owned by me, and described as follows: Name, ... Color, ... Sex, ... Breed, ... Age, ... Where dog was assessed, ... I hereby agree to pay the tax assessed against said dog, and to be bound by the ordinances of the City of Charlevoix relating to the licensing and taxing of dogs.

SECTION 4. Upon filing such application with the City Clerk, and upon the payment of the tax assessed against such dog, the City Clerk shall issue to such applicant a license for such dog, which license shall be in substantial form as follows:

License No. .....
City of Charlevoix, Michigan, ...
This is to certify that ..... has paid the City Clerk of the City of Charlevoix the sum of ..... Dollars, for a license for a dog described as follows: Name, ... Color, ... Sex, ... Breed, ... Age, ... Where dog was assessed, ... This license is issued subject to the provisions of Ordinance No. ..... of the City of Charlevoix, and expires on the 1st day of May, 1906.
..... City Clerk.

SECTION 5. No person shall keep any dog within the limits of the City of Charlevoix without a license therefor, and any person violating this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Five Dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding ten days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

SECTION 6. Any person who shall make a false statement in any application for a license for a dog, or who shall violate any other provision of this ordinance, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Five Dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding ten days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

SECTION 7. No license shall be issued for any dog which is a nuisance to the neighborhood in which such dog is kept, or which is in the habit of barking at passers-by, or chasing passers-by or passing vehicles, or which is a dangerous dog to be at large.

SECTION 8. Upon the application for a license for a female dog, the City Clerk shall require the applicant to produce a certificate from a veterinary surgeon that such dog is not in whelp, and no license for a female dog shall be issued without such certificate.

SECTION 9. No license shall be issued for any dog under the age of six months.

SECTION 10. No license shall be issued for any dog which has been assessed a tax for the current year, and which has been killed or has died from any cause, or has been removed from the City of Charlevoix.

SECTION 11. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its publication.

The Bankrupt's Hymn.

Tune: "I'm a Pilgrim" by the name of Smith.

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in kindness kind;
The tie that binds our purses
Is much more to the mind.

A few years ago a small lad down in the Charlevoix school attempted to read the following of prayer in the presence of company, with the result that he read as follows: "Lord, bless the Charlevoix school, and make them remember that we are all miserable sinners, and make them remember we are people in Charlevoix. Now we ask a blessing on this food, and on the hands that prepared it, and make us thankful for what we are about to receive, for we deserve it. Amen."

Quoted to a Purpose.

NEW IMMIGRATION RECORD SET IN NEW YORK.

During Last Three Months of 1905 183,788 Persons Came at That Port from Foreign-ports in Four Net Companies Reckoned

During the last three months of 1905 there arrived at the port of New York, according to the official figures, 183,788 persons, an average of more than 2,000 a day for every day of the year. The number of immigrants for the period was 183,788, of whom 130,000 were aliens, and the balance returning citizens. The immigration for the three months was the largest in any three consecutive months in the history of the port, and the number of aliens was the largest for any three months of any port in any country. The previous record was made in the three months ending with June, 1903, when 127,000 immigrants came to this port, of whom 100,000 were aliens.

The immigration for the three months ended with December was 53,000 greater than that for the three months ending with June, 1903, and 30,000 greater than that for the three months ending with June, 1905. TARIFF SCARE ENDED

THERE IS TO BE NO RUMPUS WITH GERMANY.

By Firmly Maintaining Its Position the United States Has Induced Germany to Recede from Her Threat of Hostile Tariff Discrimination.

The end of the German tariff scare is definitely and officially announced as follows:

Berlin, Feb. 15.—Prince von Bülow, the Imperial Chancellor, today took to the Reichstag a bill for the abrogation by the United States of the tariffs given by Germany under reciprocal treaties to certain European States. The whole position officially that it is the opinion of the Government that the Bundesrath shall grant to the United States the rights enjoyed in the conventions signed by Germany with Russia, Austria-Hungary, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland and Roumania. Bulgaria, with which security a treaty has been arranged, has not yet ratified, is not mentioned in the bill.

The Chancellor has selected Count Posadowsky-Wehner—the Imperial Chancellor and Minister of Interior, to introduce the measure in the Reichstag. The Bundesrath, meeting at 1 o'clock today, ratified the action of the Chancellor. Ambassador Tower, who was informed of the action of the Bundesrath, immediately cabled the news to his Government. The entire Reichstag was in session when the news came, and it was received with great applause.

The American Embassador was present when the Chancellor made his formal announcement. Ever since the adoption of the Dingley tariff, which contained provisions for the imposition of maximum duties on German products, the Government has been considering what it should do in the matter of imposing retaliatory duties. The Dingley tariff was regarded by Germany as the result of a deliberate effort to shut out German products.

The American Embassador was from the very first authorized to give assurances that the Government was not actuated by any hostile feeling toward the United States, and that it was not its purpose to make any discrimination against American products

Robson Flucker's and Sigger Hi-[illegible] were the principal witnesses against the prisoner at Port Phillip when the convicts assigned had to stand their trial for the murder of Frank Crozier, travelling on the road between Geelong and Melbourne. It was a fine piece of work, the attempt to take two convicts, one of whom was a Chinaman, one deaf and dumb, and one a negro for and against the Queen's Advocate, and yet the Crown had enough evidence against them. They were tried, convicted, and hanged, and the Chinaman, the negro, and the deaf mute died, each of them, on the same day, and at the same hour, and yet, for all that, the Crown had not had enough to convict Frank Crozier, the man who was murdered, of the crime of being a convict at large. Frank Crozier was a convict, a ticket-of-leave man, who was working for Mr. Thomas Fenton, of Mount Macedon, when he was murdered. He was a good man, a kind man, a man who had never been in trouble, and who had never been in trouble since he had come out of the prison. He was a man who had served his time, and who was, in the eyes of the law, a free man. But he was a convict, and he was, in the eyes of the law, a convict at large, and, because he was a convict at large, he was murdered by a gang of men who had escaped from Sarah Island, and who had murdered him for the sake of his watch and his money. Mr. Fenton, who was a Justice of the Peace, had committed the prisoners for trial, and had ridden with the police to the station with them. The prisoners had been taken to the station, and had been lodged in the station lock-up, when Mr. Fenton, who had ridden on before, was shot through the back and robbed of his watch and his purse. The prisoners had not been out of the station yard, and had not been out of the station yard for two days before the murder was committed. The prisoners had been seen by a dozen people in the town of Kyneton, and had been identified by a dozen people as the men who had escaped from Sarah Island. —How many towns or cities in Michigan have an almost inexhaustible lime-stone quarry of its own almost within the city limits, and a stone crusher plant on the grounds? That is what Charlevoix has, and it is making good use of them. It means very much for the future of the city. It means that in a very few years Charlevoix will have the best streets of any town of its size in the state.

—Before any further action is taken on Charlevoix street improvement, we should stop and consider that some of the roads in Charlevoix township are in very bad condition. City streets are important, but more important still are the country roads. The farmers have good reason to grumble. We have not posted ourself as to just what the condition the city bears to Charlevoix township roads, but if there is no other way to do it, take up a subscription.

—The straits opened up completely last Friday, and fleets are passing both ways. The stubborn Three Sisters, which arrived late Thursday morning, was compelled to send the tug Martin ahead of her to Boyne to break her free loaded and went to Chicago Saturday afternoon.

—Effective April 15th the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. steamships Missouri and Illinois will leave Chicago Wednesdays and Saturdays at 7 o'clock p. m. Going South they will leave Charlevoix every Wednesday and Saturday. Hour of sailings announced later.

—We believe we have said something elsewhere in this issue about navigation being open. Well, here is some more. The steamer Cummings began her Boyne City trips to day, and the steamers Hunt and Gordon begun their East Jordan trips also. The steamship Missouri arrived again from Chicago Sunday night, and the steamships Fletcher passed up to East Jordan yesterday morning, taking out lumber for Chicago. Navigation is wide open.

—One of the beauties of Charlevoix present to a large degree, but in a greater degree prospective, is the street parks between the curb and the walk. All street improvements are planned with this in view, and the space on Clinton street and Park avenue already has some beauty spots which are growing more beautiful every year. One parked space adjoins the home of the home which its fronts. We hope to see the day when on every residence street in Charlevoix there will be a well kept park strip fronting every house.

—The Salvation Army is holding their annual week of Self Denial next week from April 22nd to April 29th, inclusive. Self Denial Week is a week set apart each year by the Salvation Army, during which they deny themselves certain kinds of food and along other lines to MAKE an easy and also raise a certain amount among friends. The amount raised is for home and foreign missionary work. Will you please help? The "target" or in other words the amount to be raised is seventy five dollars for this Corps.

—We have received the announcement of the marriage, in Grand Rapids, on the sixteenth, of Miss Annie Dryden Graves to Mr. Edward Gregory Smith. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Schuyler C. Graves, twenty years ago a Charlevoix practitioner. Annie Dryden Graves was born in Charlevoix, where, also, her mother died. Old residents of Charlevoix will remember the lovely young woman who came to Charlevoix as the bride of Dr. Graves, and whose life went out almost at the hour that she gave to the world the bride of today. The SENTINEL confesses to a weak sentiment for the lady, the rollicking, fair haired girl, and the bride.

—The range men is abroad in the land. Look out for them. There is no reason why our people should patronize these people. You are always the loser in the end. They are fluent talkers and they charge more for their goods than they can be bought for in the home market. Investigate at home before you permit these people to force you.

—Under auspices of the Interdenominational Series of "Charlevoix the Beautiful," Mrs. E. L. Carlisle, State Pres., of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will lecture next Wednesday evening April 25th at the M. E. Church upon one of the most important topics of good music will be introduced the day. You are all most earnestly invited to be present. Admission free. A music offering will be taken.

A Question Answered.

The Citizen has said, and will say it again, that we are perfectly willing to present both sides of every question. Now if The Sentinel will answer the other 16 questions published in our issue of March 29 we will see that it gets before the people in this vicinity. If Smith does not care to answer them all in one issue, we will take them one at a time. Here's one for next week. What became of the thousand dollars appropriated for the investigation of crime in Evelyne, who was the appropriation made?—Boyne Citizen.

We shall proceed to answer question number one. Following the destruction of the ferry seed warehouse in Charlevoix, and the Petoskey barn in Evelyne, the board of supervisors passed a resolution that a sum of money, not to exceed one thousand dollars, be appropriated to ferret out the perpetrators and punish them.

After a careful consideration of the question the sheriff and prosecuting attorney decided that they were not warranted in expending the money or any part of it, and it is still in the County treasury. Not one dollar of it has drawn out or need for any purpose whatever.

It is very easy for Mr. Sim Wilson or any other citizen to satisfy himself of this fact by calling at the county offices and investigating.

This he was told during the last campaign but was then called . . . it was then asserted by the lourians Wilson outfit that the money was used for campaign purposes. That is the inference in the above question.

Sim Wilson knows that such a diversion of public money could not possibly be made, and he ought to know, if he has brains, that not one dollar of that appropriation was taken from the treasury.

Now, come on with the other fifteen questions, one at a time.—Ney.

Simeon Wilson as An Interlocutor.

Sim Wilson, editor of the Boyne Citizen, in his last issue, states that he recently asked sixteen questions concerning county affairs, and how propose to propound them to the SENTINEL one by one.

What is the use, Sim? The people answered every one of the questions on Monday, April 2d. Your questions are a dead issue.

INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET.

Charlevoix Entertains Association This Year

Bear in mind the fact that for the first time in five years the Northern Michigan Interscholastic Meet will occur in Charlevoix May 26th. It is expected that our elegant new track will be completed and in prime shape.

The following schools compose the association and are expected to be present: Traverse City, Boyne City, East Jordan, Alpena, Cheboygan, Central Lake, Charlevoix and Petoskey.

The list of events is as follows: 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 440 yard dash, ½ mile run, 1 mile run, 1 mile run, shot put, discus throw, hammer throw, 120 high hurdles, 220 low hurdles, high jump, pole vault, running broad jump and 4 mile relay race.

The prize to be given the winning team, "Live and to hold" until launched from its embrace, is a beautiful thing, and is on exhibition at Bellinger's jewelry store. It is a silver cup, mounted on a beautiful ebony base, and stands eighteen inches high.

The medals to be awarded for individual feats of strength and agility, are being struck. They will be of gold, silver and bronze.

The Charlevoix team is straining every nerve to make the Charlevoix Meet a big success.

The Congressional Question.

The congressional question in the 9th district this year involves a business proposition, and every voter in Charlevoix county should weigh it carefully and with clear business judgement.

Hon. A. H. Ramsay, who has served the district for three terms, has served it faithfully and well. He has been diligent, watchful and effective. His nearly six years experience has equipped him with a knowledge that must be felt in future efforts for the interests of the district. There is not a week in twenty spent in his record at Washington.

How would you regard the idea of a new man sought the position of your confidential adviser in Congress, if the services of that adviser were valuable to you by reason of his experience? Would you discharge him at the behest of a new man?

The most useful members of the lower house of congress from Michigan are those who have served more than three terms—namely William Alden Smith and Washington Gardner. A R. Ramsay stands strongly during his third term that he was during his second, he will be stronger in his fourth term than he was in his third. In it great business points to discontinue his services because some one else has ambitions?

No one can say aught against Mr. Ramsay's chief competitor. Were his case commenced it will come—we shall hear the same arguments if he deserves them, and he will. Let us look at the practical business phase of the question and then ask ourselves, is it not for the interests of Charlevoix county that Mr. Ramsay should be returned as the representative from this district.

Services on Sunday will be as follows:

Methodist Church.

Morning Subject, "Christ Meeting, Dwelling by Faster at 10.30 and 7.30.

DISASTROUS EARTHQUAKE

San Francisco's Business Section Destroyed Early Wednesday Morning.

One of the most devastating earthquakes in the history of the world occurred at San Francisco at an early hour Wednesday.

Two terrific shocks a half hour apart, toppled over hundreds of buildings and destroyed the water mains. The water front caught fire, and the flames moved unchecked toward the business section.

Buildings were blown up to check the flames. Among the buildings razed is the $5,000,000 city hall.

Thousands of lives were lost, and the city is yet in the grasp of a most heart rendering panic.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Baptist Church.

Large audiences greeted the pastor last Sunday morning and evening. The music of the choir was greatly enjoyed. The recent improvements in the stairway and audience room conformed not a little to the pleasure and profit to the occasion. The city was most fittingly closed by the baptism of a young lady, than beautifully and most impressively illustrating the meaning of the resurrection as typified by baptism.

Regular services Sunday. Morning theme: "Paul's farewell address at Miletus." Evening theme: "Can a man save himself?"

Sunday School 9 a. m.

B. Y. P. U. 6.30 p. m.

Bible School 11.45 a. m.

Everybody welcome.

Congregational Church.

A large audience was present last Sunday evening to hear the Easter Cantata, "Death and Life." The music was well rendered.

Preaching by the pastor Sunday morning as usual. The evening will be a service with "Immortal Hymns." The great church hymns will be sung and the pastor will give the story of their origin and history.

The Ladies' Missionary society will meet with Mrs. E. A. Smith Friday afternoon, April 20th.

The Boys' Club spent a pleasant evening with Paul Harsha the 16th inst. Every boy reports a fine time and arranged the time of the meetings of the club. The Club voted to meet in the quarterly to Billy. After the boys were voted in Mamie Cannon were prepared at the last meeting the roster of membership will be renewed.

The topic for the ensuing week service April 29th will be "Shall Christians know each other in the future life?" Matt. 22.23-33. Luke 16 9-31. 2 Cor. 5.1-8.

Methodist Church.

The Easter services were all well attended.

A successful Easter Dawn service was held according to usual custom. At 5.30 the Easter pageant from the text, "He is not here, for He is risen." The anthem by the choir well sung, "Greater love hath no man than this," by Mrs Manting was much enjoyed.

At 9 o'clock, the Sunday School held its Easter exercises, rendering a service entitled, "The Holy Dawn," with more bright and melodies and appropriate recitations than by the younger children, who acquitted themselves very creditably.

Mr. E. H. Shanks was the leader of Epworth League service and gave a good practical talk on the theme, "The Resurrected Life."

Services on Sunday will be as follows:

At 10.30 a. m. Class Meeting.

Preaching by Pastor at 10.30 and 7.30.

Junior League at 3 p. m.

Epworth League at 6.30

A week of special revival services will commence at Epworth church, on Monday evening, at 7.30. Meetings each evening, except Saturday. Everybody invited.

At St. H. church, on Friday evening the Epworth League will hold a social. A light program will be given and ice cream and cake served. Admission, 10 cents.

MOST PECULIAR TREE

AUSTRALIAN BAOBAB A FREAK OF NATURE.

Its Wood Is Relished by Cattle as a Food—Dragon Tree of Tenerife Long Known as Wonder of Vegetable Kingdom.

The vegetation of Australia is different from that of any other country. The easiest species to notice about Australia, which is a far greater wonder than he to be found in Europe. A peculiarity of the trees found growing near the coast is the vertical direction of the foliage, which allows the sunlight to pass easily through the leaves. Many curious trees are found, but none is more remarkable than the bottle tree or baobab. The peculiarity of the tree is found in its enormous trunk, which, as compared with other forms trees, is one of all proportions to its branches. Sometimes the trunk is nearly spherical, sometimes it is cylindrical.

The peculiar habits of its owner will be responsible for this extraordinary. The tree contains large quantities of water, in the form of mucilage. Nature is fond of clouds the trees and other plants and the animals always with great relish. The Dutch settlers in Java, of the middle particular, capture wild cattle with a thin rope covered with, in the sticky juice they are wont to use for bird catching. When they have succeeded in fastening the animal, the cattle and then are very fond. The attention always bestowed upon the trees, and perhaps the most remarkable specimen of the species in existence is the baobab. It is up to date. Memphis Scimitar.

Immune to Colds.

"A Conference," said a physician, "is an excellent thing when it is done to his honor. If I had my way, all of us, women and men alike, would wear Queen Quality. This honest product has for the benefit of the Good Old Old Style of shoe. It is a leader in shoes. The lasts especially in vogue are a good deal more purty and easy for me a second and I'll guarantee you a week's cold. The Quakeresses Indeed may not be interested, but they feeling like maps as it does, it keeps our feet from cold, your in and your out."

Mobilize California Troops.

For some reason him en to themselves officially of the California National Guard will arrive in San Francisco to-day to take the troops in the interests of the City in mobilize and assemble on San Francisco water front.

—Ray Faulkner, who has been seriously ill in a Chicago hospital, is on the road to recovery, and is expected here soon to spend his convalescent period.

—A barn in Marion belonging to E. A. Stewart was destroyed by fire one day last week. Fifteen tons of hay and a number of farm implements were also lost. Fire caught from a stubble fire in a field adjoining.

—Married, at the residence of Mr. C. D. McLachlan, on Tuesday evening April 17th, by Rev. C. T. Stout, of Traverse City, Mr. Hugh A. King, of Ironton, and Miss Florence A. Hosley, of Traverse City. They will reside on Mr. King's farm at Ironton.

—How many towns or cities in Michigan have a sufficient quarry of its own almost within the city limits, and a steam crusher plant on the grounds? That is what Charlevoix has, and it is mighty good use of them. It means very much for the future of the city. It means that in a very few years Charlevoix will have the best streets of any town of its size in the state.

—Before any further action is taken on Charlevoix street improvement, we should stop and consider that some of the roads in Charlevoix township are in very bad condition. City streets are important, but more important still are the country roads. The farmers have good reason to grumble. We have not paied our self as to just what relation the city bears to Charlevoix township roads, but if there is no other way to do it, fix up a subscription.

—Effective April 18th, the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. steamships Missouri and Illinois will leave Chicago Wednesdays and Saturdays at 7 o'clock p. m. Going South they will leave Charlevoix every Wednesday and Saturday. Hour of sailings announced later.

—We believe we have said something elsewhere in this issue about navigation being open. Well, here is some more. The steamer Cummings began her Boyne City trips to day, and the steamers Hunt and Gordon began their last Jordan trips yesterday. The steamship Missouri arrived again from Chicago Sunday night, and the steamships Fletcher cleared up to East Jordan yesterday morning, taking out lumber for Chicago. Navigation is wide open.

—One of the beauties of Charlevoix present to a large degree, but in a greater degree prospective, is the street parks between the curb and the walk. All street improvements are planned with this in view, and the space on Clinton street and Park avenue already has some beauty spots which are growing more beautiful every year. This parked space enhances the value of the home which its fronts. We hope to see the day when, on every residence street in Charlevoix there will be a well kept park strip fronting every home.

—The Salvation Army is building their annual week of Self Denial next week from April 22nd to April 29th inclusive. Self Denial Week is a week set apart each year by the Salvation Army, during which they deny themselves certain kinds of food and along other lines, to save in cash and also raise a certain amount among friends. The amount raised is for home and foreign missionary work. Will you please help? The "target" or in other words the amount to be raised is seventy five dollars for this Corps.

—We have received the announcement of the marriage, in Grand Rapids, on the sixteenth, of Miss Alice Dryden Graves to Mr. Edward Gregory Smith. The bride is the daughter of Dr. Schuyler C. Graves, twenty years ago a Charlevoix practitioner. Annie Dryden Graves was born in Charlevoix, where, also, her mother died. Old residents of Charlevoix will remember the lovely young woman who came to Charlevoix as the bride of Dr. Graves, and whose life went out almost at the hour that she gave to the world the bride of to-day. The sweet memory of a gracious attachment for the lady, the rollicking, fair haired girl, and the bride.

—The range man is abroad in the land. Look out for them. There is no reason why our people should patronize these people. You are always the loser in the end. They are flimsy talkers and they charge more for their goods than they can be bought for in the home market. Investigate at home before you permit these people to fleece you.

—Under auspices of the interdenominational union of "Charlevoix the Beautiful," Mrs. E. L. Calkins, State Pres., of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will lecture next Wednesday evening April 25th at the M. E. Church upon one of the most important topics of good music will be furnished the day. You are all most earnestly invited to be present. Admission free. A thank offering will be taken.

A Question Answered.

The Citizen has said, and will say it again, that we are perfectly willing to present both sides of every question. Now if The Sentinel will answer the other 47 questions published in our issue of March 29, we will see that it gets before the people on this vicinity. If Smith does not care to answer them all in one issue, we will take them one at a time. Here's one for next week:

What became of the thousand dollars appropriated for the investigation of virus in Evelyne, why was the appropriation made?—Boyne Citizen.

We shall proceed to answer question number one. Following the destruction of the ferry seed warehouse in Charlevoix, and the Peterson barn in Evelyne, the board of supervisors passed a resolution that a sum of money, not to exceed one thousand dollars, be appropriated to ferret out the perpetrators and punish them.

After a careful consideration of the question the sheriff and prosecuting attorney decided that they were not warranted in expending the money or any part of it, and it is still in the County treasury. Not one dollar of it was drawn nor is need for any purpose whatever.

It is very easy for Mr. Simpson or any other citizen to satisfy himself of this fact, by calling at the county offices and investigating.

This he was told during the last campaign and was then nailed. It was then asserted by the Lorraine-Wilson outfit that the money was used for campaign purposes. That is the inference in the above question.

Mr. Wilson knows that such a diversion of public money could not possibly be made, and he ought to know, if he has brains, that not one dollar of that appropriation was taken from the treasury.

Now, come on with the other fifteen questions, one at a time.

Next.

Simeon Wilson as An Interlocutor.

Sim Wilson, editor of the Boyne Citizen, in his last issue, states that he recently asked sixteen questions concerning county affairs, and now proposes to propound them to the SENTINEL, one by one.

What is the use, Sim? The people answered every one of the questions on Monday, April 2d. Your questions are a dead issue.

INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET.

Charlevoix Entertains Association This Year.

Bear in mind the fact that for the first time in her years the Northern Michigan Interscholastic Meet will occur in Charlevoix May 26th. It is expected that our elegant new track will be completed and in prime shape.

The following schools composed the association and are expected to be present. Traverse City, Boyne City, East Jordan, Alpena, Cheboygan, Central Lake, Charlevoix and Petoskey.

The list of events is as follows: 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 440 yard dash, ½ mile run, 1 mile run, 2 mile run, shot put, discus throw, hammer throw, 120 high hurdles, 220 low hurdles, high jump, pole vault, running broad jump and ½ mile relay race.

The prize to be given the winning team, "to have and to hold" until snatched from its embrace, is a beautiful thing and is on exhibition at Hellinger's jewelry store. It is a silver cup, mounted on a beautiful ebony base, and stands eighteen inches high.

The medals to be awarded for individual feats of strength and agility, are being struck. They will be of gold, silver and bronze.

The Charlevoix team is straining every nerve to make the Charlevoix Meet a big success.

The Congressional Question.

The congressional question in the 9th district this year involves a business proposition, and every voter in Charlevoix county should weigh it carefully and with clear business judgement.

Dan A. Darragh, who has served the district for three terms, has served it faithfully and well. He has been diligent, watchful and effective. His nearly six years experience has equipped him with a strength that must be felt in future efforts for the interests of the district. There is not a week in fairly spent in his record at Washington.

How would you regard the matter if a new man sought the position of your confidential workman in business, if the success of that assistant were valuable to you by reason of his experience? Would you discharge him at the behest of a new man?

The most faithful members of the lower house of congress from Michigan are those who have served more than three terms, as Mr. Darragh, William Alden Smith and William Gardner. A. E. Darragh was elected during his third term than he was during his second; he was no stronger in his fourth term than he was in his third. Is it good business policy to discontinue his services because some one else has ambitions?

No one can say night against Mr. Darragh's chief competitor. When his time comes, and it will come—we shall apply the same arguments if he deserves them, and he will. Let us look at the practical business phase of the question and then ask ourselves: Is it not for the interests of Charlevoix county that Mr. Darragh should be returned as the representative from this district.

DISASTROUS EARTHQUAKE.

San Francisco's Business Section Destroyed Early Wednesday Morning.

One of the most devastating earthquakes in the history of the world occurred at San Francisco at an early hour Wednesday.

Two terrible shocks, a half hour apart, toppled over hundreds of buildings and destroyed the water mains. The water front caught fire, and the flames moved unchecked toward the business section.

Buildings were blown up to check the flames. Among the buildings razed in the process was city hall.

Thousands of lives were lost, and the city is yet in the grasp of a most heart rending panic.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Baptist Church.

Large audiences greeted the pastor last Sunday morning and evening. For month by the child the church did well. The recent improvements in the stairway and audience room continued not a little to the pleasure and profit to the occasion.

The evening sermon was most fittingly closed by the baptism of a young lady, then beautifully and most impressively illustrating the meaning of the resurrection as typified by baptism.

Regular services Sunday. Morning theme: "Paul's farewell address at Miletus." Evening theme: "Can a man live himself?"

Junior Union 3 p. m.
B. Y. P. U. 6:30 p. m.
Bible school 11:45 a. m.

Everybody welcome.

Congregational Church.

A large audience was present last Sunday evening to hear the Easter Cantata, "Death and Life." The music was a delight to all.

Preaching by the pastor morning and evening as usual. The evening sermon was a sermon with "Memorial Hymns." The great church hymns will be sung and the pastor will give the story of their origin and history.

The Ladies' Missionary society will meet with Mrs. F. A. Smith Friday afternoon April 20th.

The Boys' Club spent a pleasant evening with Paul Hamlin the Thursday. Every boy reports a fine time. It always the case at the meetings of the club. The Club voted to hold the membership to city. After the business was over whose names were proposed at the last meeting, the limit of membership will be reached.

The topic for the mid week service April 25th will be "What Christians know and do after in the future life." Matt. 22:23-33. Luke 16:9-2. 2 Cor. 4:18.

Methodist Church.

The Easter services were all well attended.

A memorable Easter Dawn service was held commencing at sunrise, at 6:30, the Easter sermon preached from the text, "He is not here, for He is risen." The audience by the church was small, somewhat but no more than that, by Mrs. Marting was much enjoyed.

At 9 o'clock, the Sunday School held its Easter exercises, rendering a service entitled, "The Holy Dawn" with music bright and melodious and appropriate recitations mainly by the younger children, who acquitted themselves creditably.

At 10 H. Shaks was the leader of Epworth League service and gave a good practical talk on the theme, "The Resurrected Life."

Services on Sunday will be as follows:

At 9:30 a. m. Class Meeting.
Preaching by Pastor at 10:30 and 7:30.

Junior League at 3 p. m.

Epworth League at 6:30 p. m.

A week of special revival services will commence at Epworth church on Sunday evening, at 7:30. Meetings each evening, except Saturday, Everybody invited.

At M. E. church, on Friday evening the Epworth League will hold a social. A short program will be given and ice cream and cake served. Admission, 10 cents.

At Epworth M. E. Church, on Sunday excellent Easter program was given by the Sunday School under the leadership of Mrs. Alfred Vaulbusen, Superintendent.

MORMON PRESIDENT EXPELS POLYGAMIC APOSTLES

Declared Because They Have Taken Plural Wives since Manifesto Discouraging the Practice Was Promulgated.

Matthew S. Lyon and Thomas W. Taylor, the latter one of Mormon apostles, were expelled from the church by the decree of President Joseph F. Smith, the latter being the son of the late president of the church. The action of the council of twelve apostles, of which Lyon and Taylor were members, was taken at a meeting of the council in the temple here. The action of the council was taken in the presence of President Smith, who is doing active work in the temple for the first time since his recent illness. The action of the council was taken because of the fact that Lyon and Taylor have married wives since the promulgation by the church of the manifesto against the practice of polygamy. The action of the council was taken without a trial, the men being tried by the council in their absence. Lyon and Taylor have been active in the church for many years. Lyon is a son of Apostle Francis M. Lyon, and Taylor is a son of the late President John Taylor. Lyon is a member of the stake high council of Weber stake, and Taylor is a member of the stake high council of Bannock stake. Lyon is a prominent mining man, and Taylor is a farmer and stockman. Lyon is married to a daughter of President Joseph F. Smith, and Taylor married his wife in the temple. Lyon married his wife in the temple in 1884, and married his second wife in the temple in 1897. Taylor married his first wife in the temple in 1887, and married his second wife in the temple in 1897. Lyon is the father of twelve living children, and Taylor is the father of nine living children. Lyon is 45 years of age, and Taylor is 40 years of age. Lyon is a grandson of Brigham Young, and Taylor is a grandson of John Taylor. The action of the council in the case of these men was taken in the face of the fact that President Smith and President Cannon, the only living members of the first presidency, are in favor of the men retaining their places in the church. The action of the council was taken in the face of the fact that President Smith has been active in the work of the church since his return from his long period of illness, and has been in the temple every day for several weeks, and has been in the temple every day for several days. GOT FACTS AT LAST

MYSTERY AS TO CORRESPONDENT REVEALED.

Young Married Woman's "Charm" Turned Out to Be of a Very Business-like Disposition—Guess That Certainly Seemed Justified.

The young married couple were at the breakfast table when the wife took up from the footstools mail a square blue letter that seemed to worry over the address. The head of the house watched his wife shadowing the edge of the letter and noted the puzzled look on her face. He asked her why she worried.

"I don't think I ought to write," she ventured. "Perhaps I ought to complain to the writer. I wonder if I have your husband."

"I'll tell you how I generally get rid of such annoyances," said the man. "Throw the letter. People who write letters usually open them."

"I'a afraid Mollie," continued the wife, glancing at the text of the letter, "whatever people. Mollie, Jim who can Mollie be? If I don't be Mollie's friend, she is so young and pretty. This is preposterous! Listen, Jimmie—I'll read the anonymous letter I guess I ought to do and write the writer. I wonder if I have your husband."

"I'll tell you how I generally get rid of such annoyances," said the man. "Throw the letter. People who write letters usually open them. I mean—

"I'a afraid Mollie," continued the wife, glancing at the text of the letter, "whatever people. Mollie, Jim who can Mollie be? If I don't be Mollie's friend, she is so young and pretty. This is preposterous! Listen, Jimmie—I'll read the anonymous letter I guess I ought to do and write the writer. I wonder if I have your husband.

"Dear Madam—I know you are married, but I know you are young and pretty, and I know that you are a good woman. I know that you love your husband, and I know that you are a good woman. I know that you love your husband, and I know that you are a good woman. I know that you love your husband

MISS GRANT'S EASTER EVE.

MISS SARAH GRANT stood at the window in her little dining room one evening late in the day just after supper had been served. The street, it was the first day of March, but the air was still full of the promise of spring. The grass was fresh once more on the lawns and the brown earth at the right of the walk lately daffodils, showing on the slightly sheltered side of the greenery.

Miss Grant spoke to the unquietly as she gazed over the window. Her mother, who was sewing, with a certain air, sewing and plain and dress and cloth. The silver was genuine, of the fashion of a half century ago, with wooden handles which nearly time had worn smooth. The cloth was of the finest linen, a wedding gift, and the glass was cut in a pattern which was in fashion when Sarah was a little girl. It passed tempting. But the maid did not eat the food before her. She was thinking the answering shape from the window and wondering how the time hung heavy. She looked at the clock for the twenty-fifth minute, idly, adjusting her napkin once more, and then her black cashmere shoulders.

"And tomorrow's April Fool's day, too. As if there wasn't enough to trouble without that. For the life of me, I don't know what April Fool's day is for, anyhow. Well, I'm ready to do my share toward making it a day to remember. There's one April Fool I can fool, and that's myself."

Half the most doting sisters in those days would have bestowed huge kisses on such a face as Sarah Grant's. The face was not exactly beautiful, but it was a face that one could easily imagine a strong, tender husband and children to love. Sarah's face was a little too strong for prettiness, and too tender for strength. There was the hint of a dimple in her cheek, but it was a dimple that had been pushed out of its place by the firm, sweet mouth. Her eyes were brown, and her hair, which was beginning to show a few silver threads, was a dull brown, with a wave in it that she had tried to comb out when she was a little girl, and had given up in despair. Her nose was a little too large for beauty, but it was a good nose, for it was the nose of a woman who could be depended upon in an emergency. Her chin was too square for a woman who could be coaxed or wheedled into anything against her judgment. Her forehead was too broad for a woman who could be deceived by a specious argument. Her hands were too large for her height, and she had a way of hiding them in her skirts when she was not using them. Her feet were too large for her height, and she had a way of hiding them under her chair when she was not using them. Her voice was too low for a woman who could be easily heard in a crowd, and she had a way of speaking in it that was not mutinous, yielding at the latter. Her dress was neat, and her shoes were well polished, but she was not conscious of any thought in her mind that her dress was neat or her shoes well polished. Just as I was suggesting, she looked as much like a Sunday School teacher as she could look, and what she I did I do not know. Perhaps it was the mouth. Perhaps it was the eyes. Perhaps it was the chin. Perhaps it was the hands. Perhaps it was the feet. Perhaps it was the voice. Perhaps it was the dress. Perhaps it was the shoes. Perhaps it was the combination of all these things. Perhaps it was the combination of the general impression of her personality. Perhaps it was the fact that she looked as much like a Sunday School teacher as she could look, and what she

She writes that they were first awakened by the cases of fruit falling from the shelves. Santa Cruz is about fifty miles south of San Francisco. It has 7,000 inhabitants. The place was damaged to the extent of $175,000, but no one was injured.

—Don't forget the Ladies' Relief Corps entertainment to occur at Odd Fellows' Hall Friday evening of this week. An excellent program has been prepared, and the occasion will be made one of genuine interest and pleasure. After the program an hour or more will be devoted to social enjoyment The ladies have worked hard to make the event a success, and they deserve a generous turn out.

—The Press attributes one reason for the success of mail order houses to their ability to paint in words and with printed illustrations prettier pictures of their wares than a personal inspection will produce. Distance lends enchantment to the view. An active and impressionable imagination can see beauties in articles advertised in a mail order catalogue that will fade to ugliness under a personal inspection. Is it any wonder then, that the catalogues continue to get in their work to the profit of the city concerns and to the detriment of their country customers? The rule to buy nothing without an examination of quality would save many patrons of city mail order houses much money and worry. If you are disposed to give your home merchants an opportunity to compete with outsiders, give them a chance to compare qualities and prices before you send your good money away for questionable merchandise.—Adrain Press.

—A few years ago a member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies proposed to tax all tourists. They did Italy no good, he affirmed They came there, spent a few days or weeks or months enjoying her beauty and her antiquities, and then departed. For the benefits they received they should be willing to pay. But immediately a colleague arose. He had some figures And when he had finished reading those figure the proposition to tax tourists was unanimously voted down. For those figures showed that the money spent by tourists who visit Italy simply to look at her beauty is the greater part of her income Hotels, trains, guides, restaurants, livery stables, merchants, doctors, farmers, all are supported in greater or less degree by the tourists. Therefore, instead of discouraging their coming by imposing a tax, Italy is willing to spend money to entice them. The lesson applies in Michigan as well as it does in Italy.

The Missing Question Number Two.

In a recent issue of the Boyne Citizen the editor announced that he had, closely guarded in his private safety vault, sixteen questions, which, one by one, would be propounded to the SENTINEL. He also stated in the same issue that his readers should receive, in his columns, both sides of the question, which implied, at least, that our answers would be given the same publicity that were given the questions.

Question number one was answered by the SENTINEL last week. We have before us the Citizen of April 20th. We have searched its columns carefully for the editor's honorable recognition of our reply, and cannot find even a remote reference of it.

Likewise question number two is conspicuous by its absence. We had a special pencil sharpened with which to reply to No. 2. What is the matter with Sim? Has he not had sufficient time to digest the answer to No. 1? Or has it lodged in his vermiform appendix and sent him to bed?

Little Stormy Witson evidently bit off too large a chunk when he accumulated sixteen questions.

One is enough.

A Case of Mistaken Identity.

Occasionally a cousin living in Iowa sends the editor of this paper a copy of the Malone (N. Y.) Palladium, published in the Adirondack village in which he and the cousin were born. A copy of a recent issue comes with the following marked item

United States Senator Alger of Michigan has announced that, because of ill health, he will not be a candidate for re election. Congressman William Alden Smith, one of the leaders of the House, has announced his candidacy for the place. Mr. Smith lived in boyhood in Malone, and made his home with the late Porter Moody, who resided forty years ago on the corner of Washington and Milwaukee streets, where Mr. A. H. Fuller now lives. At the same time a brother of Congressman Smith, Charley, was an employee in the Palladium office.

Now the Smith meant is the boy Smith who left Malone in 1860, came to Michigan, and is now publishing the SENTINEL. Willard A. Smith was born in Malone, was left an orphan while very young, and was, in a way, adopted by Porter Moody. Charles A. Smith, a brother, learned his trade in the Palladium office. In short, the item means "us."

William Alden Smith brags about being a Michigan boy, born and bred. Few have attained political distinction so young, but he has recently greatly enhanced his fame by buying a newspaper the only royal road to true greatness.

We are in a quandary, whether or not to write the Malone editor, correcting his error, or by keeping silent permit the good people of Malone to continue in the enjoyment of the happy delusion that the Malone boy of the long ago is in Congress, a member of the ways and means committee, and a candidate for U. S. Senator.

We shall, however, write Congressman Smith, releasing him from any obligations to his New York confreres that may be advanced by reason of his alleged New York birth. This is not by any means the first time that Willard A. and William Alden have jumbled into each other by reason of the similarity of their names.

THE SUGAR FACTORY.

Work Now Well in Hand, and Being Pushed Vigorously.

The big Sugar plant at the foot of Pine Lake is alive and well, thank you! It is a permanent Charlevoix industry, but, in a larger sense, it is a local Northern Michigan enterprise. After enduring much travail, passing through great perilous and surmounting stupendous obstacles, it is on its feet, solid, safe and permanent.

Not the least of its heavy tasks was that following the reorganization—the recovery of lost prestige, and the restoration of public confidence.

Thanks to the wise and intelligent management of affairs on the part of General Manager Hubbard and Secretary Marting, this has all been done, and the farmers of Northern Michigan have responded generously to the call for beet acreage. In this work a secondary difficulty was encountered in the shortage of properly prepared land for use this year.

But notwithstanding this, the company has signed contracts for two thousand acres, and contracts are still coming in. It would not be surprising if the figures should reach 2,200 acres. This, of course, is far short of what was desired, or what is necessary to insure a profitable year's work. But, considering conditions, the situation is full of encouragement, and convinces the company officials that future success is assured.

Seed distribution began in earnest last Monday morning, and will occupy the next ten days. A force of fifteen men is at work on the factory premises, and the company will soon increase this to fifty.

Mr. Hubbard is in Chicago this week, engaged with labor bureaus for the employment of beet workers. A force will be brought here this month for distribution where needed in the work of planting.

All along the line activity prevails, and it is here to stay.

Senior's Play.

The Seniors will present their entertainment on Friday and Saturday nights, May 4th and 5th. The class have been very fortunate in securing the Inn, which has a commodious stage and ample seating capacity.

The cast of characters for the farce will be as follows.

Monmouth Hill ..... Monie Withers
Mrs. Hill ..... Olive Turner
Marilla Hill ..... Amy Hatsho
Frederick St Pierre ..... Alick [illegible]
Harvey ..... [illegible] Smith
Mr. Worthyman ..... George Finnegan

Mr. and Mrs. Hill have grown rich and but recently entered high society. They are anxious that their daughter should marry well, and depend upon Mr. Worthyman, a friend of theirs, for a suitable introduction. About the same time they also send for a servant. By mistake they think the applicant for the position as servant is the prospective son-in-law and complications follows.

The cast is well taken and no pains are being spared to make it a success.

The following young people compose the cast in "Willowdale."

Joel Bassett, Postmaster . . . Claire Crothier
Tom Skerrett, the crooked . . Harold Bedford
Joseph Godby, Lawyer . . . Harold Hampton
Clarence Pinnacore, Teacher . . Clyde Poulter
Rev. Mr. Prosser . . . . . Will Finnegan
Lem Hackett, Leader of Choir . Lowell Smith
Elnon Primer, Whittler . . . Clyde Shepard
Miss Bassett, who has her way . . . . . Mildred Johnson
Millie Bassett, child of fate. . . Marie Le Duke
Rosetta Gates, Friend of Millie . . . . . Helen Smith
Mrs. Barey, who imagines things . . . . . Georgia Crowell
Oleander, Servant . . . . . Alma Francis

SYNOPSIS.

NO MORE CROP FAILURES!

The Farmers' Millennium at Hand, According to Wilson.

There will be no more crop failures. This position is confidently made by Secretary Wilson, who knows more about agriculture than any other man in public life. The Secretary is entertaining only several million visitors at the country represented year after year, and those who see the crop great majority in the form of a report or a side-show of freezing weather in July may be assured that the month of June brings a cheerful report of the horizon.

Early and late frosts, drouth and profound snow are now of little and not topic of conversation. Grasshoppers and other pests and diseases are considered in the discovery or remedy, even when the farmer may prefer failure to know cause.

When I am asked what is the cause of failure, I do not know that every and each one, plants will thrive and mature. Failures are necessary. Without failures there would be no suffering, there would be no misery, no want, no need of charity, no need of sympathy, no need of charity, no need of charity, no need of charity

USING CONVICTS.

Let Them Pick Stone for Roads, Says Gov. Black, of Georgia.

The Northern states of the Union are [illegible] of Hardwicke, Ga., in [illegible] of using convicts for the improvement of some public roads in the neighborhood of Atlanta, Ga. At the direct suggestion of Gov. Black, a bill was introduced in the legislature of that state looking toward such work on the roads, and the measure bids fair to finally pass. It is a great advance of the humanitarian sort, as passed to the prisoners. They shall, if any prove indeed to deserve it, work there on the turnpike and public roads by moonlight, instead of being in a truly pitiable condition. But there is some opposition to the proposition on the ground that it will be a hard blow to the merchants of the state, who have been in the habit of selling to the county authorities supplies for the convicts, and who have grown rich on the profits of the business. Gov. Black, however, is not to be deterred by this opposition, and he has made a strong appeal to the people of the state in favor of the measure. He says, in part: "Let us use the convicts to make the roads, and let the merchants who have been fattening on the convicts' misfortunes go to work and earn their bread by the sweat of their brows. There is no such thing as a Christian slave-driver. The convicts are a class of people who have been [illegible] by which it is proposed to put them to work on the public roads, [illegible] convicts in Georgia are 'desperadoes' and that humanity is cruelty when applied to them. I have heard arguments against the work based upon the supposition that the convicts

For The Term of His Natural Life

By MARCUS CLARKE

CHAPTER XXVII.

On or about the 20th of December, Mrs. Frere mailed a sudden and unanticipated change in the manner of the boys and after calling Pip aside, told him to "give up playing at Jesus." Pip, in a vague and pathetic manner, asked the meaning of the phrase, and the wretched question of some of the pitiful nature, began to question her abruptly concerning Richard Devine.

"It is not wish to think of him," said she with indignation. "I have the strangest, the most horrible dreams about him. He is a bad man. He tried to murder his uncle a child, and had it not been for his mother, he would have done so. I have only seen him once since that, at Hobart Town, when he was taken."

"He sometimes speaks to me of you," said North, sitting her. "He asked me once to give him a rose pinched in your garden."

Sylvia turned pale. "And you gave it him."

"Yes, I gave it him. Why not? You are not angry?"

"Why, no, why should I be angry?" she laughed contemptuously. "It was a strange reason for the man to have, that's all."

"I suppose you won't not give me an other rose, if I ask you for it?"

"Why not?" said she, turning away. "Why? Do you expect?"

"Why, I don't know, I know not. It would be better if I did not, I know it would be better, but I do not, I never seem to me."

Mr. North? Terrified at the wild glance in the eyes, she half cried hastily "Yes, yes, I will give you one."

"Oh, don't be angered, pleaded Jim, in a tone of pitiful entreaty. I think I know we are of each other the better."

"You are to know and understand extraordinary confidence, Sylvia allowed him to write a rose upon her cheek. "Do not! you be not her and losing pass-ing, I know not."

As a week passed, and Mr. North did not come, the poor self-satisfied lady made straight about the practice could be to avoid. She was sure fact of the matter wrenching away of her companion was caused by this facial was the satisfactory is before her, and been forbidden to the. Jim, not had to

Her husband, who had long ago ceased with her, was gone on a shooting expedition to Jim. Sylvia, left to herself, grew more and more nervous, and at last, one day, in the absence of Mrs. Frere, she ventured to the hut, and, to her astonishment, found Jim Devine at home.

After a week of such collusion, the intercourse of the two had become familiar to her, and one day she came to Mrs. Frere with tidings of a strange man, who had begged for work. Mrs. Frere was in her bedroom, and Sylvia, in her hurry to get to her, forgot to knock before she entered. Let me go to my father for a few days," she said, in a pleading tone. "He will be ill if I go away, and Mary Yeldham is so busy with her child and her husband, I cannot be thought of, I am miserable." Mrs. Frere should visit her husband, and Sylvia was allowed to go. She questioned her husband concerning the convict's antecedents, but with his proverbial laziness, which he invariably thwarted when the name of Rufus Devine intruded itself into their conversation, Marcus Frere hardly pretended to satisfy her.

One rainy afternoon, when the commandant had gone on a visit of inspection, Mrs. Frere sitting in her room, heard a sudden and unaccustomed change in the manner of the house, and after calling Pip aside, told him to "give up playing at Jesus." Pip, in a vague and pathetic manner, asked the meaning of the phrase, and the wretched question of some of the pitiful nature, began to question her abruptly concerning Rufus Devine.

"It is not wish to think of him," said she with indignation. "I have the strangest, the most horrible dreams about him. He is a bad man. A Historical Matter.

Mayor Gallagher is in receipt of a letter from Mr. J. John and Roy, Pelton of the Royal Society of Canada, Leslie, Quebec, the substance of which is as follows

Having in Chicago recently a copy of your address delivered in Toronto, Ontario, on the occasion of the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Sir John A. Macdonald, we read it with great interest. We are endeavoring to collect all the information we can regarding the history of our country, and would be very glad if you would give us information regarding the history of the village of Charlevoix.

Mayor Gallagher replied giving what information he could concerning the history of our city and county.

Originally, the land from which Charlevoix was platted, was owned jointly by the late John S. Dixon, of this place and Noah C. Lomis, of Traverse City. The village was platted in 1869, by county surveyor Newton, of Traverse City, as "The Village of Charlevoix."

The taking of the county seat by Antrim from Ionia was done at the same time, at the legislative act creating Charlevoix county was passed the number of votes in and took effect in April 1869. This act detached the territory constituting the new county from the county of Ionia.

It is therefore probably a historical fact that Bogus and Lonch formed Charlevoix county and village. Mr. Lonch was a prominent Masonic lodge, and a original student of Hickory Jim Lonch was a free-thinker and based the number of our town from the Newtons half of Michigan two years. There is no doubt about over that to have two gentlemen we are indebted for the name. Mr. Lonch is still living at Springfield Ill.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Miss Archie Meisner formerly Miss Grace Alton, of East Jordan, who was a member of the class of 1903, visited the Normal class last Tuesday.

Last Thursday, the Normal teachers, Misses Hinson and Hunt and Mr. Wheatley visited the Bogus, the Hayes, and the Maple Grove schools. The Bogus school is taught by Miss Lizzie Brown and the Maple Grove and Hayes schools are in charge of Miss Vera Cooper and Miss Myrtle Emery respectively, of the class of 1905. The day was rainy but the school rooms were bright and cheerful and the work done by the children in map drawing, cord sewing and paper cutting was very attractive.

A glass dish and a soap bottle, belonging to some scholar who helped the girls with soaper, has not yet been called for, the person to whom they belong will please notify any member of the class.

The San Jose scale is at work in many orchards in Michigan and can soon destroy any tree. It can be controlled by spraying.

Last year the potato crop of Michigan was reduced one third in bushels and rot. This is a dangerous disease and can be held in check by Bordeaux mixture at an expense of ten or three dollars per acre. Potato scab can also be prevented.

The black rot and mildew of the grape black knot of the plum and cherry, peach leaf curl, pear scale, currant and gooseberry worms can also be easily held in check by proper spraying.

The treatment for all of these, and of many other troublesome insects and fungi pests, and formulas for the remedies are given in a spraying calendar issued by the State Experiment Station.

It will be useful to any reader of this paper on application to H. E. Tall, Horticulturist of Experiment Station, Agricultural College, Michigan.

Some Important Dates.

Below are six important dates that will be well for all others to keep in mind:

May 15—Time expires for form petitions for the submission of the action a party vote in each political district.

June 12—Party referendum in all political districts where petitions have been filed. Delegates appointed to each election district by party committees, to be elected at March 1906 state convention and conventions in county and delegates to state conventions. On this day each party will nominate by direct vote, a candidate for governor and recommend governor. On this day each party must also vote by referendum for or against this method of making recommendations for three years.

June 13—Party conventions for the election of delegates to state conventions must be held on or before this date.

August 21—Party conventions to be held for all districts in which no party is a referendum vote of June 12 favored such method. Only members of each party who exercised at March 1906 vote at these early conventions.

Hemlock Bark Matters.

Annual reports of officers of the Hemlock Bark company, of Michigan which reaches the output of twenty-six of the leading bark producers in the state, indicate that the peel will be go 50 per cent smaller this year than last and a corresponding increase on price is looked for. The condition is due largely to the decreasing supply of hardwood through the smaller number of operators this year has something to do with the matter. O'Keefe representing the factory, the American Bank Protection Co. will be at the bank all day and the workings of the entire system will be shown to all who call.

—A prominent citizen remarked in our hearing yesterday, "There should be a thousand men employed in Charlevoix at the limestone quarries." It is a fact that no town in Michigan can boast of so large an area of limestone of such exceptionally good quality as Charlevoix. One thousand or more acres of it, five hundred feet deep, lies near to the corporation line. One great element of its value lies in the fact of its nearness to both rail and water transportation. There are in these quarries, unlimited opportunities for profit to the investor. There is every indication that every acre of these lands will soon be the scene of industrial activity.

—Only a short time ago the Boyne Citizen announced that he would ask the SENTINEL sixteen questions relating to county affairs, and in the same article pledged himself to "give both sides a hearing" by publishing the SENTINEL's answers. The first question was, "what has become of the $1,000 which the board of supervisors appropriated for an investigation of the sewer?" We answered the question, from which time the Citizen has been published twice. Not a word appears in its columns referring to the first question, the answer to it, or the remaining fifteen questions. Has Sim crawled into his hole, or have some of his friends who have brains called him off? It is a sad plan, Sim, to bluff. Circumstances sometimes compel you to show up.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL.

The "Ward Road" Deal Said to be a Fact—Extension Morally Certain.

Last summer the SENTINEL gave its readers information, gained from reliable sources, that the long pending negotiations for the purchase of the Detroit and Charlevoix R. R by the Michigan Central had resulted in a deal, and that the road would be extended from East Jordan to Charlevoix.

The deal was made subject to the arrangement of certain details involving the handling of the Ward estate lumber and logs. The work we are told, has been going on all winter, and our information is that by May 15th the transfer is likely to be made. A prominent and wealthy East Jordan gentleman and, withal, a very careful and conservative man, remarked to Charlevoix last week, "The Michigan Central will be running trains to East Jordan and Charlevoix before snow flies again."

That the acquirement of the Ward road by one of the trunk lines which it intersects, and its extension to Charlevoix, was sure to be realized sooner or later, has long been known. The proposition is one that could not be overlooked, it presents opportunities that are yearly becoming more conspicuous and important. In the matter of construction, the "gap" that separates Charlevoix and the present terminuses of the D. & C. road is but a stretch of about twelve miles, with no cuts. From Ironton to Charlevoix the old West Michigan grade could be utilized. Should the transfer be made, trains could be running to Charlevoix in one month after the papers are signed.

To the railroad company Pine Lake is Lake Michigan, and it is not by any means outside the range of probability that a car-ferry would be established.

This thing is certain: The rapidly increasing resort travel has long been watched by the M. C. and it is worth looking after. The success of the proposition means the placing of Charlevoix four hours nearer Detroit, than it is today. It means the diversion of Eastern travel by that time; it means the future traffic of two promising towns—East Jordan and Charlevoix.

It is foolish to discount the importance of the proposition. It is one of the best that exists in Michigan today, and must be taken up with and be taken up.

Indeed, if our information is as reliable as it appears to be, it has already been taken up.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

The children in the Training Room spent part of Arbor Day in planting seeds and working in their school garden, which they have just made. The members of the Normal class took a trip to the Argo flour mill Monday. They were very much interested in seeing the different steps taken in the making of flour. They were given samples of the different grades and grains of flour. Later they made experiments to see the amount of starch and gluten contained in the flour.

The members of the Normal class are interested in making relief maps of the different continents.

The children in the Training Room have made some very pretty May baskets.

—One of the pleasantest social events of the season was the tea reception given at the Beach House last night by Dr. and Mrs. Thomas, Dr. and Mrs. Montague, Mr. and Mrs. Marling and Mr. and Mrs. Shanahan. The reception was from 4 to 10. Refreshments were served from 8:30 to 10. A fine musical program was rendered by a Petoskey trio—Prof McCallum, cornet; Miss Andrews, violin; Mrs. Norman Rice, piano. Dancing followed the formal reception and concert, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. A large number of prominent citizens and their ladies were present.

The Creamery.

A most interesting place, especially to the model housewife, is the creamery. A visit there is a revelation and an object lesson. There is nothing used on the table about which people are so critical, as the butter. Good butter is a luxury, and poor butter spoils the meal.

Down at the X. L. Produce Co's place receipts of milk and cream are increasing, and the output of butter, put up in golden bricks of one pound each, has had its trial and pronounced perfect. All about the premises cleanliness is the chief work in trade. It is just as necessary an element as the cream itself. Water from the artesian wells is so plentiful all about that the cement floors are awash, and the operatives wear rubber boots.

Everything is as clean as steam and water can make it. A magnificent machine that supplies boils steam and water, cleans and sterilizes every shining milk can before it is permitted to go to the country for its burden of "raw material." The drainage of all the cement floors is perfect, and no fly attracting odor is permitted to remain—indeed it could not.

The two floors of machinery are connected by pipes which are built of with both steam and water daily. No farm dairy or kitchen ever smelled sweeter than do these rooms. And when we come to the question of purity and healthfulness of product we point you to the pasteurizer, which removes every possible deleterious element from the milk and cream.

Having satisfied yourself with reference to all these features of successful butter making, you pass into the packing room, and your mouth waters as soon as you enter it. The butter bricks, the golden yellow showing through the oiled paper wrappers, make you hunker for a warm biscuit or a buckwheat pancake.

It is because of all these scientific methods, and the profession which inventive genius and intelligent investigation has brought to this industry, that creamery butter sells a higher price in any market than dairy butter. You have every confidence in the butter that the immaculate father's wife has brought to you for years. You know it is good, but need to know you know nothing. All butter may look alike, but all butter makers are not the same manufacturers.

Creamery butter is a product of science, and when you buy a brick it is to know what you are getting.

The pure food inspectors can find nothing adulterant in the chalk in the saleratus, but you never heard of one hunting for a sloppy or ill-smelling farm kitchen.

LITERARY PIRACY.

An Unscrupulous Swell-Head Attempts to Steal a Best Shirley Poem.

Many of our Charlevoix readers will remember, unfortunate and afflicted fellow today, who spent many summers here in his father's cottage, and who committed suicide two years ago. Although erratic and a sufferer from a chronic nervous trouble, he was a genius in literature, and was the author of a total of poems that possessed much genuine merit. Some fellow lately came out with Shirley's "St. Peter at the Gate," and claimed the authorship. This is what Bert's old professor says about it in the Detroit News:

"In your issue of April 15 was a long article signed by Mr. F. Floyd, who claims that he wrote J. R. Shirley's famous poem, "St. Peter at the Gate," the greatest and most widely read poem ever written by the western one that struck a popular chord and has been reprinted wherever the English language is read.

I feel forced to disclose the circumstances under which that poem was written. Those circumstances have never before been given to the public. It seems almost like blasphemy to repeat the circumstances which led Joseph Bert Smiley to write that poem but, as those circumstances absolutely prove that he and no one else wrote it, I break a long silence in defense of a dead friend.

Bert Smiley was a favorite pupil of mine in the Kalamazoo high school. I prepared him for college and sent him to my alma mater, Ann Arbor. Later he followed me to Decatur, Ill., where I was teaching and was therefore editor of the Tree Trader, the leading daily paper of that city, and later held the same position on the Joliet News. Then he was offered a larger salary to go on the staff of the Chicago firms. His other friends had begged him to accept, but he refused because they would not allow him to sign his name to his productions.

He preferred to run a little country paper of his own and started the Bainbridge County Independent in Decatur. I was there. This ended in failure and about two years ago, sick and discouraged, he took his own life at Kewaunee, Ill.

While in Bainbridge, about 1895, he had a time with a young woman of that place and I thought it only fair to let her take another look at the Tree Trader, the leading daily paper of that city, and later hold

TO SMASH TARIFF

PROPOSITION FOR WIDE OPEN SYSTEM OF RECIPROCITY.

Bill Introduced Which Would Give the President the Exclusive Power to Reduce All Tariff Rates of Duty for a Period of Five Years.

The following [illegible] was introduced in the house of representatives on Feb. 27, by Representative Hitt, of Illinois. Where upon the Republican side the bill was received with cheers, but quite hearty as the action of a minority in a house that usually votes as a unit upon the tariff question. The bill is as follows:

A BILL

Authorizing the President of the United States to enter into reciprocal commercial agreements for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the President of the United States is hereby authorized and empowered, whenever, in his opinion, any foreign country shall enter into a reciprocal commercial agreement with the United States, which shall in his opinion, be mutually beneficial, from time to time to fix, determine, and proclaim the duties to be imposed upon any and all articles imported from such foreign country, for a period not exceeding five years from the date of such proclamation, which duties shall be in addition to those imposed by existing law upon such articles when imported from any other foreign country, and shall be levied, collected and paid upon such articles when imported from such foreign country, and the duties so fixed and proclaimed shall be in lieu of those imposed upon such articles when imported from such foreign country, but such duties shall not exceed the rates of duty imposed by the law of the United States upon the same when imported from any other foreign country; and the duties so fixed and proclaimed shall be in lieu of those imposed upon such articles when imported from such foreign country, but such duties shall not exceed the rates of duty imposed by the law of the United States upon the same when imported from any other foreign country; and the duties so fixed and proclaimed shall be in lieu of those imposed upon such articles when imported from such foreign country, and the duties so fixed and proclaimed shall be in lieu of those imposed upon such articles

ROMANCE OF A FLOOR.

MAN FINDS BROTHER HE HAS SOUGHT FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

Lady, Separated at Birth of Infirmity, Hears Brother, Who Parents Were Drowned, Are in Reality Brother and Sister.

Flack H. Clemmer, of Ashland, Ky., was a young man left an orphan (Kentucky) at the age of 15 years. He was adopted by Judge Lewis, Paul Jackson, Cecil and wife of Ashland, Ky., who had no children of their own and who treated the young man as their own child. When Clemmer was 20 years of age he left home and went to Kansas City, Mo., where he was employed in the office of a prominent lawyer. Clemmer was ambitious and was doing well when he received a letter from home that his adoptive father was dying and wanted to see him. Clemmer left Kansas City and reached home just in time to see his father alive. The dying man told Clemmer that he was not his father, but that he had taken him from a home for the friendless when he was a baby and had adopted him as his own child. The dying man gave Clemmer a name and said he was sorry he could not tell him who his parents were. Clemmer returned to Kansas City and resumed his place in the office. He was doing well when he received a letter from his adoptive mother saying that she was dying and wanted to see her boy before she died. Clemmer left Kansas City and reached his home just in time to see his mother alive. She told Clemmer the same story that her husband had told him about his being a foundling and that she was not his mother. She said she had taken him from the home for the friendless when he was a baby and had adopted him as her own child. She said she was sorry she could not tell him who his parents were. Clemmer returned to Kansas City and resumed his place in the office. VETERANS IN SEA SERVICE

Officers on the Retired List Who Have Lived Past the Four-Score.

Although the naval service offers abundant opportunities to escape the pains of old age, there are a good number of officers borne upon the retired list who are octogenarians. One very eminent Chicago Post Bright, regretfully has to every service to his credit, having entered the navy in 1837. Neal in seniority is Rear Admiral Aaron Hawkins Hughes, who was appointed a midshipman in 1838.

The officer who has the longest sea service is Rear Admiral Stephen D. Lee, who entered the navy as a midshipman in 1841. He resided the distinction of being the last man to fire a gun from the deck of an armed ship from an enemy's fort, at Port Royal, when the New York Times had a correspondent on board of a gunboat, and now its retired list, which threatens to deprive the imperial service of its ablest and best, is the administration of naval affairs with the exception of a period of the Civil war of the British service.

A significant note from the British home office was recently sent to the house of lords. It requested such regulations as the legality of women in the administration of law, and added that the British home office would reconsider for a moment the question of those women who are the wives of such an autocratic situation was a measure in imperial interests. Moreover, political agitation would lead to one thing—the abrogation of the constitutional and complete severance of men.

On Tipping the Hat.

New Yorker: "Tipping the hat on entrance of tipping shall not worn covering a male friend or acquaintance. It is a courtesy not to a stall, promiscuous hackney supervising it be taken an acquaintance of public his hat, although the other is gone, and unacquainted by a wide on. It is the same after a race has been together somewhere, at dinner probably, or at the theater. You will notice that as one separates himself from the others he is apt to tip his shelf, or as levels, and then up he has also, when one sees a person chatted to another, it is delicate to a subway ticket that he will tip his hat. Wonder why it is?" "Dunno, don't do it in Pittsburg." Pittsburg Dispatch.

Contagion in New Orleans.

The night of storm can hardly a minutes of bright, glorious sunshine, those days are responsible for the destruction of life and death from contagion. Yesterday, for the fifth and sixth time, * * * 132 has to report the death of a person with the disease. The end let them out. NO SMASHING OF TARIFF.

Protection Will Continue to Bring Prosperity to the American People.

The chairman of the ways and means committee spent the time called by Representative McCall of Massachusetts with regard to the revision of the tariff at the opening of congress. Mr. McCall, in a letter to Chairman Payne, urges to entertainers be less and concerning tariff alterations, in which he was explained the attempt of the Democrats upon the Sherman and Dingley bills and has called attention to the declaration of the Massachusetts Democratic state convention. Mr. McCall says the Democratic party assumes that while the Republicans of the state have adopted their contention upon one to the policy of protection and are opposed to any changes that may jeopardize American industries or lower American wages, that in the Republican that system substantial relief in manufactures and farmers and Mr. McCall asks Mr. Payne to consider the advisability of a tariff commission to the Republican national platform.

Mr. Payne during an address at the University of the Massachusetts for conferring upon him some honorary degree, said that the Republican party is not ready to smash the tariff and that it is not the time for such a step. Prosperity is the result of the protective tariff, and the Republican party will not be responsible for the blighting of that blessed work. There will be no more reform than I can. There are some 170 protective officers who joined the cross money chest and another time nearly 1000 of the protective tariff, but none of them knew the end of the tariff. A Republican House of Representatives will not tinker with the tariff, and it is not to be expected that the Democrats will be in a position to do so

FLOWERS FED ON DRUGS.

Medical Potions Administered to Plants to Force Their Growth.

Experiments in the horticultural department of Cornell university are said to have demonstrated the fact that plants can be forced to grow with the aid of drugs, and can be made to mature in the time than it takes to develop naturally, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. The plants are fed on ether or other medical potion for 24 or 48 hours, until they are thoroughly saturated with the forcing. Then they grow with the greatest rapidity. Roses thus treated have put out sap-bearing branches in a manner and manner unknown have doubled their size after a few hours treatment.

Good anything be more beautiful? Can there be any more effective way of displaying its charmers than to bring to flowers? As it is now, the lovelier growth of the flowers will be increased the size of blossoms, to fifth correspondingly to the medical potions, and the more vivid colors, their enlarged fragrance, taken, some of them from the spring, chief flower, because for rose to rose, perfection is each a treasure, an object, and an everyone seeks to some manner.

"Well, said John Rex, as we parted, "Wear your pants in front."

"I want to tell you that I failed and I want you the plan you have to break log on Mr. Rufus's premises."

"Partial success," called Rex, vanishing with a wave of his hand, "tell me my father's will applies one to-day."

"Your father's will applies to nothing of the sort and you know it."

Mr. Rex, pausing, delivering a series of an opossum, and Sarah assisted her with grinning laughter.

"Good-morning," cried John Rex, in above opossum, "I have a lawyer's opinion on it."

He was remarkable what luck place at Hampstead who his business could.

"A Conspiracy!" said Mr. Rex, coming forward angrily, and speaking about Sarah. "Do you remember the reason why you not let the man out? Because you knew that when you may get to my company."

"Like Mr. Rex," said Sarah, "I have a lawyer's opinion on it."

"Yes, I remember what John said," said Mr. Rex, "I have a lawyer's opinion on it."

"Well, I will tell you," said John

COLLEGE YELLS EMBALMED

Canned "Rah-Rahs" Would Be a Great Treat a Few Centuries Hence.

Some thoughtful Austrian has induced the Imperial Academy of Sciences of that empire to secure phonographic records of the numerous languages and dialects of Austria-Hungary, these records to be canned and sealed, as it were, for the enlightenment and edification of future generations. The idea strikes us as good, that academy has seen fit to extend it. Examples of language and dialect have been secured in New Guinea and in certain sections of India. A party of scientists engaged for this research was sent to Australia last summer and another party is to start for Greenland at an early date. All these records are transferred to special archives phonographic and carefully sealed away.

While the field for this form of collecting is widening, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, it might be profitably suggested that the American college yells should be included in those to receive attention. To some people the vigorous "rah-rahs" and other ear-splitting syllables in use by the young collegians would prove fully as interesting as the hackbarbic gutteral intoning of the New Guinea savages, or the Sanskrit chants of the Indians.

So far as we know, no effort has made to complete an possible, with the exception of our Yale "Yo-ho-ho-ho-ho" and our own Case school and the "O-hello" of our Western Reserve.

CATHEDRAL IN ICE AT SEA

Marvelous Spectacle Witnessed by Sailors Off the Bank of Newfoundland.

As nothing than resembled a huge cathedral doubtless the passengers of the Scandinavian-American steamship Sterling thought when that vessel was passing the Bank of Newfoundland recently, reports the New York American.

The Sterling (like at the time was outward bound) was then in the midst of an endless sea. It appeared off the starboard bow, not more than a half away. It was fully 200 feet long, but the main body of the pile, some of several was not more than 50 feet high. Above this rose what resembled a spire of ice, which might be seen the river on the berg. There were mimes of spires and needle-like pinnacles upward.

So greatly did the form of the berg resemble a cathedral that one passenger remarked that he almost expected to hear the chimes sound.

The bare patches the rays of the evening sun in a shimmer of different points remained in sight until, another fall, fading astern to a small speck that brought into relief through surrounding glasses.

WAS NOT ON EXHIBITION.

Ardent Admirer of Noted Actress Made a Most Singular Request.

Miss Julia Marlowe is an unusually generous, is plaudited to the many demands that are made upon her talented patronage. In the way of autographs, photographs, interviews and the like, that there is small wonder she is not more frequently imposed upon than she is. Occasionally, however, there come remarkable requests at which even her good nature draws the line, says Success Magazine.

Some time ago, while she was playing in Chicago, she received a letter containing a plea so startling as to be almost impossible, and which was an amusing as to send her into gales of laughter. It was from a Southern young man of the middle city who stated that she had great stress on her wonderful eyes, the formerly the strong feature in both the speaking and the singing voice, holding that certain peculiarities of the vocal cords are responsible for producing full, mellow tones, she felt, of her voice, and had long been an ardent admirer of Miss Marlowe's voice and expressed that, as a special privilege, she be allowed to bring out some of young lady guests to visit the artists and let them look down her throat.

WHY HE COULDN'T SIT DOWN

Tropical Impossibility with His Neither Limbs Clothed as They Were.

"I beg your pardon, but I'm in trouble," said a man who was well dressed and plainly audited to Sergt. Tennents at No. 8 police station, Accordingly, relates the Kansas City Journal. "Can you help me out?"

"I'll do my best," answered the obliging sergeant. "Sit down and tell me about it."

"No, I simply can't sit down," said the man seriously.

"Must be serious to affect you like that" said the sergeant. "What is it?"

"You see, it is this way," said the man, "I came in on an early train from the west, and as I got up from when that train was but a few minutes from the Union depot I dressed in all haste. I had some business to attend to in a remarkable right away, and I paid my shoes out from some change I had in my overcoat pocket. But when I was standing at the corner of 12th and Kansas a moment ago, for the first time I noticed that I put on a pair of black socks and lasted tan boots, and found—"

"That you had been robbed while on the train" broke in the sergeant, interestedly.

"No," said the man "I found that I had put my trousers on backward, and I can't sit down. What I want is a private place to change 'em."

He got it.

Old-Fashioned Morals Needed.

A minister of people are protesting Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton, announced last night that he would accept the presidency of the United States in 1908. Dr. Wilson has repeatedly written his platform, stating at one occasion, and yet certain people are trying to make him a candidate for a power attributed to the President. Perhaps the time is at hand when our community realizes the opportunities of old-fashioned morals in our public and private life.—Boston Herald.

CHARGED WITH ARSON

MINISTER ACCUSED OF BURNING CHURCH BUILDING.

Three Are Positive Aspects of Case and Parsee Denies Any Participation in Incendiarism—Barbara Rob Letter Sends Chicago.

The Rev. C. O. Stoll, Methodist minister, who was arrested on a charge of having in his night shirt and trousers, set fire to the church of which he is pastor, and Mrs. Barbara Rob, a member of the church, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles H. Spaulding in Hinsdale during the latter part of November. The charges against the minister and woman were that they had conspired to burn the church building, which was valued at $10,000, and had actually set fire to the edifice on the night of Nov. 14. The preliminary examination was held behind closed doors, only the witnesses being admitted to the room. The testimony was taken down by a stenographer, and at the close of the hearing Justice Spaulding held the defendants to the grand jury, which convened in December. Stoll was released on bond of $5,000, and Mrs. Rob was released on bond of $2,000. Stoll's bond was signed by his father, Rob's by her son-in-law, Frank Letter, a prominent Chicago lawyer. The Rev. Mr. Stoll, who is a young man, came to Hinsdale from Ann Arbor, Mich., where he had been a student in the Methodist theological seminary, last June. He was married last August to Miss Ada Letter, a sister of Frank Letter, who married Barbara Rob's son, Charles Rob, a few months before. Mrs. Rob is a widow and has been a member of the church for many years. She is well known in Hinsdale, where she has lived for many years, and has many friends who believe she is innocent of any complicity in the crime of which she is charged. The Rev. Mr. Stoll is a young man of good appearance, and is large and well proportioned. He is a fluent talker and a good preacher, and is said to have been very popular with his congregation. He is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, and while in Ann Arbor was a member of the university choir. He is said to be a good student, and his teachers in the university have given him a good character for honesty and sobriety. He is said to be a hard worker in his church, and CLOTHES.

You doubtless have noticed clothing ads of attractive looking, well dressed men and wondered if you could ever appear so well.

THE CLOTHING on those half tone figures was made by artists for those particular figures.

THERE is no way you can appear to equally as good advantage unless you also have your clothes made for you by an artist.

WE use a living model for each suit we make and that model is the man that is to wear the suit.

YOU CAN'T get away from the fact that clothes, to fit perfectly, must be made to measure for the individual that is to wear them.

WOULDN'T you prefer to wear that kind of clothes when they can be had for $15.00 to $25.00 a suit and made to please you.

AS TO THE JOLO AFFAIR.

Facts Which Give the Lie to the "Anti-Imperial" Wail.

Whatever originated the insults to the flag which it is said have been made in Manila before going aboard our transports, it is certain that only a few of the men who made the first complaint were responsible for certain lively antics which were made aboard the ships without being said or they were sight but it such a case as to make it easy to account for them to account for them. Some of them should be shamed that they were accomplices in anything of the kind, but it is not true that they were generally guilty of any wrong. The charge of the "insult" given by the Filipinos, however, is not true.

What were the facts? A desperate and successful band of outlaws had terror of the country and of peaceable people who wished to earn an honest living, had a mountain fastness from which it was their practice to descend upon the adjacent territory. Every morning had been employed to bringing them a plunder that only an idle but in vain and it was found a very lucrative business. The outlaws were soon seen in the American forces with characteristic promptness. This soldiery was accompanied by their retreat and to conquer the mountain fastness which the outlaws have occupied and the people who had been made to suffer for years were happy. In no doubt in the minds of any one in this country that the outlaws complained themselves with boldness as well as treachery. The best official report, that the army has received, has been received. The outlaws were in their accustomed at dawn to attack the Americans, and added a lot of insults coined by their imagination to the affair that they had taken place and that the men on board the transport had made them as well as the men who fought the battle. The report was that the men who had been in the battle had made no such complaint and that the men who had been on the transport had made no such complaint, thinking that what had taken place in the regular skirmish with the Jolo, had been exaggerated and misrepresented. The report of the official report, that the army has received, has been received. The outlaws were in their accustomed at dawn to attack the Americans, and added a lot of insults coined by their imagination to the affair that they had taken place and that the men on board

Hafus Lewis, accompanied by one her sisters as maiden aunts in law, had remained for a few moments outside the big oak door, to see the round chang of the sinner thus which should summon to him the ministrations of the chaplain. But he did not hear it, and it seemed to him that the door in the cell had grown suddenly darker. He put in the door and looked into the narrow corridor, expecting to see the tall form of Gabriel Foulkes. He saw nothing but the face of the prisoner who wide open, and on a bed in sight. He looked around. The night was full, but evidently the wind was stirring. From begins the bay came the hoarse murmur of an angry sea. If one selfish, it was to call that night, she had been get out. Without a word, without even the English! Pray heaven the dear had been sufficient! and they had waited with him. Yet they could be sure to meet. He strained a few steps nearer, and the prisoner, who had been in the dark and hidden from his sight, turned his face to the light.

Then the unexpected happened. Hafus Lewis, exhausted with the excitement of the day, and with the long sleep for one or three hours, at a bed, fainted. Her sisters, who had been silent in the presence of the man, thought that she had died. Overhead was the sound of rushing feet and the cold chaplain, who had heard the fall of the falling orders. Astonished at the sight of the two unknown ladies, he was allowed his ease. In fling open the cell window and looked out. The cold air rushed to North was one of the two stepping and Hafus Lewis was brought to a full view of the approaching storm.

The night was dark, and great grayish blue black clouds, which hung in the horizon had changed in shape in street of a centaur. I was an arch. Beneath the sun and moon, which shone a pale phosphorescent light. Across the cold sky, pale flames, of a sickly yellow, passed noiselessly. Behind it was a dull and threatening reddish glare, as of the grumbling thunder, the falling of rain and the roar of rushing wind and water. The lights of the Cornwall had been lowered, as every land been the progress of the schooner under its steady breeze, and the cold, stretched around, black and desolate. Closing upon the ship, and upon the Diana observed a strange yellowness—a greenish yellow, like the sky, and wind from the eastern beam of the sun. A strange, dark, dark, dark, flashed few, and streaks of lame also appeared. The time of a thunderclap passed, and the wind changed. Looking the cabin door he poured into the cabin, and the cabin was a strange light which revealed Nelson curled down one of the lower mouldings. Looking the door, he poured hastily to the down sinner's in North—there. He could only hear his wife was absolutely required, and then said the to the person Sylvia would accompany him for the pilots. He could come for to the boat and recover to the boats should be considered necessary for the safety of the lives. While she was in danger his place is with her.

From the deck of the—and the sense was appalling. The clouds had closed in. The rack of light had disappeared and all was a dull, leaden, thickness. Its gray mass seemed to invert in the lower and sweep toward and upon Cape. It was as though the ship lay in the vortex of a whirlpool, as high on either side of her were piled the rough pyramidal masses of sea. The vessel lay almost on her beam ends. Not half an hour ago, strong sea of the west which had been rolled upon the north, and the north had rolled its pulling for her. Up it pitch in the second, the sea had reached its height.

The sea, pouring down through the hatchways, into the floor of the cabin from its hinges. Sylvia found herself surrounded by a wildly screaming herd which threatened to overwhelm her. She screamed aloud for all, but her voice was inaudible even to herself. Clinging to the boat which powerfully the Diana, she whispered a fine prayer for mercy. The door opened, and from out the cabin came a figure clad in black. She looked up, and the light of the sea gleaming showed her a face that was as that of the man she had expected to see. Then a pair of dark eyes looking suddenly into hers, and kept been her, and a pair of dripping arms had her across the hatchway and carried her held in the other, unconscious days that

In the terror of that moment the reason which had so long oppressed her brain passed from her. The sense of the strange man before her completed and completed her madness. The sense of the strange man before her completed and completed her madness. The sense of the strange man before her completed and completed her madness

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The fishing season is in full blast at Bayne Eaton and some trout are being caught than ever before. Yesterday caught a rainbow trout lately that measured twenty seven inches and weighed eight pounds two ounces. Later, however, the grandpa of the season was caught in the mill pond, a rain bow weighing ten pounds four ounces, by Dan Graboski. A number of others weighing from two to five pounds have been caught.]

In commenting on the fact that the officers have collected no clean up of the Lidell pigs of last year the Pellston Journal says probably all of the six who were bound over to the circuit court will go to the county jail because they cannot furnish bonds. The paper says, also that evidence has been secured for several more, some of whom ought to be convicted and a few who probably did not understand the seriousness of the offense. Warrants for these may be issued soon.

Petoskey News: Deputy game wardens paid a visit to the local plant of the Double Packing Company on Wednesday and found them in possession of fish that were undersize. Complaint was made and the case taken before Justice Kreiger, who assessed fine and costs amounting to nearly $50. The statement that the game warden goes after only the smaller fellows cannot be made in Emmet county now, for the Doan Packing Company is the biggest of them all. It is said that the fish were come that had been purchased from other fishermen and had not been handled over. In a thorough search of the plant only a few small fish were found so there can not be a whole sale law violation charged to the local establishment.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Council Room, May 2, 1906

Pursuant to adjournment the city council met in regular session at the above date, Mayor Iddings in the chair.

The following aldermen were present from 1st ward, Alderman Wilton; 2nd ward, Aldermen Cameron and Rose; 3rd ward, Alderman Pinn.

The minutes of the last session were read and approved.

The Com. on streets and sidewalks reported having an agreement drawn up for parties on Bridge St. to sign for sprinkling Bridge St.

Nelson Palmer was present and wanted lease of ground to erect houses on for use of men at the life saving station. On motion of Alderman Wilton referred to Com. on public buildings and parks with instructions to draft a lease with the men at the life saving station and submit it to the council.

The ordinances on officers salaries on motion of Alderman Cameron was taken from the table. Alderman Wilton moved that the ordinance be passed which motion prevailed as follows. Ayes all.

Ordinance No. 67—The Com. on ordinances submitted an ordinance relative to the board of health and a board officer for the city of Charlevoix and regulating their powers and duties, which was read and laid on the table for one week.

The petition for sewering and paving Antrim St. was referred to the Board of Public Works.

The Com. on License reported favorable on bills. Alderman Cameron moved that the report of the Finance Com. be adopted as the clerk is instructed to draw a warrant for $1534.37 on city depository for paying bills as allowed out of the proper funds, which motion prevailed. Bills as follows:

FARMERS TO COMBINE

OBJECT OF PACT IS TO EQUALIZE PRICES.

Agitation Is Spread of Several Neighborhood Unions to Meet in Chicago in June—Westminster Confession Is Rejected by Clergymen.

The American Society of Equity, an organization whose headquarters are in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and the States of the Northwest, has issued a circular in which it is stated that a meeting will be held in Chicago June 12 and 13, at which time another organization to be known as the marketing association will be formed. It is to be composed of farmers and co-operative marketing associations. The circular says that the idea of such a association is not to organize a trust, but to secure the benefits of co-operation in buying and selling. The Chicago conference report for 1905 just issued shows that the American imports were $10,000,000 less than those of the year before, and $20,000,000 less than those of 1903. It appears that the importers seek to restrict speculative purchases early in the year, chiefly in anticipation of war demands, and a decrease in imports would be natural under any circumstances until these stocks are distributed. The report says that the wonderful increase in the wheat land between Winnipeg and Edmonton, and fertility were created, but the general belief is that our grain fields have been done to American manufacturers or merchants. The final effect of the levy, however, cannot be judged until the close of another year or even later. Only the immediate results are visible. In conclusion, it says that the farm and outlying conditions continued there is a larger area of wheat than ever before sown in the first hands. The imports of American cotton increased from 2,500,000 to 12,500,000 pounds and their share the year ago is but by the increase of Indian and Egyptian cotton, and of some of the Russian cotton. The report shows that the supply of all products for the last year was the largest on record, and that the demand for the manufactures, on the whole, was the most satisfactory. Prices, wage and profits are at a time of prosperity. The report says that the farmer has shared in these conditions, and that the new organization is a result of his efforts and experiment to secure a better price for his product.

CHINA MAY END FOREIGN RULE

Appointment of Eight Customs Officials Stirs Other Nations.

Another important step toward the reorganization of the Chinese Empire has been taken by the appointment of eight Chinese officials to the posts of commissioners of customs, ports and cities in different parts of the empire. Hitherto the customs have been controlled by foreigners, and the revenue derived from them has been used to pay the interest on the indemnities and other obligations imposed on China by the powers as well. Yuan Shi Kai, the Viceroy of Pe Chi Li, is the most influential of the Chinese officials who have been appointed to the new posts. The appointments are regarded as a step toward the ultimate abolition of the foreign control of the customs service, which is a grievance of the Chinese. Yuan Shi Kai is a strong man, and his appointment is

STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE.

What Has Become of the Town Line and Its Twin, Free Trade with Canada?

Where has its twin brother, free trade with Canada, gone to? Where is our old friend, "the tariff is the mother of thieves?" Only a short time ago the Democratic Advertising accounting the Dingley law in the course. The laws fathers was told that if the Dingley tariff was put perfect and reversed and reduced there would be no need for the reciprocity treaties entered and the octopus would get him. He was assented, says the Port Huron Times-Herald, that unless we allowed the Canadian farmer to look his stuff across the border into Iowa without payment for duty the Canadian would pay to said that they wouldn't buy any more lowa from prairie. A year and a half ago, from Maine to Texas the cry was heard, and now from this town is shown by the fact that our sales to foreign countries, including Canada, are constantly increasing and that an effects of agricultural products during the present fiscal year have greater than the period any similar period in our history. The wind has become of those organs upon which the governor stalked a while ago, blow and his reputation as a statesman. Nothing is heard of them any more. They are not in the month of the Democratic press critic, and the free trade cry has been heard a couple of years ago. Free trade is dead.

If memory is retained, the cancer by that, having lost a footing and respect in all our industrial life, has gone back into our stock yards with a few patches left for the governor and his organs to feed upon. Free trade has been driven into the stock yards. For the purpose of this article we will have to call it free trade. The Chicago Inter-Ocean in its editorial comment on the Canadian trade, says: "It was the tariff and not reciprocity that made the trade." Free trade was the issue which were impossible to recognize. THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

CHAPTER I.

I.—THE HAIRY CATERPILLAR.

It is with no intention of delighting the curious that I put my pen to paper. Only at the urgent desire of many members of my own profession have I undertaken a task necessarily disagreeable, and do now recall the details of a case which I take to be without parallel in the records of criminology. In no special sense of the affected being there was, indeed, little that was abnormal. Maybe there are similar to his in our asylums. But that innocuous accident in the byways of self-pride, rather than in not quite fragmented paths, had placed at the will of his disordered brain weapons of a deadly potency, transformed a personal malfeasance into a great and urgent public danger.

I spent four years at Cambridge, where, though my life was a busy one, I yet found too many distractions to make such progress as I could have wished in my profession. Yet my interest in medicine grew as time went on, leaving the university I determined, having both the means and the inclination, to go abroad, to see our a space where I could throw myself into a study of those diseases of the mind of my friends and my acquaintance. The expansion of my ideas attributed one, and hither I migrated.

Bedford was a quiet place. The man who was to be associated with me in my strange case I shall call Stockman. He was twenty. My cousin, Sir Henry Gradon, K.C., M.A., M.D., F.R.S., a leader of all of remarkable personality—a surgeon of brilliant gifts and a leader for half a dozen European reputations, for an acquaintance of his, the Duke of Stockbridge, the steady application necessary for complete success. He would throw himself into the study of his profession, or the prosecution of a new experiment, with the absorbed zeal, on an unflinching and desired result to would wake of the accomplice of the hospital and lecture room, and exert on some well-grown whose real might behind the screen of an unflinch able pick, the sapphire of a rare species of wild animal, or the scale of a little known tribe of antelope. On politics he was of great nature, and heavily, in most clumsy, built, with a rugged, weather-beaten face, and a shaggy grey mane, and brown hair, somewhat grizzled above the temples. In age he was well past the forties. In dress and deportment he was careless, and he had been mistaken for a prosperous Yorkshire grazier. Yet, in spite of one of his physique, he acted as a surgeon to all the profession, and was, indeed, one of the ablest men with which he had ever had to do. Yet, I repeat, I do not see that he contributed anything of value to the solution of the problem.

It was towards the end of my second year at Bedford that the Stockmans had come to live in a golden haze, over the hills and far away, and I had met the twins under the lurgest moon, my spare time and leisure was absorbed by Miss, as which a so-lled long throw is yet, and I was drawn into the vortex of a lecture I had at day attended, when, there come to me a letter from Sir Henry, asking me to come to him at once. I did so, and found my cousin in a state of alarm, amounting almost to panic. He was pacing the room when I entered, and I was at once struck by the change in his appearance. MEANING OF GOOD CROPS.

Each Harvest Season Adds to Country's Prosperity.

Rain in the spring the country be glad, "How are the crops?" Our prosperity during the coming months depends on the harvest yet to be. In very large measure, on the answer to the question, says Sycamore, Out of the ground comes our wealth. In these years of abundant prosperity the farmer takes from the earth each harvest means products of a value of $4,000,000,000 and more than a third of this enormous sum represents the two great crops of the West—corn and wheat.

The question, "How are the crops?" means each year, therefore, as the harvest time approaches, one of vital importance, and the earlier the trend of the day and quality of the crops, the more valuable it is to the commercial community. Railway men need to know in advance the extent of the harvest, that they may prepare for the transportation of the crops to the markets. Bumper crops mean big tonnage, not only of products from the farm to the consumers, but also of merchandise from the manufacturing towns to the farms, bought by the farmers with their profits.

When railway men are assured of bumper crops they send many millions of dollars for new locomotives and cars and rails and many million more for the improvement of their roadbeds and the extension of their lines into new regions. The steel makers are jointly interested with the railway men in the harvest, for one-fourth of the enormous product of the steel mills of this country is purchased by the railways. When the crops fail the railways cancel their orders for rails and bridges and equipment, and steel descends from prices that yield good profits to those that are a question of their lives

NOTHING LIKE A BARGAIN.

This Country Will Continue to Control the Tariff and Administration.

Although the Democrats in but for one year, it may be safely assumed that by next year at the time a convenient campaign will be made that it will not be as the result of a fake reciprocity treaty or any other concession or agreement by virtue of which we may control of the machinery of our tariff law for the purposes of their administration, says the Sun Francisco Chronicle.

Appearances indicate that the Germans performance is about ready to go out in the dealings with the American principle of reciprocity trade. We give to Germany in most cases and should give it all the figures of our Happy ratio, which are our maximum rates. In return we signed Germany's minimum rates, and if we do, and our tariff we shall have to remove some substantial rates for the benefit of our honey and meat packing industries. A great many preparations have been made in this direction, and it is quite well known the "grandpa" was in no hurry to the Germans to return to the enjoyment of her minimum rates on the time was to the effect that the conference was so imminent that to use the German concessions to advantage the honey manufacturers and packers of Chicago signed, was to the effect that the president had to hurry the treasury officials to make their rulings on the interpretations of the new amendments to the tariff law, and of the statutes. The president was so anxious to do so that he called in the cabinet and it is said he had the authority of it as to rulings that he wanted and the administration was in a position to sign, or have treasury officials to sign, in the form of rulings such Tariff Board as he desired. Thus, and so he bargain made Germany and the Land and Beans are remarkable for their virtue and such will undoubtedly remain have to do with itself. Here we expect more favored nation treatment from Germany, we simply grant it to the country, which should be the exception of all treaties which contract it.

Of course the duty would be necessary to make good the duty. The cost of dressed beef would be increased by some cent per pound. The cost of dressed beef would be increased by some cent per pound. The cost of dressed beef would be increased by some cent per pound

FULFILL PROPHECY.

PREDICTIONS OF DISASTER THAT HAVE BEEN MADE GOOD.

Forces of Nature and Man at Work Have Wrought Ruin and Rain — The End Is Not Yet.

Almost incredible are the ignorance of the Christian world and what is possible ignorance in New York. One was struck by it in a letter which appeared in the Sun some months ago. The writer was moved to the pen by the fact that an article in a Sunday issue had attracted a great deal of attention in the world of medical treatment for the Disease. Although the article in question was given by an author who confessedly disagreed for an opportunity, it is claimed that spiritual therapeutic cures of cancer are made every day.

In 1892 126 patients suffering from Consumption were received in the public hospitals of France. Out of this number 101 were treated according to the medical fad and 25 according to the spiritual fad and the spiritual treatment. Of the number treated by the fad, which consists of the 101 unprepared upon Tuesday, there have been 76 deaths.

The Chronicle also made examination into the cancer fad, which is claimed by the Friends among its best results. It discovered that the Society for the Relief of Cancer in Paris, founded in 1892 the Chronicle says, "Has not yet published the statistics of any one case to show the Medical Profession in Paris." Dr. Lucien Bonaparte Wise, of Paris, says that the Society's reports are values, not the different cancers, and that the Society has not published statistics of cures in the cancer fad. The Chronicle says: "Cancer is a disease which is curable if taken early and treated by the knife. Cancer is a disease which is incurable if left to the spiritual fad." Cancer is a disease which is curable if taken early and treated by the knife. Cancer is a disease which is incurable if left to the spiritual fad." TROOPS TO DOMINGO.

SIX HUNDRED U. S. MARINES SENT TO THE ISLAND.

Cruiser Columbia Sails from Philadelphia Equipped for Hard Fighting—Disturbance with Hayti Settled by Signing of Treaty.

The cruiser Columbia sailed now from Philadelphia navy yard almost [illegible] for Santo Domingo. She carries 600 marines and hard fighting. The marines are equipped with the Lee magazine rifle, a weapon which is said to be the most deadly in use. Each man has 200 rounds of ammunition. The marines are armed for fighting and not for show. The Columbia will be joined by the Newark from the Mediterranean and by the Atlanta and Olympia from Venezuela. It is believed that the Dominican government will be asked to make reparation for the insult to the flag and for the killing of the marines. If reparation is not made, it is said, the ports will be closed and the island will be blockaded. The Dominican government is said to be in a panic of fear and to be ready to do anything that may be demanded. The Haytian difficulty has been settled by the signing of a treaty. The Haytian government has agreed to the demands of the United States in the matter of the Lamoe claim and will pay the claim in full. The Haytian government has also agreed to the demand of the United States that it will not cede any of its territory to any other power. The United States has been insisting on this for some time, and it was the main point in the controversy. The Haytian government has also agreed to the demand of the United States that it will not alienate any of its territory by lease or otherwise for a term of years

REVISION A LARGE TASK.

3000 Reasons for Letting the Dingley Schedule Stand Some Years Longer.

A change in any portion of the tariff schedules would mean an overhauling of them all. This would be a task of many months. Although work on the McKinley and the Wilson tariffs began in December, they were not reached until far along in the next year, only a short time before the congressional elections in such cases were the old Lorin Quincy Democratic party making the tariff revision was beaten by contrast. A great deal of dynamite is usually wrapped up in tariff revision schemes. The Republicans compelled Cleveland to shaping the Dingley law. They stayed for two months. Their labors were necessary at that time because the Wilson act turned such a lot of millions revenue to the government into protection to the domestic producer. The changes have provided both protection and revenue. This is one reason why the Republicans did not suffer from the disappointed sugar scoundrels in some interests by changes in the tariff schedules. Another reason was that the changes were made in an extra session which met soon after the administration had taken office for a year or more of operation before the first election took place. By that time had a chance to show that we were not plotting the ruin of the country, and was a benefit to the country.

When Mr. Dingley sent his tariff revision will take place during the session he intends during this congress. None can take place during the short session, which begins after the congressional elections. Once in a long time the chairmen of the ways and means committee, as this is a certain necessity that it may make its influence felt and as a politician, knows the ropes. The house committee on ways and means has been hard at work for three months on the tariff schedules. Other committees have been at work on the tariff schedules in their respective fields. By the time the session begins there will be a certain number of bills ready for consideration and as a politician

SEVEN UNPOPULAR OFFICIALS ARE ASSASSINATED.

Revolutionists Make Bold Work in Disposing of Richard Muse-Wise Dogs'Long Butter from Office in Illinois.

Sixty-six members of parliament were killed in the explosion of a bomb which was set off in the room where the house of commons was in session. Premier Goremykin was not present, having been injured from fifteen to twenty days before by a bomb thrown at his residence. Among the members killed are several well known members of the extreme left, including Count Ignatieff, who was the author of the agrarian reform measure, and who was generally regarded as the most popular man in the house. Many members of the extreme left were wounded, but not mortally, and they are being cared for in the hospitals. Premier Goremykin, who was not in the house when the bomb was thrown, is confined to his residence by a slight wound in the leg. The assassins have not been identified, but it is believed they belong to the revolutionary party. The house of commons was in session when the bomb was thrown, and the sensation created by the news of the outrage was intense. The house of commons is composed of 524 members, and the number killed by the explosion is the largest on record in any country. CONSULAR FEES HIDDEN.

Compensation Fixed by Congress Based on Federal Reports.

One of the important results of the consular congressional act, now being placed in operation in the department of state, is the discovery that many consular officers who have been on the pay roll, the actual amount of the fees collected by their offices. The practice has been followed in the past, in the case of consuls who in many cases permitted to retain all such fees, for the sake of the prestige of the department and in order that consuls should be able to claim the title of consul. The result was that many consuls found that the amount of such fees their offices received, would not pay the cost of maintaining the office, so they found it worth the trouble and expense. Their punishment came when Congress passed the reorganization act on the basis of substituting a fixed salary for the contingent salary, and for payment of compensation. There was no question of reducing the compensation of many of the officers, but it has certainly lessened that the consuls who failed to report the fees have suffered from material reduction.

RECORDS FOR FOREIGN TRADE.

America's Commerce with Other Nations for April Is $251,000,000.

The foreign commerce of the United States for April aggregated $251,000,000, against $207,000,000 in April, 1903, and $244,000,000 in April, 1902. There is one month in the fiscal year when the value of exports falls short of that of imports, and that is April, when the value of imports reaches the total of imports and exports for the month of April, and the sum of the total of imports and exports for the month of April, 1904, was $251,000,000, against $207,000,000 in April, 1903, and $244,000,000 in April, 1902. STREETS WRECK SCHOOL.

Use Dynamite in Class Rush with Damaging Results.

Marion, Ind., Sept. 16.—The Lincoln school in this city, attended by 1,000 children, was the scene of a dynamite explosion last night, which caused the loss of the school building, the entire school being a total wreck. The explosion was caused by the placing of a stick of dynamite under the school building by some students who had a grudge against the school. A number of students were held in the school building after the regular dismissal hour for a class rush, and it is supposed that the dynamite was placed under the building at that time. The explosion was heard for miles and was felt in the business portion of the city, a mile and a half away. The school building was a two story brick structure, and was one of the best in the city. The school was attended by about 1,000 pupils, and it is supposed that it was a case of revenge on the part of some of the students who had been held in the school building after the dismissal hour.

DURATION OF LIFE.

STATISTICS SHOW THAT LONGEVITY IS INCREASING.

Interesting Facts Concerning Births and Mortality Are Brought Out by Compilers of Figures.

Vital statistics show that owing to modern sanitary reforms and the advancement of medical science, the duration of life of human life now in all civilized parts of the world it has been noticed for a long time that there has been a marked increase in longevity. In the United States, full now the same statistics prove that in foreign countries a similar condition prevails.

Sweden heads the world in low death rate. The Swedes have kept vital statistics for more than 150 years. No other country has such amount of data. It is said that all countries can estimate the improvement in the death rate for 50, 75 or 100 years. Sweden the average mortality of each three years for the last 150 years previous to 1750 was 1 in 40. Now it is 1 in 50. The average mortality of each three years since, until it is now only 24.9 per 1,000, or the lowest in the world.

There has been also a decrease in the death rate of all ages in Sweden. The statistics show the rate for persons between 10 and 20 years of age has fallen from 5.4 per 1,000 to 2.1 to 43. In persons between 20 and 30 years of age it has dropped from 11 to 4.1 per 1,000, and for persons between 30 and 40 years from 8.1 to 3.1. The death rate as well as the rate of increase of life has gone on the Scandinavian peninsula in the lowest to be found anywhere in the world.

The software of insurance companies has a decided bearing on the decline in Holland. There the average rate of death has decreased from 40 to 35 years, and women from 42 to 41 years, while the lowest death rate among women is from 20 to 30 years of age. In Great Britain and Ireland exists the record, there has been a improvement of about 2 per cent, preceding to which kept for 30 years.

Nevertheless in the great majority of the European countries, which discussion the statistics of the last century, it is found that the average duration of life in the cities is decreasing, greater than it was 20 years ago. In Brussels municipal statistics for Berlin, Paris and several other cities show a decrease of 22 per cent in the average length of life particularly among the poor.

A Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald says, who has been investigating these vital statistics states that there is no way of arriving with accuracy the birth rate among the people of the United States although such a record is compulsory. It keep in the cities of Europe. In most American cities it is not, but enough attention has not been paid to this subject by the public health officers. Statistics are taking hold of it in the cities of statistical association, and the defect is bound to disappear with greater accuracy soon be remedied.

In New York and Massachusetts there is a birth rate given, as in Boston, in Washington the birth rate for 1902 was 34.6 death rate 19.2, in New York birth rate 28.9 death rate 22.6 in Boston birth rate 25.5 death rate 19.1. The highest birth rate in the world is in Chile, Mexico, Japan, Russia and, then come the great continents, dying other countries. The lowest birth rates are reported from Chilean, Mexicans and Paris.

MONEY PILES UP RAPIDLY.

Bequest of Benjamin Franklin the Nucleus of an Immense Fund.

A great popular industrial school, the Franklin Union, has been socially formed in Boston, and a New York for 207 Bourbon, called upon to take charge of it—on the Franklin's will, bequeathed by Benjamin more than 100 years ago. Franklin, as it said known, had the material power of Boston for a century for the benefit of the workers north of Mason and Dixon, across the New York Bank.

What is the result? The history of the Franklin Union not only shows that for retired and a sound million dollars to comes, and, in addition, $200,000 in good securities, which will accumulate interest for another 100 years, when it is expected to have grownhood a new capital of $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

To be sure, not all the millions go to Boston in the improvement of Franklin's original gift, for Mr. Carnegie may be a contributor to that, but the bulk of it is from that source and all the $200,000 now set aside is the result of Franklin's original bequest.

In the years which is the branch of time than has now elapsed since Franklin was born his gift of $5,000 will have rolled up to about $1,000,000.

Where will all this have come from? It is a puzzling calculation, however to which may seem among enough to those who put money out at interest, but which is something of a mystery. Money is the measure of values. Money is the medium of exchange of things to eat and wear and use. Had $5,000 worth of these things, existing when Franklin died in 1790, actually increased to $1,000,000 worth of them in 1890 or 1902? Had worth of them in 1890 or 1902? Had all the rest of the good things that were in existence in 1790 multiplied in the same proportion? And if $5,000 of Franklin's money in 1790 was $1,000,000 of things to eat and wear in 1890, and $1,000,000 of things $1,000,000 of things to eat and wear in 1902 and $1,000,000,000 of things $1,000,000,000 pile up to in this year? To $1,000,000,000,000 which is whether which wealth of the United States now amounts to. But at the same rate of increase the present entire wealth of the United States will have piled up, by 2000, to $1,000,000,000,000—an impossible sum.

The world itself does not hold that amount of wealth. Money never money, but it cannot save more than there is to purchase of wealth.

COMMON INSURANCE TERMS

Technical Expressions Used by Agents Translated Into Plain English.

A level premium is a premium which is the same at every payment, that is, which becomes an amount on the policy holder's mind other, says Wood's Week.

The reserve is the excess amount charged in the early years of level premium policies to offset the future to increase the premium during the later years. The reserve is invested by the company, and the proceeds from it make up the deficiencies in the later premium payments.

The annual surplus is the excess amount paid by the policy holder above the amount paid each death claim, and in expenses of management and the interest earned by the reserve plus the percentage of the required reserve.

Dividends are the portion of the surplus divided among the policy holders.

Deferred dividends are dividends paid to the policy holders annually, but are held by the company and not paid to the policy holder for longer periods, usually 5 years.

A surrender is the act of a policy holder in giving up his policy for a consideration from the company.

The surrender value, or cash surrender value, of a policy is the amount the company agrees to pay to the policy holder surrender the value of the policy. There is no surrender value for the first two years in paid-up policies.

The term "paid up" is used in the sense that no further payments are to be made on the policy, the premiums having been paid in full.

A paid-up policy is one on which no further payments are to be made, the premiums having been paid in full.

A nonforfeiting policy is one that gives the holder a right to stand in force after a certain date. In consideration of the money that he has paid in premiums.

Endowment policies, return premiums, tontines, and other investment policies are varieties of insurance in combination with the insurance.

A tontine policy is one on which the holder receives nothing if he fails to keep up the premium till he gets to the end of the period, and the survivors of the group and whole amount of the premiums paid. The amount of the premiums is greater than it would be if there were no tontine feature.

The premium is the amount of money with the additional privilege of paying it in installments, or premiums, which are adjusted so that the premium is a little more than the amount which should be paid if the policy holder should pay the premium in one sum.

STUDY OF THEATER FIRES.

Experiments in Vienna Indicate That "Fireproof" Curtains Afford Protection.

Whoever imagines that the curtain iron curtains in theaters, which are heated and rolled with such promptly in greater times and are made the subject of all kinds of elaborate regulations, are not correct, is mistaken. Not only do not many of modern experiments consist in curtains and in Vienna.

A theater was constructed in Vienna expressly having fashion, that an curtains installed with the usual fireproof curtain of iron the usual way. Instead of every possible contingency, and the curtain was provided and in the usual manner. It was quickly provided through which the curtain of asbestos that suggested and was working confirming the experiments which see what was a which the building.

In the last experiment a fire was lighted on the stage and the curtain dropped, the ventilators by the undivision below open and those on the stage closed. After the lapse of a minute or two the conservers was the curtain raised and toward the auditorium, allowing the flames and smoke to rush forth at the bottom with such force that the curtain thrust was so enlarged in bulging.

The two Italian scenic contemporaneously and were seen followed by the conflagration on the stage. In the second case, however, the curtain was not so strong as the first, because some of the flames were able to escape. If the same experiment is repeated with the curtain the flames would be confined to the theater.

Now the same experiment was repeated under the curtain conditions but this time the flames were lowered. He performed, however, proved quite the contrary.

The Saxon Diet finds that the experiments with fireproof curtains are, after, their, because, the thermometer registered a temperature of 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit. In fact, the curtain of the fireproof curtain was so overcome with heat that it was in contact with the flames, and the curtain was so hot that it was burned to ashes.

A third experiment showed that the audience can easily begin to escape if the curtain consists of asbestos fabric which they can burn but it is hard to do. It was found that if the stage and the curtain on fire and was overcome by the conflagration on the stage, the curtain could thus be the direction where closed the stage be closed and the curtain and thus a refuge and protection from a refuge and protect on the front of and away from the stage.

SOLDIERS' STORIES

ENTERTAINING REMINISCENCES OF THE WAR.

Granite Sermon of Stirring Season Witnessed on the Battlefield and on Camp Veterans of the Rebellion Recite Experiences of Thrilling Nature.

"There are several ways in Chicago" said the veteran who had a pleasant acquaintance with the Sammy Angel in front of Chattanooga in the summer of 1863. "Some of them are obvious, others being effected in long, musty old rooms shut off from the assault on First Wagner. Much concentration of siege works, the best achieved this Sammy, Colonel Wilmot Carroll F. W. Sewell, his chief engineer (who died in New York a few days ago), set engineers to full some thing like this to do. At all events the General and his staff seemed very busy in making plans that gave the men lots of work.

"They knew when Gillmore, until Lieutenant Peter S. Michie of the United States regulars to examine the march of events. They heard a good deal about what he had to do and patiently listened to that evening but they did not know how well the Lieutenant could be placed there. Then, I think, when Colonel Sewell, Colonel Newton and Mr. Lyman started from the swamp on a prodigious expedition, and they began to guess at the object, they were not so pleased as they called them. Sewell, Newton and Lyman had plans, and when they had made sure to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant that they had plans they had pushed it forward between Gillmore's ears. Then, I think, the men were good, and they picked up the needle, pick and carried it until they began to come to the other side again.

"They went down a good many times, but the men of the 1st Regiment Engineers, and their engineers were observant as well, and every night they came back with tangled over the sections and advice, which, if it did not help the Lieutenant, it did the men. Sometimes it was about wire as this, a hanging couple when they returned to send general, as any of us had time to think, that they had found that they had failed what they were sent for. Sometimes it was about the weather.

"It always rained when that Fort Sumter was hard hard enough and it was the weather. Sometimes it was about the men, and then Sewell, Newton and Lyman would be called on to explain some work by the men

BUSINESSLIKE GOVERNMENT

City of England That Is Run on a Simple Yet Very Effective System.

The government of Manchester is a business. Its liabilities are about $150,000,000, its assets are about $175,000,000; and the deficiency about $25,000,000, represents the amount which the ratepayers have to contribute each year, writes Samuel Merwin in Success Magazine. The fact does indicate that it is a big fund book. The management of this big business is absolutely in the hands of the city council acting through its committees. As I have said, the system is simple and the responsibility cannot be evaded as it can be in a bicameral or complicated system like that of New York or Chicago or Newark. The people know what they do for them and they know who has to do it. But, even on that, big issues are confronting the average voter. And then, too, it is well to remember the figures which a city council in Ohio or in any municipality in America believes the people of Manchester propose to know what is done with their money. They have to deal with the two men whose business it is to investigate and publish, as reason indicates every tendency of the council toward carelessness or extravagance. Money is the element on the committee permitted to speak where money is in that they are managing with such fluent ease.

These men are known as "elective officers." They are elected directly by the people, and the direct operation their method is the most all the better from giving the people, "freedom from the tyranny of party ties to the council. They have no one to pit against the people of Manchester but it rights to understand what has gone on, and, subsequently what has gone on, gives one published weekly in the Manchester "City News."

Poor Father!

Mamma—Why do you want to marry my daughter, sir, did you just marry for alms?—Judge.

The man in our business man in Michigan who would listen for a moment to suggestions involving changes and experiments in connection with a line of trade or in the movement of an industrial enterprise which was at that very time carrying his highest expectations. There is not a working man in Michigan who would willingly accept the responsibility in connection with such positions which both could be avoided. The application of every day common sense and ordinary judgment will determine the action and position of merchants and farmers and manufacturers and workingmen of Michigan on all the important issues of the coming campaign.

The promise that Mr. Bryan is to take part in the coming campaign in Michigan, will be productive of very little added hope of success among the democrats of Michigan have high regard for Bryan but they have at very length to avoid any positive declaration on the subjects he has usually made emphasis. Many of them refused to follow his lead when leadership a greater number opposed his free coinage, and the extreme tariff views are not more acceptable to Michigan democrats than to the voters of Bryan's own state. Mr. Bryan might change the trend and stop the wide spread disaster in all states in which the interests of the people extend, but he could not turn those subjects without greater credit to successful republican performance than had ever been suggested to democratic promise.

Wherever may be permitted to accept the democratic nomination for governor this year will entitle him the support of the navy traveling men which was given to Prof. Denis two years ago. The traveling men who opposed the republican candidate through the last state campaign has been persuaded that he would do not get to railroad direction and pass control. Many of them became convinced before election day that the charges were false, and there is now not a traveling man in Michigan who does not admire Prof. Warner for his good work in their behalf in street opposition to the very influences some of them feared would control him. Michigan traveling men represent an aggressive and influential element and their cordial favor for Governor Warner and the republican state ticket will be a source of strength and encouragement to republican candidates in every district and county in the state.

—W. Loveday, of East Jordan, will manage the rebuilt Charlevoix opera house a month, when it is opened. "Max" has had experience in the work and will doubtless give us good attractions.

—Fred Bellinger has installed a full place of business in the Bellinger jewelry store, a series of machines for grinding and fitting glasses, and other optical work. They are operated by an electric motor, and constitute an up to date establishment for the fitting and adjusting of eye glasses.

—The law and order boomers has issued its edict against the nickel-in-the-slot grand dukes, and the machines are all out of commission. The society says resort hotels will be made no exception—that the machines will not be permitted to operate here, inasmuch as the society has the law on its side it looks as if there would be more nickles with which to buy bread and cheese.

—Petoskey News: The big auto from Charlevoix is becoming quite a familiar sight on the streets of Petoskey. It is a fine thing to have such a machine that may be had to take parties out among the resorts and it is a wonder that some enterprising person in this city does not take the matter up. Of course there was one here a few years ago, but it was too heavy for its power, hence its trips were not satisfactory, which accounts for its going out of business.

—The water tower is rapidly approaching completion. The last section of the tank is being placed and riveted, 155 feet above the ground. The tower will probably be ready for the "baptism" about July 1st.

—The SENTINEL is receiving the largest and finest line of job stock ever brought to Charlevoix, and a large amount of new and up to date job type. The office is turning out some fine work and much of it these days.

—A movement is on foot to induce the council to install four arc lamps on the top of the water tower. Besides being a very excellent thing for that part of the city, it would be a great aid to navigation, and would be a great landmark from the lake.

—The movement for a Fourth of July celebration in Charlevoix is well under way, and it is certain that there will be a good time here on that day. Charlevoix is the best place in Northern Michigan in which to spend the 4th.

—Insectcrs are already arriving by every train and boat. J. W. Teasdale and family, and The Bassleer family, of St. Louis, are in their north side cottages, and several cottages on the Belvedere side are occupied. Mrs. John C. New and family, of Indianapolis, will open their cottage next week.

—The U. S. lighthouse tender Dahlia, in charge of Mate Olsen, arrived here Saturday. Capt. Tawes joined the ship here by rail, having returned from Baltimore, where he has been on a leave of absence. Capt. Tawes, who is a salt water sailor, likes the lakes so well that he will remove his family from Baltimore to Chicago.

—The beet crop is looking splendid, and the thinning process has begun. The sugar company people are feeling good over present prospects for the crop. A farmer not far from Charlevoix who would not contract for beets was recently bemoaning the cold, backward season. He said "Every crop is a failure but the darned beets." While every crop is not a failure but beets, there is no better crop for farmers than beets.

—Norwood Grange is the latest addition to the Order in this county, which numbers sixteen members. The new Grange was organized Friday evening by deputy E. B. Ward. It is officered as follows: Master, John Hughes; Overseer, W. H. Mayne; Lecturer, Miss W. H. Deekers; Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Durham; Secretary, Mrs. John Hughes; treasurer, A. F. Valentine; Steward, Alex. Campbell; assistant Steward, Freeman Valentine; Lady asst. Steward, Carie Cook; Gate Keeper, Hood Genette; Ceres, Mrs. A. Campbell; Flora, Rose Genett; Pomona, Louise Genette. The Subordinate Grange meeting will be held Tuesday evening June 19th, and every two weeks there-after.

—We shall answer no more East Jordan Enterprise questions, nor reply to any more of his maudlin apologies about county affairs. It is a waste of time. That paper has absolutely no regard for truth, and everybody knows it. The Enterprise is simply a journalistic phonograph—it is singing the same old songs that it has been grinding out for three years. Its lies have been refuted repeatedly, but still the machine keeps up the monotonous routine. We will, however, make this exception: We challenge the Enterprise to name the man who received $[illegible] for services for which the law provides but $[illegible]. If it fails to do this, we shall brand him for what he is. Now, Mr. Lorraho, talk business or shut up.

WON'T GO TO MACKINAC

ANNUAL FRESH WATER RACE MAY COME NEARER.

Mackinac Clubs Don't Shell Out as Chicago People Would like—Petoskey or Charlevoix Talked of.

The Chicago special of 7th says: The mish-taked-of Mackinac race may not be held after all. This was the decision reached at a meeting of the committee at the Chicago Yacht club house. The committee will recommend some other objective point, perhaps Petoskey or Charlevoix, to the boat owners' association.

This action was taken after a thorough canvass had been made of the subscription list to the cup. It was found that a little over $1,000 had been subscribed, and that all but a few dollars came directly from the members of the Chicago Yacht club. The first announcement was that the Mackinac people were going to raise the money for the cup, and that the Chicago Yacht club would make up any deficiency up to $1,000. It turns out now that the Chicago people are giving the cup and the Mackinac bunch are willing to give enough to cover the deficiency. It is understood that Mackinac gave $250 last year to the motor boat racer, but that it has not subscribed one-fourth of that amount to the loping for the Chicago Yacht club race.

Petoskey and Charlevoix each have many strong points in their favor as a finishing point for this great fresh water race, and would no doubt be very glad to get the race.

The cup committee decided to correspond with these places and find out what they will do by way of subscriptions to the cup fund if the race is finished in their harbor. Fifteen fast boats are now assured for the race, and if it is held, one of the largest crowds will accompany the yachts on the guest boat that has ever been known in the history of the club.

Another Question.

No. IV.—Why do we want more $50,000 when it costs over $[illegible] more to run the county per year than for a less price on the new Boyne Circuit.

In the first place, we do not owe $50,000. Last fall the Citizen had the figures at $15,000, and that was a guess. Now it is $20,000. Why not make it $30,000? It is a lie anyway, and one lie is no worse than another. What authority has Mr. Wilson for saying that we owe $50,000? What is gained by lying? As a matter of fact, the debt of Charlevoix county is less than $5,000.

Regarding the latter phase of the question, that straw has been threshed out long ago. We have shown that in two years the small pox bills were over $10,000. We have shown that in the same period we bought a poor farm and built a county poor house—all outlay, but an outlay that, in its benefits reached into future years.

It is as fair to assert that the issue of $50,000 in bonds to build a court house adds that amount to the running expenses of that county for that year, as it is to make the assertion quoted from the Citizen.

In 1905 the assessed valuation of Charlevoix county was $[illegible]; in 1906 it is $3,515,186. These figures cover a large area of ground, in answering the question. They represent progress, development, increased population, increased public responsibility and these in their turn represent increased public expense.

—Petoskey News: It must be a matter of some satisfaction to the owners of automobiles in and near this city that the horsemen are taking enough interest in the inevitable to train their horses not to be afraid of the machines. Nearly every day some of the better class of horse owners in Petoskey may be seen compelling their animals to get near enough to the auto to see that they will not be hurt by them. By this plan it will soon do away with the danger of runaways that have always been used as an argument against the horseless vehicles. Mr. Hamadell predicts that there will be at least twenty-five of the motor cars in the city this summer, in which event it behooves horsemen to get their driving animals used to them.

The Primary Election.

According to unofficial reports that have leaked out since Tuesday, there was what purported to be a "primary election," on that day. There is great lack of knowledge concerning the particulars of the event, and, consequently information is hard to get. We shall, however, continue to make diligent inquiry, and we hope to be able to give the public the desired information in our next issue.

LATER

Since writing the above, information has filtered in confirming the report that there was actually a "primary election" in Charlevoix Tuesday. Very appropriately there was a frost the same morning. We understand both incidents occurred throughout Charlevoix county, but we have not learned that any damage was done to sugar camps or early vegetables. Both are expected to be safe, and, if harvested in due time.

Speaking seriously, if ever a farce was enacted under the guise of reform, and clothed with the majesty of the law," it was on Tuesday last, when the button was pressed "that set in motion the wonderful machinery that was fabricated by the last legislature to promote "honesty in elections."

If that body had set itself about formulating a system of occult mysticism, hedged about with an impenetrable barrier of thorns and barbed wire, it could not have succeeded better. The system where it created no record the public will is a child of nonsense upon its face and an insult at that. For months the "educational bureau," through the medium of the state press, has been holding kindergarten schools in an effort to enlight the voter, and the voter knows less about it now than he did when the child was born. We say it with a deep sense of the awful responsibility we are taking, that the primary election system yet into effect last Tuesday is the most stupendous fraud that ever encumbered the official records of the State or Michigan. As an election measure it is barren of good. Its complexity is its weakness. There is not one other election measure enacted in years that could match it for foolishness, and that was the fire insurance law.

In Charlevoix there were about sixty votes cast. Half of the number who went to the polls to vote found they had not been registered, and were not permitted to vote. And we are told that, under the provisions of this wonderful law, any voter who failed to enroll on the first Monday in April cannot vote until 1908! As a matter of fact a large percentage of the voters of Charlevoix refused to enroll because the law compelled them to declare their politics—the initiatory foolishness of an idiotic law. The average American has very much of the "none of your business" element in his nature which prompts him to keep his politics under complication.

In the county the majority for the direct nomination proposition was overwhelming, and state senator was about 17½. A significant feature of the election is the fact that out more than 3 thousand votes, were cast in the county.

Delegates to the republican county convention are as follows: Township of Charlevoix, George Chamberlain; first ward, H. A. Emery, F. W. Mayne; W. J. Wood, second ward, J. L. Finch, John Dougherty, Alonzo Hanshaw, S. A. Martin; third ward, E. W. Coulter, E. E. Armstrong, A. E. Cross.

—Petoskey News: The report has been given out that the Northern Michigan Transportation Company will run a steamer from this port for day evening excursions to Charlevoix this summer. While it is not known for sure that this step will be taken for the exact reasons therefor, it is known that there were many complaints from the regular passengers on this company's boats last season about the rowdyism that was displayed on some occasions when these excursions were on. As there is no way to pick out this class of people and punish them by refusing to sell tickets to them the entire people must suffer for the conduct of their delightful tribe on these lake palaces, the Missouri and Illinois, hereafter.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Episcopal Church.

Services at the Episcopal church Monday evening, June 18th, 7:30, Rev. C. T. Stout officiating.

Baptist Church.

Preaching Sunday morning and evening by the pastor.

Bible School 11:45 a m.

Junior Union 3 p. m.

B. Y. P. U. 6:30 p. m.

A cordial invitation to all.

The Children's Day exercises at the Baptist Church Sunday evening were quite a success. A splendid program was rendered, in a way that showed the taste and talent of the pupils and reflected honor upon the officers and teachers. A good offering was made for the Sunday school work of the Baptist Publication Society.

Congregational Church.

Children's Day was very much enjoyed. The exercises by the children in the evening were excellent and were made possible by the painstaking labor of the committee in charge.

The solos by members of the choir were also very much appreciated.

Missionary service at the church Thursday evening at 7:30 under the leadership of Mrs. Hardick.

Communion service and reception of members Sunday morning. In the evening the pastor will preach on the "The Value of a Great Purpose.

Methodist Church.

Subject of sunday morning sermon: "The Sabbath shall it be a holyday or holiday?" Evening topic "The Fiction of Sin."

Junior League at 3 o'clock.

Epworth League at 6:30.

Dr. Floyd, of Cincinnati, gave an able address on missionary life and work in India, on Thursday last in M. E. church. The evils of child marriage, widowhood and the caste system were graphically described and the benefits of Christian mission shown.

This week Tuesday and Wednesday the Grand Traverse District Convention of W. H. M. S. of M. E. Church is in session. Delegates are present from Bingham, Petoskey, Harbor springs, Holland, Macatawa, Kalkaska and Traverse City. Mrs. F. S. Haines of Petoskey is president.

Miss Harge of Indianapolis gave a magnificent address on Tuesday night to a good congregation and also to children Tuesday afternoon.

A banquet on Wednesday closed the convention.

The Harbor Work.

Mr. Gaylord, of Ludington, who has the Charlevoix harbor contract, is here to begin work. The contract consists in constructing a revetment on the south side of the upper end of the village, and a rebuild of the revetment on the south side of the upper harbor. The work will last forty days, mission.

Capt. Mantry, who was U. S. inspector on a contract here a few years ago, is here in the same capacity on this work, which is a guaranty that it will be properly done.

NORWOOD NEWS.

The L. A. S. will meet with Mrs. Moore on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. L. H. Pearl of Central Lake has been visiting here for a few days.

Mr. Ward of Charlevoix was here last Friday and organized a Grange, with 15 charter members.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ferguson and daughter are visiting at Chicago last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Ferguson with their two children and Miss Evelyn Chase arrived from Chicago Sunday evening.

The revival meetings will continue this week. Rev. Mr. Vickery of Charlevoix, and Rev. Mr. Wynn of Central Lake, will be here.

There was a large attendance at the Children's Day exercises Sunday evening. The children certainly did the program very nicely, and the church was beautiful with roses and flowers.

Mr. Elias who has charge of the missionary work among the Indians in this part of the state was here one day last week and assisted Rev. Mr. Durham in the revival meetings now in progress.

"Not as I know of, why do you ask?"

"Nothing, nothing, only thought I had a pain with you last night. The pain is all right now, I suppose, and I thought you looked as if you had walked. Don't think of it, old fellow, it's nothing."

WAGES AND THE TARIFF.

Contention of Free Traders That It Set at Naught by Existing Conditions.

One Mr. Bricker writes to the Baltimore clerisle, assuming that the tariff bill makes attempts to force an increase of a certain watch company, think it pays for wages. The conclusion drawn, both by Mr. Bricker and the friends to that the railway wage base endeavor impelling watches (or rather they use to affirm it little cost) have always been the contention of the free traders, says the Lowell (Mass.) Citizen, but high tariffers have attempted some pleasantries, that it seem reduced prices lessened a profitable price, and seem raised home industry. If the Welsh business is so economically profitable, why do not more people make watches. Capital is always starting innovative investment, and watchmaking is not a monopoly. Whoever a time in Elgin selves to heavy duties on foreign competing productions, and to set up a home concern, and in the place in American the right to cutting down the tariff. He knows as well as the Lowell citizen does how, if he can enlarge the wage at the same time that he can reduce or suspend duties on competitive foreign goods, he can make a profitable business. Nobody cares a rap for the wages of watchmakers in Switzerland, or Elgin, or Lowell, except as they are a factor in the cost of watches. The fact that the wages of watchmakers are a factor in the cost of watches is the reason why we want to make watches here, and why we want to make them cheaper than they can be made in Switzerland. The wages of watchmakers are a factor in the cost of watches, and we want to make watches cheaper than they can be made in Switzerland, and we want to make them cheaper than they can be made in Switzerland because we want to make a profit on the business. If we can make watches cheaper than they can be made in Switzerland, we can make a profit on the business, and we can pay the wages of watchmakers

WAGES AND THE TARIFF.

Contention of Free Traders That It Set at Naught by Existing Conditions.

Our Mr. Bickert writes to the Buffalo Herald, assuming that the tariff on sashes amounts to more on the output of a certain watch company than it pays for wages. The conclusion drawn, both by Mr. Bickert and the Herald, is that the railway men and others toupeling watches have to pay this amount for the importunity they use in addition to their coin. It has always been the contention of the free traders, since the Lowell (Mass.) cotton mills, that the manufacturer some graduation, that it soon reduced prices beyond a prohibitive price, and upon colonial home industry. If the watch business is so remunerative proposition why do not more people make watches? Capital is always seeking remunerative investment, and watchmaking is not a monopoly. Wherever a true tariff exists by luxury duties on foreign competing productions, as in most lines in every country in the time-to-time moving the tariff to cutting down the tariff. But Congress on the contrary has done just the reverse. It has raising the tariff as the price of labor rose, and kept it higher of independent industries in which the duty is a profit in excess of protection. It is free to be determined whether Mr. Bickert's women, or others have their watches made in Europe and surreptitiously smuggled home and pinned with watches, and whether the cost is the labor taken above our nation will pay a dollar a day, and if so, what gain gives us a lot of cheap watches. The free-trade idea, in contrast, is a people where wealth accumulates faster and more donors. SPOIL BRIDAL HOME.

DESTRUCTIVE WORK OF VANDALS IN TOLEDO.

House Prepared for Bride to Be Injured and Furnishings Torn Down and Reduced to Shreds—Water Damage More than 10c.

Vandalism, supposed to have been committed by a disgruntled lover, was practiced upon the home in Toledo prepared by David H. Young for his bride, who was a bride of more than one week ago. Young and Miss Lucile Ferguson were married in Detroit. Early in the morning neighbors noticed that the house, standing vacant, was lighted up, and that the lights were being moved from room to room. At intervals during the morning the neighbors noticed that the house was lighted up, and that the lights were being moved from room to room. The house is a new one, and has been prepared for the reception of the bride and groom. Young and his bride were married in Detroit, and were not expected home until next week. The house was new in design. The furniture had been delivered, and was in place. The furniture was of a very costly character, and was in the finest condition. The house was not in order, and it appeared that the vandals had spent the night in the house. The furniture was torn to shreds, and the contents of the bedrooms were ripped to shreds. The furniture was ruined, the bedding was torn to shreds, and the floors were covered with water. The water was turned on in the house, and it appeared that the vandals had left the house with the water running. The damage to the furniture, and to the house, will amount to more than $10,000. The house was prepared for the reception of a bride, and the furniture was of the finest and most costly character

MARKET THAT IS CHEAPEST

How Free Trade Would "Improve" the Condition of Domestic Workers.

Mr. Henry M. Whitney, leading tariff reformer in Massachusetts, has an article in the inter-Nation arguing for tariff revision. He sets with characteristic candor and confidence some points from the free trade creed. It is the love of facts that overwhelms other minds of the ordinary quality, says the Buffalo News.

Mr. Whitney says that not over 10 per cent of the workers in agriculture could be replaced by foreign competition if all the tariffs were removed. That would mean every 10 thousand wage-earners, thousands of all the 17 million farm laborers, "whose condition necessarily must suffer, would be improved by being able to supply their several wants in the cheapest market."

This bland claim assertion is not doubted by Mr Whitney to be taking. He is so serious a point of view, so unconscious of the circumstance of current American wages in the face of free trade with standard wages, that he is promoting everything that American labor has and yet is paid on a basis of from a quarter to a half of the rate paid in the United States. He is sorry for labor that has been worse than it is of every 100 people would be also, if free trade had taken things if there were no tariff of late.

All this is on the assumption that free trade would not affect wages. But if it did affect them, and made them more than half as much as they would be, Mr. Whitney does not see that the means to pay the higher wages is the tariff, the money in the pocket of the wage earner, the money in the pocket of the man who makes the tariff possible. And yet he is a tariff reformer, and a free trade advocate, and a leader of a party that would be ruined if the tariff was taken off.

Consul Masterson at Aden, the seaport city of Arabia, reports that all vehicles imported during the past year improvement of them came from the United States.

The American hickory vehicles are preferred to those of India and Hong Kong because of their staying qualities. It has been found that the American built wagons, carriages and carts withstand the hot dry climate better than any others.

All of the 135 public carriages in Aden are of American manufacture and are lightly constructed so that one horse may pull four passengers.

The real Arab of wealth and fashion likes American built to the United States better than any other. He also uses American harness because the leather of other countries are too heavy and cumbersome.

TARIFF REPEAL NOT NEEDED

San Francisco Should Not Be Rebuilt with Steel from Abroad.

We do not believe San Francisco is a party in the cry for a repeal of the tariff on structural steel while the city is rebuilding. There is no occasion for such repeal, says the Pleasanton Times. American manufacturers can supply the demand. Financing skills can do it and would get every work with if necessary that rebuilding should not be retarded. Yet at office hardly greater than would be paid for foreign material if the tariff should be removed. In a recent hearing before the committee on merchant marine and fisheries, Judge Dalzell, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, quoted the prices on plate, angles and sheets. By that agreement it does seem the export prices of these materials, whether Germany, Belgium or Belgium on structural shapes range from $1.75 to $1.85, while the American price is about $1.60. And big tonnage, the price delivered would give an appreciable advantage to the San Francisco builders, for simple rate saving money from the seaport.

President Roosevelt recited the tariff contribution to our rapid and easy world, he a considerable exception on the part of American to extend an invitation to foreign manufacturers to ship our the material for rebuilding the city. Why, for instance, should the Crown well Lumber and to paying a duty of seventy-five cents exports to rebuild San Francisco by world lumber, there is no call for the Oregon shipments, from Oregon to us in the aggregate, from Oregon to us in the action to foreign lumber. Yet, we believe that this country can supply the demand. Financing skills can do it and would get every work with if necessary that rebuilding should not be retarded. This opposing vote of two democrats and one republican to the railroad rate bill, on the occasion of its passage in the United States senate last Friday, gives little encouragement to making use of the senate minority on that question as a party cut issue in any direction. But it is satisfactory to note that the ratio at least was halted on getting on the wrong side of important public questions is not less than two democrats to one republican.

Free tariff is going to be a leading issue this year and the Republicans can't dodge it. This statement from an authoritative democratic source will be in all advertising expenditures. It's straight from the shoulder, and is presented by the opponents of the tariff as why affordable goods the republicans will do the rest. The average republican would almost as soon think of dodging the devil than of dodging the issue of standing a strong stand.

The fact that the members of the congressional campaign committee had to retire personally to raise a campaign fund, and that it took several days of desperate to raise enough to pay the expenses of the committee, show that even the democrats of Michigan are pretty well pleased with the present situation. Democrats are not and are not looking for any sort of a change. Nevertheless Free Trade tariffs may be a good rallying cry.

If the Republicans of Michigan are to fully celebrate their county conventions are to be held as usual for the election of delegates to the Republican state convention. Democratic county conventions will be held in every county in the state on the same day, Monday, June 18. Delegates at these county conventions are to be selected in townships, towns and precincts by the customary republican caucuses of election districts, and there is to be only change from past procedure is for as delegates to the state convention are concerned. The election of delegates to the county conventions takes place Tuesday, June 12, at the same day in every county.

We have had some clamoring for primary reform in our democratic conventions and pacing in their cloaks that we would never get it. Let us be done with these hypocrisies and compromises. The above statement and the declaration which follows it, and made by one of the speakers at the recent Muskegon dollar banquet, and the speaker's statement was not attacked or denied. The convention is straight, but it is more than a little tardy and it isn't so far reaching as it should have been. What about the democrat local bosses in every county and town and village who were clamoring for primary reform as a campaign issue, but who refused to make a single move to it when it was offered them? They were just as insincere and hypocritical as the democrat convention performers.

Wealthy Arabians Have Taken to Riding in American Vehicles.

Milk white Arabian steeds and all the other proud or spirited animals are carrying for travel or pleasure are being displaced by American built two-wheel and carts.

Instead of mounting a fleet-footed camel on a journey with the speed of the wind to make his excursions into the desert the Arabian chooses only a buggy or a cart built in Indiana or New York and driven off the shelves of Chicago.

Consul Masterson at Aden, the seaport city of Arabia, reports that all vehicles imported during the past year improvement of them came from the United States.

The American hickory vehicles are preferred to those of India and Hong Kong because of their staying qualities. It has been found that the American built wagons, carriages and carts withstand the hot dry climate better than any others.

All of the 135 public carriages in Aden are of American manufacture and are lightly constructed so that one horse may pull four passengers.

The real Arab of wealth and fashion likes American built to the United States better than any other. He also uses American harness because the leather of other countries are too heavy and cumbersome.

Sandwich Under Any Other Name Easier for the Waiter to Spell

A busy man hurried into one of the uptown restaurants and asked for a sandwich. He was in a hurry, and he was in a hurry, he said, in ring up fares on the elevated railroad, called to the waiter behind the counter.

Bring me a sandwich, and make it quick! I'm in a hurry.

The waiter pulled out a pad of paper and wrote something on it.

"Make every second thoughtless on the part of the waiter what would be for the chosen foreign affairs." Mr. Roosevelt said. "Our relations with the world are the business of the people of the United States, and the business of the people of the United States, and the business of the people of the United States, and

NEBRASKA YOUTHS REST UNDER TERRIBLE ACCUSATION.

Said to Have Murdered their Father with Object of Robbing Him of $700—Hitchcock county, Nebraska, Crime.

Jesse and Nelson Hoover, aged respectively 19 and 14 years, are held in the county jail at Trenton, Dundy county, on the charge of murdering their father, Jesse Hoover, near Arapahoe, Furnas county, Nebraska, on the night of Thursday, September 12. The boys are held without bond, the county attorney of Furnas county having filed a complaint against them charging them with the murder of their father. The boys are held in Dundy county because there is no jail in Furnas county. The murder was committed in Hitchcock county, but the county seat of that county is 100 miles from the place of the murder, and there is no jail in that county. The boys are held in Dundy county because it is the county adjoining Furnas county, and the county in which the murder was committed. The murdered man was a well-to-do farmer, and it is alleged that the boys killed their father with the object of robbing him of $700. The murder was committed Thursday night, September 12, and the boys were arrested the following Sunday morning at the home of their father, near Arapahoe, by Sheriff Beal, of Furnas county, who had been informed by the neighbors that the boys had been boasting that they had killed their father and had the money to show for it. The boys had been seen to go to town with a team and buggy, and had purchased a new set of harness, and had been seen to have a large amount of money in their possession. The boys had been working for their father on a farm near Arapahoe, and had been seen to go to their father's house on the night of the murder, and were seen to come from the house the morning after the murder, and to return to their father's house and remain there until they were arrested. The boys had been seen to have a large amount of money in their possession the morning after the murder, and they had been seen to go to their father's house the night of the murder, and to return to town with a team and buggy

Lions Stolen Twenty-Three Years Ago Gets Upon a Woman's Conscience.

A remarkable case of the practice of a guilty conscience is that of a woman who living on the Pacific coast, has been for 23 years and who is, at this moment, living not treading in the Lake Michigan region. Mrs. Ward (Z. Y.) correspondent of the Detroit Tribune.

On the occasion of one of Thoreau's visits my uncle John Quincy Adams, who was quite an amateur in the matter of collecting Indian relics, a number of which he had picked up in his walks, showed Thoreau a specimen of a pipe which was supposed to have belonged to the Indian who was pushed from the counter to the floor. I, a girl of 13, in front of his door, observed Thoreau, and I felt an uncontrollable desire to get into the house. Accordingly I crept up the back stairs, and, unknown to any one, I secreted the pipe in my pocket and hurried out of the house. Thoreau was gone, and I was glad of it, for I felt very guilty. I hid the pipe in the back yard, and I felt very, very sorry that I had taken it. I felt that I could never look Thoreau in the face again, for I was sure he knew I had taken the pipe. I felt so miserable that I could not eat my dinner, and I was glad when I was sent to bed early that I might be alone with my misery. I felt that I could never, never, never, as long as I lived, look Thoreau in the face again. I felt that I could never look anybody in the face again. I felt that I was a thief and that everybody would know it. Wrapped in the misery of that night I made a vow that I would never, never, never, as long as I lived, do anything that would make me feel as I felt that night. I cried myself to sleep, and I felt that I could never, never, never, as long as I lived, do anything that would make me feel as I felt that night. I felt that I could never look Thoreau in the face again. I felt that I could never look anybody in the face again. I felt that I was a thief and that everybody would know it. CHAPTER VIII.

I was not feverishly interested with this murder. I gape. He was an elderly man, fair haired, with white whiskers, stark naked, stiffly from under his feet, cut and bruised, bruised and suffer every extra cent. He seemed to with a touch of the dog in which Dundee.

"Did you see a man running?" he asked.

"No, I didn't see no man."

"Are you certain? Do you know what I mean?"

"Yes, I know what you mean, but I didn't see no man."

"Did you see anything?"

"Yes, I did."

"What did you see?"

"I saw a man."

"Where?"

"Down the road."

"Which way was he going?"

"Toward the Lowland." he said.

"He had only popped into the station and left his clothes there, said. He demanded of me a sleigh and good horses, for the time I had with Mr. Jim, and it was necessary to send for others from a neighbor. He was very anxious about being early enough. At last he drove away, and he has not come back."

"Which way went with him?"

"Twas not about me."

"Did he say where he was going?"

"No, sure, there, only I heard him say to team to follow the eastern road which is towards the Rowan Fourche."

And while he waited for the horses, he did so.

"As I have said, at first he almost me with the two Jim, Indeed, only Here, I was surprised at his knowledge of German. For before he had spoken a word of English. For the rest, he sat by himself, reading, in the inn room."

"Dunno to show us there."

"Was engaged in single file after the accident through the thin passages in the inn room, I gather set aside for the guests' use. It seemed a comfortable sort of apartment, with green wall paper and regular cheap carved with people antimacassars. On the central table was a lamp, and beside it lay a number of those dingy books that seem to be born of all nations. Tracks made for them in some, and as he sorted through the pile of time tables, passages and little papers, we stood waiting upon a chair. Suddenly he stopped in his search with a little grunt of satisfaction, and drew out a little coffee, on. Jim, I looked over his shoulder. It was a German time table."

"Gentlemen, I am planning a ghastly story," I suggested, with an uneasy smile as I looked out at the question.

"I know you are tired and hungry, my friend," he said, and "but please wait."

He laid another "Lonsdale" of coffee down on the top of the pages, and I saw the little tracks left by his fingers in the dust on the table. "Gentlemen," he said, "I have found the train that left Jim Here today."

"Which way did it go?"

I stared into it paper ran along the table. Suddenly he stopped in his search with a little grunt of satisfaction, and drew out a little coffee, on. Jim. I looked over his shoulder. It was a German time table.

Vigorous Initiative and Consistent Advocacy in the Railway Rate Matter.

It must not be forgotten, while the refinement of discussion of the details of a railway rate-regulation bill is in progress in the senate, that congress is pledged to the passage of such a bill, which is already sure of receiving a law, says the Tribune. The principle of rate regulation has been established and has been accepted. All else is the application of the principle that is now under discussion.

It was not so very long ago that the advocates of the principle found some hesitancy. There were many troubles with which to contend. The business community feared that changes would be made in railway rates of transportation. What had brought about the general acquiescence in the wisdom and propriety of such legislation? Nothing but the vigorous initiative and consistent advocacy of President Roosevelt himself. The president knew full well that there must be some such power in representative governments among our institutions of freight, but he took the risk that the people would become concerned enough to elect commissioners who would make the law operative in harmony with the aim of the law. The people would wait for no public relief and seemingly no law given by congress could give opportunity to relief in agriculture, in the lessening of expense of supply and in defense of vested rights.

The house of representatives promptly and almost unanimously passed a law that gave the president a commission. The senate, considering more long hours, has gradually worked out some modifications and improvements and is now reasonably certain to pass a law that will be effective.

The credit in this matter of the president, which primarily has been conferred by the steady, strong, consistent work which he had undertaken week after week, for the protection of the people, will be increased by the opposition which he has encountered, a opposition in the way of a rightness of purpose and the power of a rightness of opposition. Many others have contributed to the consummation, perhaps as the ways in which the president has encountered it, which is the way in which the people have witnessed it, which is the way in which the people will be the number of the people, through their representatives, in congress, capital rule of acting the people of the people through their representatives in congress. The people have witnessed the same opposition which the president has encountered, and have seen the ways in which the president has met it. The people have witnessed the same opposition which the president has encountered, and have seen the ways in which the president has met it. The people have witnessed the same opposition which the president has encountered, and have seen the ways in which the president has met it.

GREAT VAN AMBURG SHOWS.

Waterproof Tents—Rain Will Not Spoil the Exhibition.

A sudden downpour of rain or a long continued drizzle will have no effect on the patrons of the great Van Amburg shows when it exhibits here. The reason of this will be apparent to everyone who sees the huge tents that will be erected here for the performance. They are all constructed of "mercerized" muslin. This mercerized invention for the waterproofing of material has been in use for one season but up to this year has never been used for tents. People who have used "mercerized" cloth know how it shuns water, and it was the knowledge of this that caused the Van Amburg shows to have all their tents made of this material. It is quite a strike in advance of others shows, inasmuch as it adds to the comfort and convenience of the management of these shows. Beneath these tents spectators can sit in comfort and ease during the hottest of rains and to be as dry as if in the finest theater in the country. This is only one of the many novelties that have been added to these shows this season.

It is respectfully suggested that the children attend the afternoon exhibition, where ample time is given to view the large menagerie, likewise avoiding the night crowds. Children of tender years should every watch the little folks, and the care and attention paid to ladies and children is the most considerate of the management.

Finis M. Waite will enjoy in history the peculiar privilege of having been the first governor of Michigan entered by direct vote in which open opportunity was given all the members of his party to participate. And this distinction will be shared by Patrick H. Kelley, the republican candidate for lieutenant governor. Their election in November, too, will be practically as unanimous as was their nomination at the primary elections in June.

FARMERS UNITE FOR PROFIT

Fifty Fruit Growers Join the Amalgamated Society of Equity.

Fifty farmers who have been in session two days at the Great Northern hotel in Chicago organized the department of fruit, vegetables and dairy products of the American Society of Equity for the exclusive benefit of these producers in a manner which will save the best possible prices. The plan is to establish brokerage offices in different parts of the country for the marketing of the class of products. A committee of eight was appointed to perfect the details of the organization, consisting of R. H. Thomson, Moorhead; F. W. Platts, Watertown; J. Dennis, Indianapolis; H. T. Bartlett, Appleton; George C. Wertz, Memphis; H. L. Ackerman, Watertown; H. Gleason, Kingston, and J. Van Pelt, Michigan. H. B. Brown, national organizer for the American Society of Equity, said that so much success had attended its organization in the few months it had been in existence that it was the prediction of the promoters that it would be enlarged so as to include other products than those of the farm, such as the products of the mine and the factory, and that the name would be changed to the American Society of Labor. The society now has 40,000 members in 15 states, and its business last year amounted to $1,000,000.

CHEAP WATER DENIED

DECISION OF COURT OF APPEALS IS AGAINST OMAHA.

Franchise of Water Company Holds City from Putting Lower Rates into Effect by Ordinance—Decision of Lower Court Reversed.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Paul, Minn., handed down its two cases Friday, those of Samuel M. Farnsel and Nicholas Dean vs. The United States Water Works company, the City of Omaha et al., the total being a case of mandamus to compel the mayor and city clerk of the Nebraska city to sign and attest the ordinance of the last named city, which was passed by the city council and vetoed by Dahlman, the latter being a case of injunction to restrain the mayor and city clerk from putting the same into effect. The effect of Judge Sanborn's decision is that the Omaha Water company, which is the local branch of the Waterworks Trust company, of Philadelphia, organized by Mr. Farnsel, engineer for the Waterworks Trust company, and that of Dean, the latter was adjudged to pay more than $1,000 costs and damages, the result of the litigation of the problem of water rates in Omaha, which has been a prolific source of municipal controversy for the past number of years, and which has been the cause of the ousting of two mayors, the present incumbent, Dahlman, being the third. The decision of the court of appeals reverses the action of the lower court in granting the injunction against the city, which was brought in the district court by the district of Nebraska in the name of the city, and which was in substance and according to federal law, must not be confused with the action of the same city a few years ago in the same court, brought in the name of the city against the Omaha Water company, which was adjudged to be a corporation, because of its franchise, which was granted by the city council, and which franchise was held to be a contract, which the city could not impair by the passage of an ordinance, which was held to be the case in the present case, the court holding that the city could not by ordinance impair the contract which was held to be the franchise of the Omaha Water company

CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKES.

Number That Have Shaken the State During Ten Years, 1899 to 1908, Inclusive.

Among the reports of the United States meteorological survey published in the "Monthly Weather Review" on the subject of earthquakes in California, which contain accounts of shocks that occurred during the ten years from 1899 to 1908, inclusive, study of these bulletins shows that there was hardly a single month in all those ten years when seismic disturbances more or less severe, were not felt along the Pacific coast.

The first of these bulletins (No. 26) was written by Prof. James Edward Keeler, astronomer in charge of earth quake observations at the Lick Observatory. Previous to this Prof. E. S. Holden had published, through the California state printing office, a paper which contained a list of the earthquakes that had occurred in California, lower California, Oregon and Washington territory back which great all the available data up to the end of the year 1898. The first bulletin (26) was published by the meteorologist who was prepared by Prof. Holden, in consideration an account of the earthquakes in 1899 and 1897. The other bulletins covering the records for 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and finally 1906 were published as bulletins Nos. 112, 114, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, and 124, and were prepared by Prof. Charles D. Perrine, of the Lick observatory.

The largest and most complete instrument used for recording earthquakes on Mount Hamilton, as described in these bulletins, records the north and south, east and west, and vertical components of the earthquake motion separately on a smoked glass plate, which is rotated by the pendulum. Nearly remote of the earthquake and records uniformly in about three minutes the edge of the plate being adjusted into records at the same time by a clock, which also serves to record the time of occurrence of the shock. This instrument has been called the "Ewing seismograph, Another simpler form consists of a heavy "duplex" pendulum adjusted to a long period of vibration, with a magnifying pointer or lever, which records on a smoked glass plate both horizontal components of the motion. The vertical movements and its time are not recorded. The observatory possesses other seismographs of various patterns, but they are not constantly in use.

Strange Sequel of a Dream.

A remarkable story of a dream is reported from Rogue Bluffs, Maine, Monday, of Maple Leaf Twigg, on Thursday dreamed that her 3-year-old daughter had been washed ashore on Hastings and that the body was removed on a tarpaulin.

On Saturday the child was run over by a passenger train in her home, and the wheels went over her chest, causing very serious injuries. She was picked up by some person to whom she was a stranger, placed on a tarpaulin and removed to the Brookline Cottage hospital, where she is in a very serious condition.

THE NUMBERS OF HOUSES

Great Difficulty Sometimes Experienced at Night in Designating Them.

"The view of the fact that so many houses have been numbered, under the charge of the name of another, said a physician, "it is truly to suggest that some effective way should be devised to remedy the difficulty in being complained of at intervals throughout the street number of fifty houses.

"The visiting patients, especially at night, the elevation of difficulty experience a great deal of annoyance in this respect, and an early remedy is recommended by the general public as well. One would imagine that well-trained would relate house owners to number their premises plainly, and, if need be, have to be compelled to comply with what is, after all, a very simple matter. Numbers of buildings, however, are so far from the sidewalk or the houses without condition on the street that it is impossible to read the numbers and that the numbers may be easily distinguished by night as well as by day. In a case, for example, I begin a particular house on a block of small cottage by numerous, the number taking the one which, single by its number in the block, would be as a guide. In other cases the little square six inches long, with the number inscribed, are so far from the sidewalk or the house that it is impossible to read the numbers. If there is an ordinance or police regulation covering this matter it is not enforced, or, if enforced, it is not generally known.

SHUT UP BY FREMONTER.

One of the Incidents of a Campaign That Was Full of Excitement.

It was in the house of the Hoosier candidate for congress, and story that one Democrat had attend a lot of stock to graze his corn field and was turned against the wonderful eloquent, said Luther Magdeser of Fort Wayne, was the speaker at Fancis Grove, near Roscoe, southern Whitley county. Midway in his address the speaker had pictured the raising of the Republican party on Fremont's knee, the spirit of conscience and rallied out.

"What about them cows?"

No attention was paid to it, and again the farmer called out.

"Tell us about those cows! Tell us about those cows! We want them cows!"

Parrell turned half-face to the Hoosier and said:

"Is that your farmer present on a new milch cow? If so, for heaven's sake, drive her up and let that critter loose."

The appliance lasted many minutes.

CHAPTER X

Grodon's story took up the period up to 8 in time. In consequence it was not of the date I happened to meet Mr. Fraser demand for an explanation.

"What ail Herr Gordon mean?" he growled angrily.

I have the original of his story, a little crumpled perhaps, and the worse for being carried about in a pocket that was sweating all most strongly on the occasion when the man snapped at me.

"Hello! what's the matter?" he added I explained my reason, adding the Herr Gordon chuckled in an ever growing humour.

"Oh, no, no, nothing! always the same! said Gordon, with a gentle sigh. "Only to the man Hunter, and his expedition."

It was clear that Gordon had taken a good deal of liquor, and was in a mood for talking. I was in no mood to listen to my story, which was drawing to a close, and I was anxious to hear what Fraser had to say. Gordon, however, was not to be put off. He was in a mood for talking, and he would talk, and I had to listen.

"Ah, yes, yes, I know, I know, I know! Hunter, the man Hunter, he was a good man, a good man, a good man, yes, yes, yes, I know, I know, I know! Hunter, the man Hunter, he was a good man, a good man, a good man, yes, yes, yes, I know, I know, I know!"

He struck a match, and lit his pipe, then leaning out in silhouette so to speak against the sky, and shading the light with his hand.

"Here are the fingerprints of the unknown man, as was from that time garbered. There is something by the time, I mean. It is not a legend, no! not a legend, no! not a tale, though it like as old. ★ ★ ★ I have to approach how I first! Here wrote! It is a man! It is true, by God, it is true!

CHAPTER V.

Gordon's office looked to the general as he came in from Pretoria in that end of the dump. I turned to Mimosa (it is demanded for an explanation).

Well, it was Gordon's entrance—his grimest gallery.

I have the strongest reason for thinking that mimosa is entirely with the Boers. Gordon's office, with its three small barred windows, looked like a prison—a prison in which the prisoners are made strongly on the other side of the door.

Hardly, when the mimosa was seated, I realized, the position, while the lid continue standing in the middle of the room.

"Sit down, Harland," said Gordon, and I obeyed, but I felt a little uneasy at the tone of his voice.

"Harland, I have bad news for you."

"Is it about Mimosa?" I asked, for I knew that Gordon was fond of her.

"Yes, it is about Mimosa." Gordon paused a moment, and then he said, "Harland, I'm afraid you must be very, very sorry for me."

"Why, what is it?" I cried, for I knew that Gordon was not the man to use such phrases lightly.

"Mimosa has gone back to her people."

"Gone back to her people!" I repeated, stupidly.

"Yes, gone back to her people. Harland, I'm very sorry for you, but I'm sorry for myself, too. I'm sorry for myself because I've lost the best friend I have in the world, and I'm sorry for you because you've lost the best friend you have in the world, and we both need her."

"But I don't understand," I said. "Why, only the other day—"

"Yes, I know what you mean," Gordon interrupted me; "we had a talk about you. I suppose you thought I was jealous of you, Harland, but I wasn't. I'm not the sort of man to be jealous of a friend. I trusted Mimosa, and I trusted you, and I was right to trust you both. I'm not jealous of you, Harland, but I'm jealous for you. I want you to be happy, and I know you will be happy with Mimosa."

"But I don't understand," I kept on repeating.

"Mimosa has gone back to her people, Harland, and I'm afraid we shall never see her again."

"But why? What has happened?"

"Mimosa has gone back to her people because I have lost the battle of Spion Kop."

"Lost the battle of Spion Kop?"

"Yes, we have lost the battle of Spion Kop, and we have lost it because we have lost the confidence of the Boers in our leadership. Mimosa's people are fighting with the Boers, and Mimosa has gone back to her people because she believes that we are going to be beaten."

"But surely you don't believe that, sir?"

"I don't believe it myself, but I'm afraid the Boers do. Mimosa's people have gone over to the Boers, and Mimosa has gone back to her people because she believes that we are going to be beaten."

"But surely, sir, you don't believe that we are going to be beaten

PARTICULAR INSECTS

ANTS ARE NOT SO WISE AS THEY ARE CLEAN.

Solomon's Advice to the Sluggard Is Disregarded by German Scientists—Plants at Interest.

According to Dr. Bachofen, a learned entomologist of Strasburg university, Solomon was in command of the ants to the sluggard as a shining example of wisdom and industry. The German savant thinks Solomon would have better justified his claim to be regarded as the wisest man that ever lived had he studied the ant as an exponent of cleanliness. He has just published the results of an exhaustive study of these wonderful insects. He combats the views of those investigators who assign to these almost human intelligence that on the presents of that thing which stands next to godliness in materials that lists stand precedent, and if the human race would pattern after them in this respect half the diseases in which doctors thrive would vanish.

Ants be darkness shine live or any form about these bodies. Nature has provided them with implements that serve the same purpose as combs and brushes in the hands of civilized folk, and they make an more effective use of them. They are never too busy to clean themselves. No job is too insignificant to see that he won't finish off work in a workmanlike way. Ants and bees are busy bees are the ideal of perfect cleanliness. He is never too tired to lick his face and a brush—or, rather, a bristle—effect a thorough cleaning. He will polishes doffing reasonably, for the profession makes it it's a mistake to suppose that ants are overbearingly hankering for jobs but he won't get up with dirty neighbors. Cleanliness is the supreme law of the community.

But the ant's nature rather detracts from the credit one would otherwise be disposed to give them for the fine time of this most sacrosanct virtue by follow as that ants are given to it by the conditions of their existence. "Without the most scrupulous cleanliness," he says, "they would not prosper since each other may communicate anything. The existence of the individual with its features is maintained solely through the medium of the sense of smell. If the ant is covered with dust the possibility of its being recognized is diminished to an extraordinary degree. The antennae in particular must always be kept clean, for if its nest with their aid treat the ant receives its close communing with its nest."

It is their highly developed sense of cleanliness, the professor says, which also explains the ants' financial sense, which so much has been written. Ants, it is well known, carry their dead to latrines set apart for where they arrange them in most careful order. The little creatures do not, however, do this with the object of providing their dead comrades with the most sanitary place for the church status, they merely obey the instinct of cleanliness which impels them to remove all refuse from the nest and carry it away to a cemetery spot."

HABIT OF SNAPPING BILLS.

One of the Curious Customs of Persons Who Handle Money in Business.

A clerk in a cigar store on Pennsylvania avenue was handed a $20 note in exchange for a purchase of manufacture. Going to the cash register he returned with a handful of small bills, says the Washington Star. These he counted out one by one, snapping and stripping each bill through his fingers with a care and vigor as though he fully depended upon his enthusiasm lost and each of the long pieces of cramped paper. One of the notes was somewhat worn by age and usage and when his fingers stripped it it crinkled and cut into two. The clerk smiling placed the torn bill on the little pile of money, and shoved it toward the purchaser with the customary stereotyped "thank you."

The purchaser with equal promptitude examined the torn piece from the pile, fitted them back to the clerk, saying shortly, "Need it your self."

"Of the many curious habits that people with hands and chance money have," remarked the customer as he was leaving the store, "I think the habit some cashiers and clerks indulge in of snapping and pulling bills to make change is the most aggravating. And do you know that not one bank teller in a hundred will do it? A bank teller will reach in his money drawer, extract a handful of money, hand you from a dozen to two that number of separate bills, and if in the occasion where he single a single one of them, unless it is the very last bill he will deep on the pile. But the average cashier will snap bills into the proper sequence, usually going through the performance twice, apparently reluctant to let them leave his hand and seemingly to take a foolish delight in hearing the sweet crackle, with a corresponding outburst when he or she turns a bill in two. If it is very odd."

GAME DOGS DON'T EAT GAME

Remarkable Instance of the Influence of Heredity in Lower Life.

"The setter ate the mallard short greedily, but he would have none of the partridge hence, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"A good game dog," said his master, "can't eat game. Its taste is repugnant to him. This is a remarkable instance of the influence of heredity.

"Game dogs have been trained for many generations not to eat the game—the birds and rabbits and what not—which they bring back to their masters in their mouths. They have been trained to consider that the carrying of such game would be a disgrace and an unpardonable sin, the same as dogs whose have been trained to consider that the pocketing of a few dollars from the millions they unwisely lose the wants to a chipper and a sin.

"And the result in the game dog's case has been that this moral abhorrence of game, engrafted on them by their masters has been transmitted in its passage down from one generation to another into an actual physical abhorrence. In the matter of game, thanks to heredity, game dogs have a nice nausea. They can't stand it."

Mr. Ingland has never sought this degree, as he classed it as an empty honor, and this was done without his knowledge.

At a meeting of the committee in charge of the Chicago Yacht club cruising race it was definitely decided to make Mackinac the finish instead of Petoskey, as had been planned. The citizens of Mackinac have raised funds sufficient to provide a handsome trophy and the race will be run to that point just as it has been run in the past. The last eighty miles of the course is full of hazards, but that adds excitement to the long cruise and the club members are unanimous in making Mackinac the objective point.

Elk Rapids Progress: Arrangements are being made for the Indian camp meeting to be held at Kewadin July 30 to 5 inclusive. Charlevoix will be on the grounds facing Elk Lake owned by the Indians. Presiding Elder Ferguson of this district will be present August 4th and 5th and address the meeting. Prominent Indian speakers and ministers from all parts of northern Michigan will be in attendance. This is the oldest Indian mission in Northern Michigan and its camp meetings are always interesting and well attended. On Sunday, August 5th, an entrance fee of ten cents will be charged to the grounds. The inland lands will convey parties to the grounds, and the facilities for reaching Elk Rapids by rail or boat are excellent. Rev. Wm. Ellis is chairman of the committee and W. H. —Opening of new Charlevoix Theatre" Aug 14th.

—The big three ring Cole Bros. Circus will be here Saturday, July 14th.

—Mrs. W. H. Cater, of Chicago, is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Brown.

—You will miss a good thing if you fail to attend the Troubadours concert at bank hall next Wednesday evening.

—Miss McCalman, of Saginaw, a former teacher in the Charlevoix schools, is the guest of Mrs. G. W. Priest.

—Frank P. Brown, who travels for the Elk Cement Co., spent the fourth here with his young son, and grandpa Brown.

—Supt. L. D. Coulter and Mr. A. P. Falese, of the Ferry Seed Co. arrived from Detroit Monday and will remain about two weeks looking over the pea crops.

—Prof. Leopold Fischer, of Toledo, is here again this year, in charge of the swimming pool, which means that the popularity of that place will continue to grow.

—Tax payers and school patrons should not forget the annual school meeting Monday evening next, at the high school building. We have been accustomed to neglect the very first of our duty. Every citizen should attend the annual school meeting.

—Music lovers should remember that on Wednesday evening next, at Bank Hall, Giffen's Troubadors will appear in a select concert. Sig. Antonio Varallo, the eminent harpist, is one of the finest musical artists now traveling and Emily Louise Murray, the dramatic reader has achieved a very enviable reputation throughout the country.

—The board of public works has very wisely decided to install four powerful arc lights on the water tower, and the workmen have provided the proper "darts" on which they will hang. There will be a light facing the four cardinal points of the compass, and they will be about 140 feet from the ground. Besides lighting up that part of town beautifully the lights will be a great aid to navigation.

—Another Charlevoix county pioneer turned up this week. After an absence of 32 years, Mr. N. A. Jones, came to see how things progress. Mr. Jones settled in South Arm township in 1867. In 1872 he went to California, where he has since resided. Mrs. Jones, who accompanied her husband here, is a sister of T. S. Bergen.

—Benjamin Franklin Gage died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. N. Chapel, in this city on Tuesday last, aged 87 years and six months. Mr. Gage was born in New England, of good old Yankee stock. For the past forty years he has lived in Michigan. He came to Petoskey in 1879, where he has resided until three years ago, when he came here to live with his daughter. He was a very intelligent and kind old gentleman. The funeral was from the Chapel home Thursday afternoon.

—"Under the North Star" Aug. 14th.

—Capt. H. O. Ross, of Petoskey, was in town again Monday, calling on his pioneer friends.

—Miss Elizabeth Putnam, who has been attending Oberlin College, is home with her parents, Hev. and Mrs. Putnam.

—At the closing hour of the session last week, the board of supervisors elected W. J. Gallagher to attend the meeting of the State board of equalization.

—One of the finest orchestras now traveling, in point of artistic execution is that with Giffen's Troubadours to appear at bank hall next Wednesday evening.

—Mr. Maurice G. Hollistron, of Cincinnati who, with his family occupy the Harris residence, on River street, is positively crazy about fishing. On Monday he employed a boy to capture frogs for him. The frogs came, but they came collected. Mr. Hollistron wanted them for bait, and the boy thought they were to eat. Mrs. Hollistron was compelled to administer a stimulant to her husband before he fully recovered from the shock.

—A notable wedding occurred at the home of the groom's sister, in Marion, last Thursday evening, when Janice Wm. H. Collins, of the city, united in marriage Mr. J. A. Cameron, late of Texas, and Mrs. Louisa Newman, of the city. After a residence of many years in Texas, "Alice" will now settle down in Charlevoix. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cameron are old friends of the writer, who takes this opportunity to wish them many years of happiness.

—Long famous for strange and curious forms of animal life to be found in no other zoological gardens, Cole Brothers triple menagerie this year contains an exhibit which is just now occupying the attention of scientists and naturalists everywhere. It is the only black camel ever seen in captivity and the only wild one ever brought to this country. Prof. Knuede, who has given a great deal of study to the subject, claims he finds this remarkable beast a descendent of the few which survived the storm, which about the year 1700 overwhelmed the village of the Gobi plateau and killed all of the people. At any rate it is a prize of which any show might justly boast and yet it is but one of the many invaluable displays made by Cole Brothers United Shows, which are to be seen July 14th in Charlevoix.

Governor Warner.

The governor of the great state of Michigan has come and gone. He did not come in state, with military escort, or valet, or even private secretary.

He came just as he was expected to come—as a modest, unassuming American citizen. He came here as a farmer to meet the farmers and talk with them about a feature of husbandry with which he is familiar—dairying. He recognizes that phase of the farming industry as most promising in this portion of the state, and he came to encourage the farmers in its development.

Everyone who met the governor was impressed with his quiet dignity, the cordiality with which he greeted them captured the hearts of all. Fred M. Warner is a brainy, level-headed, straightforward, honest man. He has made an excellent governor. But in running up against these facts we somehow look past them and recognize the pleasing fact that he is an all-around "good fellow," with very little of the politician about him, and not the faintest shade of flunkeyism or hypocrisy.

While governor Warner's smile is as warm as the sunshine and his manner most pleasing, he has shown, in his management of public affairs, that he can frown under provocation and strike hard blows in defence of public interests.

Notice of Annual School Meeting.

The annual meeting of School District No. One, of the Township of Charlevoix, Mich., for the election of School District Officers, and for the transaction of such other business as may lawfully come before it, will be held at McKinley School Building on Monday the 9th day of July, 1906, at 7:30 o'clock p. m.

Dated this 2nd day of July, 1906.

THE DAIRY MEETING.

Deputy Commissioner Lillie and Governor Warner Gave Dairying a Boom.

The meeting under the auspices of the State Dairy and Food Commissioner,—on Friday afternoon, at the court house was fairly well attended by representative farmers of different sections of the county, with a goodly number of people from the city.

Colon C. Lillie, Deputy Dairy and Food Commissioner, talked from the standpoint of a practical farmer, on the subject of dairying, reciting incidents in his own experience and personal observation, clearly demonstrating, that no branch of farming was so sure, regular and profitable as the dairy industry.

Among the many telling practical points he made was the statement, based upon his own experience, that the feed necessary to place a pound of meat on a fattening animal will produce a pound of butter from a good dairy cow. This is a proposition that our farmers will do well to think of.

Governor Warner, who is also a practical dairyman gave a brief talk that was loaded up with statistics, proving what Deputy Food Commissioner Lillie had stated.

Judge Mayne in introducing Governor Warner, said that while the visit of the Governor had no political significance whatsoever, he would extend to every one present the invitation to shake hands with him at the close of the meeting, which was most heartily accepted.

Those who failed to hear these talks missed a rare treat. Deputy Lillie promised to hold another meeting here this fall if desired. And we cannot but think they will see it for their interests to avail themselves of the suggestions from such practical and scientific sources.

After the meeting the Governor and Mr. Lillie were given an automobile ride about the city and suburbs. The Governor had much to say about the beauty of Charlevoix and surroundings.

The Big Cole Circus.

That time honored yet magical phrase, "are you going to the show" is the query most frequently heard throughout every hard land, in Charlevoix and for miles out into the surrounding country. The world famed Cole Brothers United Shows are responsible for the question, arrangements having been completed for them to exhibit Saturday afternoon and evening July 14th.

The small boy and girl are correspondingly happy, and it goes without saying that their elders have the date marked on the calendar too. Fresh from their triumphs abroad, the Cole Brothers have greatly augmented their shows in every department. This season their spread of canvas covers an area of about five acres and when erected the big tent alone affords comfortable accommodations for 11,000 persons. Overcapping the three big rings, three elevated stages and vast hippodrome track is a veritable maze of trapeze rigging, bars, rings, ropes and apparatus upon which decorative queens and kings of the air twice daily defy death in entertaining the thousands of patrons. Over 300 men, women, gentlemen and educated animals are employed in the presentation of the astounding program. From the first to the last number, not fewer than act in rapid succession and with such precision and skill as can only be found in Cole Brothers United Shows. Throughout the performance as many as fifteen separate features are simultaneously presented on the ground or in the air and one is kept busy indeed in watching the myriad of wonders. An important department, free to all who attend the big show, is the night menageries which are unquestionably the largest and most complete travelling zoos known. The immense tent in which these are exhibited is filled with rare and costly specimens of animal life from all quarters of the globe, captured and shipped direct to these shows by Messrs. Cole's own special agents. A visit to the display will prove of far more than an educational value than a tour of the best known zoological garden in this country or Europe.

The Celebration.

The 4th at Charlevoix can justly boast as a success. The town was full of people and the day passed off without trouble or any noticeable disorder.

The morning parade, headed by the excellent East Jordan band, was a very notable feature of the days doings. Of course the common council, board of public works, veterans in carriage, mounted Woodmen, society floats and fire department were prominent in the parade. Our own band was there in a wagon, but we can forgive them, in view of the good music they made.

The industrial part of the procession elicited much favorable comment. The Ward & Ward and Hen; Brown combination was the best in line, and deserved a commentable spirit of emulation. The Lage Milling Co and Chilcote & Son had floats that attracted much attention.

Judge Davis address, on the Masonic lot, was an able oration, and the large audience demonstrated the keenest appreciation. Capt. Fountaine's address gave more than usual exhibition—a feature greatly enjoyed by summer visitors and our country cousins.

The Petoskey band, as usual, came down by special engagement and gave an afternoon street concert that was very much appreciated.

The 4th was a big success. Those having the arrangement and carrying out of the program are entitled to much credit.

RIDICULE THE FARMERS.

Free Traders Take Them for an Ignorant Aggregation of Greenhorns.

There are those who believe in retaining the schedules of the Dingley tariff law, some of them at least, and they are able to give good reasons for their belief. Then there are those who will be satisfied with no tariff law that embraces the principle of protection. They say they are for a tariff for revenue only but their idea of such a tariff is to make it as near free trade as possible. They are believers in free trade—that is, they want all the people in the world might to be into free trade but their products to American markets without having to pay anything for the privilege.

These latter, says the New Haven Palladium, are homegrowing friends of the "fathers of the soil" and they do not seem to them the great injustice that is continually being done them by the protective policy. There are, for that matter, quite a few more "fathers of the soil" who are voters in this state, and should a case of tariff revision come, they would be a very mighty factor in the fight.

Thus, for example, the Lage Milling Co and Chilcote & Son had floats that attracted much attention.

Judge Davis address, on the Masonic lot, was an able oration, and the large audience demonstrated the keenest appreciation. Capt. Fountaine's address gave more than usual exhibition—a feature greatly enjoyed by summer visitors and our country cousins.

THE RIOTS IN RUSSIA.

CONGRESS

The Senate Thursday declared for a lock and lower the Isthmus of Panama in a vote of 56 to 31. The consideration of the amendment to the sundry civil bill appropriating $25,000 for the travelling expenses of the President, and the subject was not discussed. The conference report on the Fortification appropriation bill was agreed to and the House bill authorizing the city of St. Louis to construct a bridge across the Mississippi river was passed. Before taking up the pure food bill the Senate resumed the consideration report on the naval appropriation bill, for a time, when the conferees were instructed for one of the Senate amendments providing $12,000,000 for the purchase and manufacture of the proposed record book on battleships, the remainder being stricken out. The pure food measure was then taken up and Senator Mason of Illinois addressed the Senate in opposition to the bill. The general debate on the pure food bill was concluded and the Senate adjourned.

A resolution expressing sympathy with the Russian people in their recent troubles was passed by the House of Representatives Monday after a long and stormy session. The vote was 311 to 5. The resolution was introduced by Representative Sulzer, who represented in the course of his remarks that the Russian Ambassador had assured him that the Czar was not responsible for the outrages which had been committed upon the Jews. The Ambassador said the Czar was willing to do everything in his power to prevent such outrages in the future. The resolution was then read in the House and unanimously adopted. Five votes were cast against it, and all the members present were recorded in its favor except Mr. Lilley of Connecticut, who was absent. The resolution was then sent to the Senate and was immediately referred to the committee on foreign relations. It was reported back without amendment and was immediately passed by the Senate. The resolution is as follows:

"Resolved, That the President be requested to express to the Government of Russia the sympathy of the people of the United States with the victims of the late massacres in Russia, and to express the hope that the Government will take such steps as will prevent a recurrence of such horrible crimes in the future."

The Senate Saturday spent the entire morning and afternoon on the naval appropriation bill, and it was not until the evening session that the measure was finally disposed of. Two new items were inserted in the bill, one providing for the construction of one torpedo boat, and the other for the purchase of land for a naval station in the Philippines. The bill was then passed by the Senate. The Senate also passed the Hepburn bill relating to the Chinese exclusion treaty, and the Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

The Senate Monday passed the conference report on the Fortification appropriation bill. The long session was devoted to the consideration of the Panama canal question, the Senate finally adopting the report of the conferees on the bill providing for the construction of the canal by the United States, and Senator Morgan's amendment providing for the construction of the canal by the Isthmian Canal Commission, composed of five members, was stricken out. The report of the conferees was agreed to without a division. The conference report on the Fortification appropriation bill was also agreed to. The bill carries $1,000,000 for the beginning of the system of Panama fortifications, and $1,000,000 for the beginning of the system of Philippine fortifications. The report was then agreed to. The rate bill was taken up and Senator Tillman made an address in opposition to the pipe line provision, which he characterized as Standard oil legislation, and he was followed by Senator Foraker, who also spoke in opposition to the bill. The provisions of the bill were then read for amendment, and the Senate adjourned.

The Senate Tuesday passed the conference report on the Fortification appropriation bill, and then took up the pure food bill. The provisions of the bill were read for amendment, and the Senate adjourned.

The Senate Wednesday passed the bill providing for the control of the Niagara river was passed. The Senate also passed a resolution calling upon the President for information regarding the Panama canal, and then the Senate adjourned.

The House Monday passed the bill to amend the act to prevent the importation of foreign paupers under contract to labor. The bill was then passed over at the request of Mr. Lacey, who said he was preparing a substitute for it. The House then passed the bill to provide for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Louis

IN CANDY BUSINESS NO WASTE AS SCRAPS ARE ALWAYS MADE USE OF.

Seasonal Confections Considered the Best—Maker of the Sweets Must Be an Artist.

There is this similarity between the candy business and the tailoring business, small as it is, that in both the scrap is not allowed to go to waste. An observer, who had an idea that candy manufacturers must have an array of lots of bits because candies get stale, took the trouble to investigate and learned that his idea was wrong, says the New York Sun.

The big candy makers ship to their agents throughout the country at stated intervals, usually of a week, their standard confections, and all not sold at the expiration of the interval are returned to the factory as scrap. As returned to the factory they are sorted, the candy is mostly sugar, and sugar is no inconsiderable item. It is quite a question for the candy maker of the future the single value per lb. of sugar.

It is impossible to work over the candy in the original form, but it can be done in many ways. For example, the chief one is chocolate drops, which are made in large quantities and are sold at about 40 cts. per lb. wholesale.

It is a well-known fact that candy must be fresh to be good. Our manufacturer, who makes only for his own trade, sends forward candy in blocks covered with chocolate and bonbons and has candy enough, say, to last, will last him one week. He knows that he must do this or else his customers will be disappointed, despite the general belief that the week candy for his customers is fresher than candy about a month before some others.

Yet man has no patience with those who assert that colored candy is poisonous. He explained in simple fashion how it is done.

"There is the use of putting poison in candy when natural and harmless colorings further enhance taste? Why, I could make candy with a green color, which would be poisonous, but I do not. I use green, which is a combination of yellow and blue, and I use the yellow and blue which are the most harmless of all colors, because I know that if I put in a little more than is necessary it will do no harm. Yellow is made from vegetable matter, and blue is made from a salt of potash. The most poisonous color is the red, which I use in candy, and I use it because it is the most harmless of all colors. Cochineal is the coloring matter, and it is the most harmless of all colors. Cochineal is the coloring matter, and it is the most harmless of all colors. Cochineal is the coloring matter, and

CHAPTER XII.

We spent a fortnight in London partly, since I needed rest, and partly because I had a great deal of edge on Miss Bridget by the delay. I was a happy good-tempered man, and I was very fond of my wife. I had married her because I was in great trouble and she had helped me through it. I was a lonely man, and I had brought the great girl home to my home and relations to surprise them.

Then it was Bridget who was Queen of Mayfair, and I was only a man who had married her. We had a good time, and I was happy in her happiness. We had a few friends to dinner, and I had a few men to shoot, and we had a few days' hunting. Then we went down to Harland, and I showed her the place and introduced her to the people who were to be her neighbors. She was a great success, and I was very proud of her. We had a few days' shooting, and then we went up to London for the season. We had a good time, and I was very happy. We went on to Homburg for the autumn, and I was very happy. We came back to London for the winter, and I was very happy. We went on to Paris for the spring, and I was very happy. We came back to London for the season, and I was very happy. We went down to Harland for the shooting √—Mrs. Thos. Robinson, and two children, of Atlanta, Ga., is here for the summer, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew.

—A consignment of bass fry arrived here yesterday from the Northville hatchery for Beaver Island. They go over this morning and will be deposited in the inland lakes near St James.

—Brigadier Blanche Cox, of Detroit, commander in chief of Michigan Salvation Army forces, will speak at the M. E. church, Friday July 13 at 8:00 p. m. All are invited. The March will preside.

—The swimming pool has had a new and larger boiler installed, which makes it possible to change the water in the pool with greater frequency and also to keep the water at an even temperature.

—Thos. Clark, whose return from the West was announced in a recent issue, has bought the Cash farm near Ironton. Mrs. Cash, who has many friends here, will go to Wisconsin to visit relatives and then will probably return to her former home at Flint.

—The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. D. Tilleton Friday afternoon at 2:30 The meeting will be in the interest of Loyal Temperance Legion Day. Miss Hibbon Missionary Day. Mrs. P. D. Campbell will give a brief talk upon her recent trip to California.

—W. P. Porter and W. E. Malpas, of Detroit, were here one day last week, to look over our school buildings and see if they could get points of value to present to the people at the school meeting on the subject of a new school house or an addition to our present one at East Jordan.

—The Chippewa Rustic and Decorative Material Co., which had a "open" cutout near the N. T. Co. and Madden dock last season is establishing a large and more elaborate exhibit in the same place. The rustic frame space will this year be enclosed with cedar bark walls and canopy, and will contain an Indian basket maker's exhibition. Several expert Indian women have been engaged to make baskets. The lepaus, which attracted so much attention last summer, will occupy part of the space, outside of which will be displayed a large assortment of the company's products.

—"Under the North Star" Aug. 14th.

—Chas. E. Turrell announces to his friends the arrival of a daughter at his home Monday morning.

—E. P. Hubbard, of Corbin, Ky., is here as the guest of his son General Manager Hubbard, of the sugar factory.

—The big Cole Bros. circus appears here Saturday of this week. This show ranks among the best that travels, and has a very fine menagerie.

—The Ice ordners will give free concerts at the swimming pool on Sundays from 3 to 5 p. m., Tuesdays from 8 to 9:00 p. m., and Thursdays from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m.

—The people are coming, by rail and steamship, every day increasing in large numbers the guests of the summer. Prospects are that the season of 1906 will be a record breaker.

√—The Mormon missionary preachers from Utah held forth on the street Thursday evening. It was hard to tell which was the worst, their theology or their singing. Both were very bad.

—The Hotel Elston, which means Mr. and Mrs. Noble, in the recent building of the cement walk across the beautiful lawn that fronts the house, have left a circular space midway between the house and the street, in which a drinking fountain will be placed.

—Arrangements have been made with the Str. Hom, to carry the ladies of Congregational Missionary Society to East Jordan Friday afternoon July 20th, for twenty-five cents each leaving Charlevoix at 2 o'clock sharp, as with the Str. Gordon to bring the ladies home for twenty-five cents each leaving East Jordan at 4:30 p. m.

—The Boyne Citizen, in its comments on expert accountant Dressel's report, says: "It simply shows that everything is apparently done as it may be." There you are. This is an expert opinion of the work of an expert accountant, expertly expressed. Do you want anything plainer than that?

—A party of eighty Detroit Shriners were here Monday, coming down on the dummy from Petoskey. F. E. Torrell is the only Shriner in town and of course he gave the crowd the true Mecca salute and led the gang band, after having locked the vault and added a half dozen cells of battery to the electric burglar alarm.

√—The water tower was completed Saturday and accepted by the board of public works Monday night. The tank, which holds 100,000 gallons was filled up Saturday, but was emptied into the sewer Monday, to clean it. It is full again and is doing business as a part of the water system. The tank gives a pressure of about 75 pounds to the square inch—about fifteen pounds more than under the old system.

√—Bowery Bill,—everybody knows him—Superintendent W. J. Gallagher, of St. James, Beaver Island. Well, Bill got his name from having been born on the Bowery, New York, when he was very young. He came to Beaver Island when "a brush of a boy," and has been a factor in every phase of Beaver Island progress ever since. Now "Bowery" is going back to the scenes of his childhood for a visit among the boys who are now aldermen and policemen. Mr. Gallagher, accompanied by a daughter, left yesterday, and will, while away, attend the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, which meets in Syracuse next week, as a delegate from the Beaver Island branch of that Order. There is some fear expressed on the island that the genial superintendent may get mixed up with New York politics while there and send for his family and effects.

√—The sorrowful intelligence was received here Tuesday morning from Ashtabula, Ohio, of the death, at that place, of Leif Gelken the second son of Capt. and Mrs. G. C. Gelken, of this city. The cause of his death was blood poisoning following a severe attack of bootlills. The young man completed of a time thread when he left here recently to ship as mate on a steamer. He was twenty four years of age, and held a first class pilot's license for the ports of lakes. He was a very competent navigator, and had been mate of large steamers. Deceased was a member of Charlevoix Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and the remains were taken charge of in Ashtabula by the Knights of that city, a member of that Lodge accompanying the remains here. The body arrives this morning. The family have the sympathy of the entire community.

—Your attention is called to the new ad. of Geo. H. Lininger.

—The steamship Illinois will give another of her popular 25 cent excursions to Petoskey and Harbor Springs next Sunday, July 15th, leaving Charlevoix at noon.

—A unique and very useful enterprise will be open next week in the Charlevoix Theatre block. It will be known as "The Women's Exchange," and will be under the management of Miss Isabel Hines. The chief purpose is to sell all kinds of baked goods, which may be brought in for sale by the ladies. In addition to this useful feature there will be an ice cream parlor.

—The Charlevoix artesian mineral water is becoming more popular every day. Recognizing this fact, the council has provided for the construction of a drinking font near where the horse trough stood. The font is being built by Lee Howland, inside the walk, and the horse trough will be fed by the overflow. The new font will be an elaborate affair. It will be in the form of a large bowl, with drinking cups attached and enclosed in an ornamental cement wall twelve feet square. Around the inside seats will be placed.

—Now that the good steamer Beaver is making daily trips, the pleasure of a trip to the historic Beaver Island is greatly enhanced. Under the old schedule of tri-weekly trips the visitor there must either return the same day or remain until the second day after. Now you can go over, arriving at six o'clock a. m., remain over night and leave again at noon, arriving back at three p. m. The Beaver hotel is an excellent house, and an evening and morning ramble among the beautiful groves about East Lake, an inspection of the extensive fisheries and a walk to Church Hill, combine to make it one of the most enjoyable trips in this region. Try it.

—Just at present the old opera house, to be hereafter known as the Charlevoix Theatre, looks as if it had been struck by a cyclone. The west end has been torn out, and a force of carpenters are building the scene loft. With this change there will be a clear space of thirty two feet to the "grid iron," or thirty six feet to the roof of the loft. This affords ample space into which to lift scenery and curtains. A scene painter is expected from Chicago next week to inspect and retouch the present scenery and make whatever more is necessary. As before stated in these columns, two additional dressing rooms have been provided below. The metal ceiling is being placed, and no other work is being pushed as rapidly as possible in order to have it ready for the opening, Aug. 14th. There is some talk of rebuilding the main entrance stairway, and a sidewalk with high railing will be built along the north side, to which one or more exits will lead. The new owners are sparing no pains or expense to make the theatre not only a pleasant place of amusement, but to insure absolute safety to its patrons. That the latter phase of the improvement has been done no one can doubt who has examined the work.

RESOLUTIONS endorsing the administration of Governor Warner and congratulating the people of the state and the republican party on the very satisfactory work accomplished and the careful and business like attention given to all official details, since the first of January, 1905, were adopted in every county in the state in which resolutions of any kind were presented. Some of Governor Warner's most cordial supporters at the present time are found among those who opposed him two years ago.

For Congress.

Hon. George G. Covell, of Traverse City, has formally announced himself a candidate for Congress to succeed Hon. A. B. Darragh, in this district. As these two gentlemen will be the only candidates for the nomination of any considerable strength, the issue is now squarely put before the people, for them to decide whether or not a most faithful and efficient public servant shall be set aside.

As between these two candidates, as men and citizens, nothing can be said unfavorable to either. Mr Covell is a gentleman of excellent standing, a good republican and an able lawyer. Neither one is handicapped by a blemish.

But this is a matter of business A. B. Darragh has done exceptionally good work for his district at Washington for the three terms he will have served at the completion of his present term. The oft repeated phrase—"Give some one else a chance,"—is no more profitable to public than it is in business affairs. It cannot be said that four terms in Congress is an excessive tenure for a capable man, and it is but logical to assume that experience is as valuable in Congress as it is in the counting room.

We do not believe that the electors of this congressional district will consent to the retirement of Mr. Darragh at this time. We believe they appreciate his good work in the past and will keep him in Congress at least two years longer.

Death of Rev. C. F. Van Auken.

Word was received here Monday by Rev. H. A Fortson of the death in Florida, of Rev. C. F. Van Auken.

While Rev. Geo W. Wood was the first missionary preacher here, and the pioneer in the movement, Rev. Van Auken was the first pastor of the Charlevoix Congregational church, as an organized religious body, and may be placed in history as the founder of that church.

He came to Charlevoix in 1882, as pastor, and filled the pulpit for five years. It was during that period that the present church edifice was built. Mr. Van Auken was not only a forceful and able preacher, but was endowed with extraordinary business and executive ability. He was very much attached to the Charlevoix church, and severed his pastoral connection here because an urgent call to assume a larger field in evangelistic and church extension work.

Mr. Van Auken was one of four brothers who were Congregational ministers. The three survivors. The deceased clergyman was very much beloved by his people, and was generally respected by those of other denominations.

The Annual School Meeting.

At the annual school meeting Monday night A. F. Bridge was elected a member of the school board in place of H. L. Johnson who has served on the board fifteen years. Geo. W. Crouter was re elected a member of the board.

In view of the fact that nearly $7,000 of primary school money comes to the district this year, the meeting voted to expend one thousand dollars in the improvement of school grounds, and for the payment of school bonds.

A Tragic Finish.

A watchman's engine permitted a leak in the great North Sea dyke which a child's finger would have stopped, to become a ruinous inundation of the province of Friesland. In the manner Kenneth McIver, of Vanceboro, Me., permitted little Gertrude Gardner to die a tragic death when only alarmed by Dr. King's New Discovery. He writes: "Three doctors gave me up to die of lung inflammation, caused by a neglected cold; but Dr. King's New Discovery saved my life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure, at F. E. Rose's drug store. Size, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

The Cole Circus.

The triple menagerie with Cole Brothers United Shows form a more meritorious display around no more area than any other traveling amusement enterprise. In this department was seen the most perfect as well as the rarest specimens of wild and tame animal life on earth, each of the species carefully classified. There is a whole kindergarten of baby elephants, camels, lions and tigers which will be especially interesting to children and students. In the mammoth main tent the display proper will prove, and more than is claimed for it, the program including a colossal entrée of exclusive all star features. There will be thrilling nerve shattering equestrians, superbly accomplishing equestrians, with startling aerialists, and amazing contortionists, breathtaking wire walkers and bicyclists, clever juggling, pantomimically educated horses, ponies and wild beasts and a myriad of other amazing and pleasing numbers. This season Cole Bros. Jr. great shows have exhibited under and beside water proof canvas amphitheatre and will do so next July 14th in Charlevoix where two performances will be given on the North Side show grounds, and will be a free day free street parade at 10 o'clock in the morning and this display will be worth travelling many miles to view. It will be two full entertaining miles of richly caparisoned cody and gentlemen riders, Indian chariots, cattleaux, vaisas, tiaras, opera and closed dens of Swiss and Bengal tigers, Arabian horses and herds of elephants and camels and herds of ponies."

DID PIE LEAD TO WAR

A RICH VEGETARIAN ALWAYS HELD IT DID.

HENRY D. PERKY, WEALTHY INVENTOR OF MEXICAN TRUST BREAKS LONG SILENCE—Interrupted Very Pertinent Views on Many Questions.

Henry D. Perky, a wealthy inventor of Mexico, who has been a recluse for years, has broken his long silence and given out an interview in which he discusses the Mexican trust, which he is said to control. Mr. Perky is a bachelor and lives in a great house in the city of Mexico. He is a tall, thin man, with a long, white beard, and his hair is long and falls in a mass of curls on his shoulders. He is a vegetarian and a teetotaler. He is a great lover of dogs, of which he has a large number, and he is a great lover of children, too. He is a man of great wealth, but he lives very simply. He is a man of great culture and a linguist of no mean ability. He speaks Spanish, French, Italian, German and Hebrew with equal facility. He is a man of great kindness of heart and a man of great generosity. He is a man of great courage and a man who is not afraid to express his opinions on any subject. He is a man who is not afraid to say his soul is his own and that he is not the slave of any man or any set of men. He believes that the time will come when the people will be free, when the people will be ruled by the people, when there will be no more war, when there will be no more crime, when there will be no more poverty, when there will be no more want, when there will be no more misery, when there will be no more sin, when there will be no more sorrow, when there will be no more suffering, when there will be no more death, when there will be no more tears, when there will be no more pain, when there will be no more hypocrisy, when there will be no more cant, when there will be no more religion, when there will be no more superstition, when there will be no more lies, when there will be no more thieves, when there will be no more robbers, when there will be no more murderers, when there will be no more lawyers, when there will be no more doctors, when there will be no more preachers, when there will be no more politicians, when there will be no more kings, when there will be no more presidents, when there will be no more money, when there will be no more poverty, when there will be no more riches, when there will be no more hell, when there will be no more heaven, when there will be no more gods, when there will be no more devils, when there will be no more—but I anticipate.

Henry D. Perky, wealthy inventor of Mexican trust, breaks long silence.

KILLS HER INSANE SISTER

Woman Freeing Separation Chokes Helpless One to Death.

Mrs. Lucy Lloyd, 34 years old, has confessed that her sister, Mrs. Ella Lloyd, being insane in Sheldon, Iowa, and being helpless, she choked her to death with her hands. The two sisters, who were killed had been living for some time with their mother, who is a cripple. Mrs. Lloyd, who was married recently, found it impossible to care for her sister and her mother. Her husband, who is a farmer, refused to care for the insane woman. Mrs. Lloyd, who is a large woman, sat down on her sister's chest and choked her to death. Then she went to her mother's room and told her what she had done. The mother, who is a cripple, dragged herself to her daughter's room and confirmed the story. The sisters were alone when the murder was committed. The husband of the murderer is a farmer in good circumstances. The murderer is a member of the Congregational church in Sheldon. The murdered woman was about 40 years old. The murderer will be tried next week.

SUE WIDOW FOR $1,000,000.

Spirits' Said to Have Influenced Late Chicago Millionaire.

Tom Hadlock, a Hadlock, not a millionaire, was helped to will away real and personal property valued at $1,000,000. "By the directing hand of the dead" is the allegation made in a sensational suit filed in the superior court of Los Angeles county, California. The suit is brought by Frank H. Hadlock and his sister Mrs. Sarah Hadlock Wolcott, against Mrs. Caldwell Wilson Hadlock, widow of the dead millionaire. Chicago spirit mediums are held responsible for the action of Mr. Hadlock in disposing of his property. It is charged that the millionaire was induced to give credence to their statements and that they actually obsessed such an influence over him that the disposal of his property was made a secondary consideration. The friends of the suit are the sixty-grand children of Mrs. Hadlock. They assert that they are entitled to the property in controversy as their ancestor where in the extreme years left by their departed relative. It is an birth that to all who had been the intimate of Mr. Hadlock in poverty handicapped for them all he his death had left them in the care of the widow, he was led to call the spirits of his departed friends. The dead spirits in the widow mistake for the spirits of Chicago as a result of California. It comprises some ranch in Los Angeles and is held to be worth $500,000. Besides the ranch it consists buildings on Santa Fe street, Los Angeles, and a block in the Chicago business district. The property was left by Mrs. Hadlock under the influence of more than $200,000. In hand, Mrs. Hadlock was a widow. Her husband, Tom Hadlock, died in Chicago, leaving his wife and children. Mrs. Hadlock married Mr. Wilson, who is dead, and married a third time, Caldwell, who is living. Mrs. Hadlock married Caldwell in Chicago. The suit is brought by the grandchildren of the deceased Hadlock.

"IMMORTAL J. N." DIES.

ODD CHARACTER PASSES AWAY IN INSANE ASYLUM.

Was Known All Through Middle West, Over Which He Traveled Insane for Year—Such World Have Convicts Make Alcohol.

J. N. Free, popularly known as the "Immortal J. N.", died in a transfer of his people's phrenoblism, died in Toledo, Ohio, in the asylum for the insane. He had been crazy for years. A long time ago he made a bonger, and it was said of him that during his peregrinations he paid neither hotel nor railroad fare. Free was an Illinois man and had been educated for the bar. For a time he had a fairly prosperous law practice in Carmi, in Illinois. He had been a peculiar character. He had been arrested on suspicion of being a murdered man and took the decision against it. He was acquitted, but the jury decided that he was insane. During the course of the trial Free was asked, "Enough up and down a remarkable gin in the jury, he would hang a victim of two guilty." Free retired to his home to rest for a few days and was then seized by the officers and taken to the asylum. He was finally convinced that he was guilty of the charge on which he had been tried. He started in and hurried back to the court, where he found the judge engaged in another trial. "Your honor," exclaimed the excited attorney, "I've gone to farther and fell to the floor in an attack of apoplexy. When he recovered his mind was clouded and he never regained the power of the mental faculties.

HELD FOR MURDERING WIFE

Love of Pretty Young Widow Leads Rochester, N. Y., Man to Crime.

Charged with the murder of his wife and also with the alleged confession of his crime to the chief police, William Brown, of Rochester, N. Y., was arrested in Cleveland. Will Brunch there was arrested. Mrs. Mary Gilmore, with whom he is alleged to have eloped. The body of Brunch's wife was found in the canal at Rochester and suspicion at once turned upon her husband, who disappeared. Brunch confessed the murder to the local police, the Cleveland police, and Mrs. Gilmore. He said he had left his wife because of love for the widow Gilmore. The latter is a good-looking widow about 22 years old.

CONVICTS TO MAKE ALCOHOL

Gov. Hoch Proposes State Distillery for Kansas.

Gov. Hoch in his message to the legislature of a State distillery to make denatured alcohol in Kansas. "Such a distillery," said the Governor, "would furnish work for convicts and a large number of citizens. The courts could not declare the law in question to be unconstitutional, as the State of Nebraska, in the case of the State of Nebraska against the State of Kansas, in the case of the State of Nebraska against the State of Kansas, in the case of the State of Nebraska against the State of Kansas

BUSINESS OF REPUBLICANS

Grand Record of Party Representatives in Legislation for the People.

The passage of the free alcohol bill by the senate shows that that body knows what the people want, and will try to give it to them. Debates had previously passed the statehood and the railway rate regulation bills. Both evoked a great deal of discussion in congress and the press. The people favored such measures. Both were in consistence now and that action will soon be taken. The free alcohol bill will not arouse much of a contest between the house and senate. The bill which has just passed the latter body differs in only a few particulars from the measure which the house dealt with. These differences are on points which are not material. No conference will probably be had and the president good in the arts and industries will be free of taxation after January 1, 1907.

These are three very important measures, save the St. Lawrence deepening, which will soon do on the statute books. They represent a great part of the Republican programme of legislation for this session. There are other measures the country or with than but little democratic opposition could be introduced against any of them except one. The free alcohol bill went through with practically a vote of 60 to 7 and has passed the senate without a division. By a certain combination of the rate regulation bill went through with practically the Democratic votes in good part of opposition to its enactment. This is the fourth in which it passed the house. It has now passed for its last or most perfect degree in the senate. But the conflict part will be greatly delayed. Tariff and Indian Territory will be another in the order of importance. The most important part of the measure. This will be sent to the president soon before the end of the session. But the liberty of duty the people of the two conferences are arranged to have a joint resolution in commemoration of vice-president Hobart. No action on the tariff affair will be necessary. Vice-Roosevelt will be president are given to serve the party which put him in office and fortunated for him well in advance on the fourth.

Several measures of which some reviews are will before one or both branches of congress. The passed rate and the Philippine commission have each passed one branch, the senate effort is being made to pass these through the other. The rate bill is darkened. Neither branch has yet taken up the types of canal for Panama, but it is thought to be urgent that this be done. Neither before the session closes. The Philippine commission bill is the most important pending measure. Democratic leaders in the senate have promised to make a fight against the passing of this measure. Democratic leaders in the house have promised to make a fight against the passing of this measure. Democratic leaders in the house have promised to make a fight against the passing of this measure. Democratic leaders in the house

Grand Record of Party Representatives in Legislation for the People.

The passage of the free alcohol bill by the senate shows that that body knows what the people want, and will try to give it to them. Congress had previously passed the wheelbond and the sugar bill, and Republican leaders have explained a great deal of discussion in congress and the press. The people listened and waited. We are a patient, serious race, and that article will soon be felt and the bills will be done in the government. The free alcohol bill will not arouse much of a control between the house and senate, but the sugar bill will exceed the labor from others in only a few particulars from the revenue which the house dealt with. These differences are so minor that we can anticipate an agreement will quickly be had, and the benefits conferred on the arts and industries will be free on assembling after January 1, 1897.

There are three very important measures, made like 51, Lone calico-bounty, which will soon go on the statute book. Pugh's bill to amend an amendment of the Revolutionary gunboats of Baltimore has passed the senate; it will pass the house immediately upon its return, and commissioner appointed, which, as the commissioner of them except one the four months bill were through the senate. Pugh's bill to 2 and 3 provides the senate without a civil service, as a vitiated amendment, and the vice-presidential bill went through the senate. The Democrats voted against the Republicans to the amendment, but the Republicans voted for it, and it will be necessary, this session and in the congress are seen as were the government will have all that, and Southerners for them will be in order on the English.

Several measures of such consequence are still before the senate and house of congress. The pure food bill and the Philippine insurgent have passed the house, and it seems very difficult to bring them to the senate. Thus the Republicans have the house, which is thought to be an ideal body, and the Democrats have the senate, which is a deliberative body. Congress will be in session for ten weeks longer, and in that time the senate will be able to do much work. The senate has passed the Nicaragua canal bill, and it will be taken up in the house. The Nicaragua canal is a great work, and it will be a great work of the Republicans

The Trail of the Dead:

THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON and J. MALCOLM FRASER

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles)

Friday, Nov. 27.—I have told on the portentous place of Doctor Dodd, Mr Harris. So much granddam, please, about your having seen him a number of times. Yes, sir! I have got a strange fancy that—

A visitor in the shape of Professor Mr. Hermann—for that is his name—has been a delight to us ever since he came, sir, with the Dodd. I don't know if he is very long and for my part is always so fresh from Boston. Seems the weather has been so bad, I can hardly ever leave the house, and he has been very lonely for some months, poor fellow, with nothing but his work and his dreams. I am certain Mr. Hermann will be the dream of him. A good soul with an imagination to up with destitute.

I chanced upon him the afternoon the well-digging flung the cell open at the head of the wind. The age drag, he whose name, sir, I have told you, sir, is Hermann, is somewhat and comes overpowered at the sight of the cell. He has appearance. He spoke latinish and dreamy. Hardly any to notice and dreamy. Hardly any to notice and dreamy. Hardly any to notice

CONDITION OF TREASURY.

Prosperity and Good Times Under the Operation of a Protective Tariff.

On April 30, a year ago we had a deficit of $65,115,965. On April 30 this year, we had a surplus of $6,000,000, a gain of $71,084,027. The surplus at the end of the fiscal year will certainly be much more than it is now. While expenditures will be about the same this year as last, says the American Economist, the revenues have increased over December, both customs receipts and internal revenue showing substantial gains. This is due to the increased purchasing power of the people because of higher wages and better employment.

Two men recently met on evening train out of the Grand Central depot for Boston. They were both extensive travelers. The question came up in the general chat as to how long the present China trade had existed. They told of the beginnings of cotton, of wool, of iron, of steel production.

"After all, the greatest sight in any exhibition is a factory and the industries of India or China. As we pass through Joseph's Network, Standard, Bridgeport, New Haven, Wallingford, Meriden, Hartford, Springfield and Worcester, we see many industries of Europe, as England and Germany, and of America, the chief cities are turning out wire for sale and distribution all over the world. Not only in Hartford is the insurance test Massachusetts and Rhode Island, but all over the country. These cities, extensive as they are, are but a few of the great cities and towns of the East, and their activities are unknown.

"Such is prosperity and good times. Things we know and realize under operation of a protective tariff. Not only are we buying more, but we are producing something like a billion or two more of commodities than we were, paying a dollar or over half of them into our internal revenue for the purpose of helping the expenses of the government. It is the most equitable work the least burdensome method of taxation in existence, for much of it is paid by foreigners in their duties into our market. And as the purchasers of the foreign law is seen in every direction, it is obvious how known before and which count and at present be regained through new revenue of our present tariff, admirable and most successful tariff."

GERMANY'S BACK DOWN.

Knew Who the Sulzers Would Be in a Tariff War with America.

As this issue has frequently suggested, the Germans are so far from looking for a tariff war with the United States that the vote in the Reichstag, in which the exclusion clause in favor of this country in June 1905 was almost unanimous. And it is to be noted that the majority by reason of the fact that through Prussian information from reliable sources show that the extra cost of the leather in a pair of shoes by reason of the tariff on hides is no case exceeds two cents. It is the better paid work put on the shoes in American factories that make whatever increased cost may be noted to American shoes. The tariff on hides or the tariff on leather necessarily add but a few cents to the price of a pair of shoes but they are the factors against which tariff reformers and free trade are to do some energetic protests. It will be interesting in connection with such protests to keep the truth regarding them in mind.

• • •

"Twice is reason to regret that there was no press to be represented, but there is not the slightest reason for any American citizen to regard the exposures which the exercises investigations of the recent past have returned with any sort of pessimism. Many of the wrongs which have recently been declared criminal and treated accordingly have been in existence since the boyhood days of our oldest men, and longer. Not one of them began last year, or ten years ago, or twenty. We are regarding the closing days not the beginnings of many of the abuses that have given most concern, and the view is healthful and hopeful. The years to come will without doubt reveal other wrong to be righted, but the old ones will not be permitted to remain unrighted. The general period will be best and most possible progress in the demand for honesty and fair dealing and justice will be insisted upon.

"Free sessions of the American congress ever held in times of peace accomplished more in the direction of value to organization than the session of the present congress which is expected to end on Friday or Saturday of this week. The enactment of a railroad freight rate bill satisfactory to the advocates of that legislation, including President Roosevelt, the removal of the tax on denatured alcohol, the pure food bill, the meat inspection bill, the final solving of the Panama canal problem, the adding of one still possible two new states to the union, and the passage of the employer's liability bill, at the request of organized labor, are some of the accomplishments of the session soon to close which make it noteworthy. The republicans of Michigan will have good cause to be apologetic for the work of their representatives in congress, and another party victory in this state will be the easier gained by reason of the fact that through poor service it has been fairly earned.

• • •

"Two years ago, just before William McKinley was elected as successor of Grover Cleveland, the British United Kingdom led the world in the amount of its export trade, the value of its products of field and factory and mill and mine add to other resources. It led the United States in that direction in 1895 for over two hundred million dollars, and there was a time when it was the leader in the entire country of a democratic editor, who could be made to believe that England's mighty export trade would never be equaled by any competitor. But the democrat Wilson bill was repealed as soon as possible after the election of McKinley and the Dingley bill took its place. Then began a great race for leadership in the world's trade between England and the United States, and our market for that year exceeded the same trade of the United Kingdom by $2,000,000 and the following dollars. And the race is not on, but America is leading the world with no other country a close second. This is a content in which every American workingman is interested. Home methods, better goods, better workmen, and a better tariff policy, are the important factors in America's success. Not a single advantage we possess should be surrendered.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Editor Sentinel, of the Sentinel, spent Sunday on the Island.

A large number of Island people spent the "glorious" in Charlevoix.

John Marrow and helpers returned to the mainland Saturday after finishing up back peeling.

The Beaver Island Lumber Co's saw and shingle mills started up this week Monday after a long days shut down for repairs and the 4th of July vacation.

Found not fishermen are having good success these days. One off weighing over half ton was brought in Monday by Eddie and W. J. Gallagher, Jr.

Capt. Charles Albers, of the X 10 U S is making frequent trips up the lake this year with his schooner. He has opened a bait dock at his place on Beaver Harbor.

Beaver Island is suffering for a rain, the pea crop and hay crop especially the latter have been injured by the drought. Hay will probably be less than half the usual crop.

Dr. Lambert Dentist of Detroit, has opened an office in the Island Hotel for the convenience of any one having dental work to be done. He will remain about a month or six weeks.

W. J. Gallagher went to Charlevoix Saturday, returning Monday with his wife who is free of the Detroit. He has had his land remodeled and a new six horse power gasoline engine installed there.

The beautiful summer weather, the daily boat, and the natural beauties of Beaver Island will combine to make the town ready to the island nearly double any season of its previous history.

The supervisor of St. James township, W. J. Gallagher, was honored by the last session of our county legislature by being elected to represent Charlevoix county on the State Board of Equalization the last of August.

Bishop Henry Joseph Richter of this, the Grand Rapids diocese, came to the Island last Thursday. Friday morning a class of twenty five was confirmed. The Bishop seemed greatly pleased with the progress of the parish since his last visit. He left on Friday boat.

The Hotel Beaver has already most of its rooms engaged by tourists who are beginning to arrive for the summer. Messrs Hartz and Connor of Rock Island will be here the week after the Rock Bush and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hay. The Beaver Hotel has gained an enviable reputation for the excellence of its cuisine and the central geniality of its proprietor and his pretty wife, Capt. Hunter is well deserving the popularity his summer hostelry has attained.

Reports from Lake Charlevoix at the head of the Island to the way of fishermen's luck, leave nothing to be desired by anyone seeking genuine sport in the line. Reliable information has been received that one man landed in a picknet weighing 24 pounds—another party after being on but a few minutes landed one weighing 30 pounds. Smaller fish are in the greatest abundance. No fishing party was ever known to leave the lake without a string of elegant fish. Trout fishing from the streams on the west side is excellent. The bead of the island is an ideal camping ground, the mosquito and fly pest is almost having died out, hence camping parties have required the once of their fives.

Only 25 Years Old.

"I am only 25 years old and don't expect even what I did to be real old to live long enough to see Electric Bitters." says Wm. E. H. Jenkins, of Dublin, Ga. Surely there's nothing else keeps the old young and makes the week so glorious as this grand tonic medicine. Dyspepsia, torpid liver, inflamed kidneys or chronic constipation are unknown after taking Electric Bitters a vegetable tonic. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. druggist. Price 50c.

WHATever other reason might have been given by Prof. Ferris, in relinquishing his first refusal to accept the democratic nomination for governor, after keeping the responsible leadership of that organization in suspense for several months, he was hardly entitled to charge lack of interest on the part of other members of his party as the reason for his refusal. It will be remembered that Prof. Ferris declined after his nomination for governor, two years ago, that he has not attended a party caucus or convention for twenty years. And he made claims of being an unusually deserving citizen, and seemingly asked the people of Michigan to make him governor because of his high traits as a reformer and political leaner. And now Prof. Ferris pulls upon failure to attend one party primary as a fault he will not forgive. He is sorely right now, for, than no was during the twenty years he was neglecting duties and privileges as a citizen, but he is hardly in a position as yet to do much scolding.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Charlevoix County Teachers Institute.

The Dept. of Public Instruction has graciously provided instructors for a "National Institute" of three weeks beginning July 23, 1906, to be conducted in the High school building in the City of Charlevoix.

Every effort will be made to make this a thoroughly practical school, and the instructors will give their attention to such methods and plans as will be useful to the everyday experience of the rural as well as the grade teacher.

The instructors are teachers who have had years of successful experience in the subject a that they will present, and we feel that no teacher can afford to miss a single session of this institute.

Teachers are requested to bring text books along with them, as lessons will be assigned in the various branches.

The course is elective and there is relied will have the privilege of selecting the studies that they wish to pursue. We hope that the teachers of Charlevoix county will be loyal enough to their profession to embrace this excellent opportunity to review their work.

—The U. S. local inspectors had a busy day of it here Tuesday. They inspected five local steamers—the most they have ever had in one day. They went to St. James Wednesday morning.

—A ride out through Norwood and Marion reveals the fact that seed peas will be lost almost half a crop, owing to dry weather. Supt. Coulter says that the season has been the most unfavorable within his recollection for that crop. Hay has suffered severely, but corn, potatoes, beets and grain seems to be doing fairly well.

—Central Lake Torch. The surprising news that Geo. Van Pelt had bitten off the ear of Fred Bourne of Elk Lake last Sunday reached us through Monday's Traverse City papers. We read the item carefully and found to our relief that it was not our Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Norwood, but another Geo. Van Pelt evidently much more ferocious and bloodthirsty.

—A representative of Sosman & Landis, the celebrated scenic concern of Chicago, was here last week, and took back an order for an entire new outfit of scenery for the new Charlevoix Theatre. The outfit will embrace everything required in the way of scenery and will include new drops. Everything will be up to date. Sosman & Landis will also prepare plans for the "gridiron" from which scenery is operated.

—A successful meeting in the interest of Salvation Army was held in M. E. church, on Friday evening. Though the weather was very warm a large congregation assembled. Mayor Libbey in appropriate words introduced the speaker, Brigadier Blanche Cox, whose fine address was well received. Staff Capt. Vonersang two solos acceptably. Bishop Gillespie and the city pastors were present.

—The Cole circus did not arrive here until about six o'clock Saturday morning, yet the big tents were up on time, the parade made at noon and excellent afternoon and evening exhibitions given. The show is a very taking affair, with many very excellent features, and a very liberal and lavish one to men. The town was packed as if for a holiday, and the big tent was filled both morning and evening.

—The Ostipowa Rustic and Decorative Co's exhibit near the Wilson dock has developed into far greater limits than expected. The large enclosure, built entirely of cedar, is unique. The large tepee at the entrance, with its ornamental trimmed rustic entrance, combines a pronounced Indian effect with more than a suggestion of modern architecture. The whole structure both outside and inside, is new in design, yet rustic to a degree that cannot fail to interest summer tourists. A large line of Indian and rustic goods is kept on exhibition and for sale.

—The board of public works and Supt. Martindale took a walk late one night last week, to investigate alleged abuse of the lawn water privileges, and their discovery was somewhat astounding. They found sprinklers doing business as late as ten o'clock, and found that certain waterskaters were in the habit of pouring water on their lawns from hose without a nozzle, both of which are forbidden by the rules. At the season of the year the legitimate use of water is quite sufficient to keep both pumps on the pump, and Mr. Martindale finds it impossible to keep the mains full and fill the tower. The board has instructed the superintendent to shut off the water of any person violating the water rules. Lawn hours are from 6 to 8 a. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m. and sprinkling is done without a nozzle is both unnecessary and wasteful. It takes cost to pump water, and coal costs money.

NOT BOMBASTIC BUT INDUSTRIOUS

Congressman Davagh Quiet Insistent and Thoroughly Efficient.

The following from the Cadillac News and Express of July 12, is an unsolicited endorsement of the efficiency of Congressman A. S. Daragh. Former Auditor General Powers is editor of the News and Express and knows a capable congressman when he sees him. He says:

"Through the Traverse City papers, the announcement is made that Geo. G. Grover, who is now serving his third term as district attorney for Western Michigan, will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the eleventh district against Congressman Davagh. Mr. Grover's ability is a successful district attorneys and might develop into an acceptable congressman, but he would hardly be expected to be a better representative for his district than Congressman Davagh. The latter is quiet and not boomfastic in his manner and methods, but he is industrious and insistent, and has accomplished far more than a mere, with brass band accompaniment could. Mr. Davagh is just the kind of a congressman, studious, thoughtful and observing, that made it possible for President Roosevelt to say that the session of congress just closed had accomplished more for permanent good than any congress since he has been old enough to know anything of national legislation."

Mr. Davagh's Work.

In considering the very important question of who shall represent the people of this district, it is well to review the work of Hon. A. S. Daragh. These are some of his official acts, which have created among his constituents a strong desire for his renomination.

These are some of Mr. Davagh's official acts which have caused in every county in the district a strong desire for his renomination.

His unswerving devotion to his constituents. Always advocating their interests regardless of the cost.

His position well up on the committee of "Pensions and Post Roads," one of the most important committees, having in charge the enormous appropriation of $150,000,000. His position on the committee and wide acquaintance with congressmen, has he stated, hardly be expected to be a better representative for his district than Congressman Davagh. The latter is quiet and not boomfastic in his manner and methods, but he is industrious and insistent, and has accomplished far more than a mere, with brass band accompaniment could. Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Charlevoix Summer Home Association was held at the Belvedere Tuesday.

Three trustees were elected, E. W. Osborne, of Kalamazoo was relected for a full term of three years, R. J. Kennedy, of St. Louis, and Dr. Lambert, of Detroit, were elected members of the board for three years.

The most important action taken at the meeting was the report of Kalamazoo's committee on the Island. Readers are well aware, this report was for many years known as the "Kalamazoo report," and for twenty five years was in force that two thirds of the board of trustees shall reside in Kalamazoo.

Tuesday this by-law was repealed.

The Trail of the Dead:

THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON and J. MALCOLM FRASER

Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.

CHAPTER XIV. (Continued.)

He was in evil spirits, and it was with the utmost difficulty I could persuade him to accompany me to dinner that evening. He was in a state of nervous excitement, and I was at my wits' end to know how to calm him. Nothing could induce him to leave the house, and I was quite unable to guess what was the cause of his trouble. Of course, I knew that Miss Weston had been to see him, and that she had left him in a state of great elation, but beyond that I was in the dark. Whatever had happened during her visit, he was not in a state to tell me, and I was too much afraid of the consequences to question him. I had hoped that a little good dinner would do him good, and that he would be better when he had had something to eat; but he had scarcely been in the room a minute before I saw that he was in a worse state than I had imagined possible. He was in a state of nervous excitement which was very serious.

"Do you know what time it is?" he asked, as we sat down to dinner.

"Half-past seven," I replied.

"Only half-past seven? I thought it was much later than that. I wonder if it will be dark before we have finished dinner?"

"I shouldn't wonder," I said, as I helped him to some soup.

He ate and drank very little, and he became more and more nervous and excited as the evening wore on. He kept on asking me the time, and he was continually getting up from his chair and walking to the window to see if it was dark yet. At last, he said that he could stand it no longer, and that he was going to his room to wait for Miss Weston. I tried to persuade him to stay with me, but it was useless. He was in a state of such extreme nervousness that I was quite afraid to oppose him, for I was sure that it would be dangerous to do so. He left the room, muttering to himself, and I was left to my own reflections.

I confess that I was very much alarmed at his condition, and I was at my wits' end to know what I should do if he became worse. I was fully persuaded that his illness was of a nature that was beyond the skill of any doctor, and that it was due to some mental disturbance. I was convinced that it was the result of some shock that he had received during his interview with Miss Weston, and I was anxious to know what had been said between them, in the hope that it might give me some clue to his condition. I was sitting in the drawing-room, smoking a cigarette and trying to think out the meaning of his strange behavior, when I was startled by a ring at the bell. I had ordered my servants to go to bed, as I was expecting no one else, and I was alone in the house. I heard the door bell ring, and I waited in the hall to see who it was who had come at such a late hour. I was surprised when I heard the voice of Miss Weston inquiring if I was at home, and I was still more surprised when she came into the hall and said that she had come to see me on a matter of great importance.

"I thought you had gone to bed," she said, as she entered the drawing-room and threw off her cloak. She was very pale, and she looked as if she had been crying.

"I was expecting someone else," I said, as I closed the door and followed her into the drawing-room.

"I guessed that," she said, with a bitter smile. "You expected my cousin, Mr. Harland."

"I did," I said, wondering what she had come to tell me about him.

"I have something very serious to say to you," she said, as she sat down on the sofa and motioned me to a seat by her side. "I don't know how I shall be able to tell you the story, but you must try to help us."

"I will do anything I can to help you," I said, gently.

"I don't think that Mr. Rollins will ever receive him again," she said, with a shudder. "He was very angry when I left him, and he said that he would have him arrested if he ever came near the house again. I don't know what he meant by it, but he was very angry with Mr. Harland."

"Did he see him?" I asked, in surprise.

"Yes, he came to see him while I was there. I had gone to his room to persuade him to see his nephew, and I was in his room when Mr. Harland came. I don't know how he managed to get past the servants, but he must have bribed them to let him in, for they had orders not to let him in on any account. I suppose they thought he was a beggar or something of that sort. I don't know what he said to my uncle, but he must have told him something very terrible, for he became quite beside himself with rage, and he ordered his nephew to leave the house at once and never to come near him again. I was in the room when he came in, and I shall never forget his face as long as I live. I thought he was going to have a fit, he was so pale and his eyes looked so strange. I was afraid that he was going to die, and I was very glad when Mr. Harland had gone. I thought that he would be better when he was gone, but he was worse than ever. He ordered his carriage to be brought round to the door, and he said that he was going to his club to see his lawyers. I tried to persuade him to let me send for you, but he would not listen to me. He said that he was going to his club, and that he would be back in time for dinner. I was very glad when he had gone, for I was in such a state of fear that I could not rest while he was in the house. I thought that if I could only get you to come back with me, you might be able to do something to prevent the terrible misfortune that I feel is hanging over us. I thought that you might be able to see my uncle and persuade him not to do something that he will never be able to undo as long as he lives. I thought that you might be able to persuade him to see his nephew before it is too late. I am sure that you can do something if you will only try. Will you come back with me and try to do what you can?"

"I will do anything in the world to help you," I said, as I rose from the sofa and rang the bell for my servants to bring me my hat and coat. "Do you think that we shall be in time to prevent your uncle from doing something that he will regret all his life?"

"I hope so," she said, as she rose from her seat and put on her cloak. "I am sure that we shall be in time if we make haste. It is only half-past seven, and it cannot have been more than an hour since he left the house. He said that he was going to his club, and he never goes there before eight o'clock."

"Do you think that he has any intention of coming back to dinner?" I asked, as we drove rapidly toward the West End.

"I am afraid that he has not," she replied, with a sigh of anxiety. "He said that he might be late, and that we need not wait for him."

"Then we may be in time to prevent him from doing anything rash," I said, hopefully.

"I hope so with all my heart," she said, earnestly. "I am so afraid that he may do something that he will regret all his life if we are not in time to prevent him."

We drove rapidly to the house in Grosvenor Square, and we were admitted by the footman, who looked very pale and scared when he saw his mistress. He said that his master had not come in, but that he was expected every minute, and that he had ordered his dinner to be served at half-past eight. We went into the drawing-room, and we had not been there more than a few minutes when we heard the sound of a carriage stopping at the door, and we ran into the hall to meet the master of the house. We heard him ask if we were in the house, and he seemed very much surprised when he heard that we had come to see him on a matter of such importance that we had waited for his return. We followed him into his study, and we had not been there more than a few minutes when he became very restless and excited, and he began to walk about the room and to look at his watch every few minutes, just as he had done at his own house. I was very much afraid that he was going to be ill, and I was very glad when Miss Weston said that she had something very important to say to him, and that she had waited in the hope that he would be able to listen to her when he came in. He seemed very much surprised at her words, and he said that he was very sorry that she had been put to the trouble of waiting for him, but that he was very busy that evening, and that he was expecting a friend who had promised to come to see him on a matter of great importance. He said that he was very sorry that we had come, but that he was quite sure that his friend would be here very soon, and that he was in great hopes that he would be able to give him some good news when he came. He said that he was very much obliged to us for our good intentions, but that he was quite sure that everything would be all right in the end, and that he was very sorry that we had taken so much trouble about his affairs. He was very polite and courteous, but he was evidently very much vexed that we had come, and he was very anxious that we should leave the house before his friend

FIND HEART OF RAMESES.

Vital Organ of Great Egyptian King Preserved in Vase for 3,000 Years.

A recent issue of the Comptes Rendus of the Paris academy contains an account of the successful identification of the heart of Rameses II, the Sesostris of the Greeks, after having been preserved since 1213 B. C. in salts and resinous antiseptics.

Dr. Gaston Maspero, says the New York Times, the curator of the National Museum of the Louvre received possession of the time vase, in which it had been placed the bones and heart of Rameses II, and later kept a brilliant exponential the mummy and carcasses of the king.

The dimensions of the Egyptian museum contain numerous coffins given to be the contents of the vases and intrusted the examination of their contents to M. Lortet, who with his colleagues, Gaston Hugounenq, Bernard and Lugin, made a special investigation in connection. Three of the vases were not touched, as it was found they had been sealed and forwarded by the archeologist, who placed in them the bones of Ra-Hotep, eldest, which had been engraved in cuneiform and had probably contained the stomach, liver and lungs of the great king. Those vases however were each found to contain a quantity of grass, mixed with a little powder of cinnamon, cinnamon and sesame, and in the bottom of each was found a little mass of resinous matter, which was recognized as the remains of the heart of Rameses II, which had contained the organ, and which had been the organ in the case of the mummy, and the heart of Rameses II, which had been placed in the vase which is a mummy brought to the Louvre.

The embalmers of the Lower was Pallet and Ta-ur had to be used in taking medicinal to be examination. Mr. Smith, the curator to be to make a post mortem in the examination, seemed to be the embalmer, under the microscope these sections of both muscles evidence of the cause of the disease, which is the heart, and the characteristic of being arrested in the heart of such a disease, and the heart of such a disease. Since that special examination of the heart of Rameses II, which contained the organ, contained the heart of the mummy brought to the Louvre, which contained the organ,

OUR BLIND AND DEAF.

ONE PERSON IN EVERY 1,200 CANNOT SEE.

Special Census Report Gives Interesting Figures—Railroads Are Warned Against Cruelty to Live Stock—News of Minor Note.

About one person in every 1,200 was blind and one in every 837 was deaf in the United States in 1900 according to a special bulletin issued recently by Dr. Alexander Graham Bell. The total number of blind in the United States was 64,781, of whom 40,095 were totally blind and 24,686 partially blind. These figures are the minimum, as no unknown proportion of the blind must be added for the use of blind lights (12,017 from Indian and 27,669 females). In proportion to the population of each state, the blind were most numerous in Nevada, Oregon and Wyoming, and the deaf in Nevada, Oregon and Montana. The census enumerators were instructed to leave out of the census all persons of unsound mind, and all those who were totally blind or totally deaf, or who could take care of themselves or earn a living, or who were able to read or write, or who could take care of their property, or who were able to do any work, or who could take care of themselves in any way. In the case of the blind, the ability to read was considered a sufficient test of ability to take care of themselves, but in the case of the deaf, other tests were applied. The census enumerators were instructed to leave out of the census all persons who were totally deaf, or who could not hear a pistol fire or a bell ring, or who could not hear a human voice when it was spoken or shouted close to the ear, or who could hear only a few words or sounds, or who could hear only when the sound was very loud and close to the ear, or who could hear only in a place of very great quietness. The census enumerators were instructed to leave out of the census all persons who could hear a whisper when it was spoken or shouted close to the ear, or who could hear only when the voice was very loud and close to the ear, or who could hear only when the voice was very loud and very close to the ear, or who could hear only when the voice was very loud and very close to the ear and in a very quiet place, or who could hear only when the voice was very loud and very close to the ear and in a very quiet place and when the person addressed was facing the speaker and was expecting the sound, or who could hear only when the voice was very loud and very close to the ear and in a very quiet place and when the person addressed was facing the speaker and was expecting the sound and was hearing with the better ear, or who could hear only when the voice was very loud and very close to the ear and in a very quiet place and when the person addressed was facing the speaker and was expecting the sound and was hearing with the better ear and was being assisted by a familiar voice.

WIRE TAPPERS MAKE A HAUL.

Cut In on Window Line and Send Out a False Report.

A gang of wire tappers cut in on the Western Union wires near Dunkirk, N. Y., Friday night and intercepted and changed the sense of the second race, Charlottesville to Dunkirk, Ky., Friday, between the Dunkirk operator and the bookmaker on the track. The gang of men, who worked under the guise of a party of telegraph linemen, moving south, a distance of about 3 miles, cut in on the wires at a point where they ran through a lonely stretch of woods. The men had brought with them a pole, a ladder, a coil of wire and a set of instruments. The pole was placed in the woods near the wires, the ladder was used to climb the pole, and the wire was purchased from an Dunkirk firm.

Reserves Die in Lake Michigan.

Five more reserves were drowned in the Chicago lake front lands that are being reclaimed by the city, and one was saved by the party from a boat. The men were employed in the work of filling the lake front lands, when they were caught in a gale and were blown out into the lake. The men were employed by the Chicago Lake Front Lands Company and were being taken from the lands to the city when the boat capsized. The men were all Italians.

EAR IS NIPPED BY A HORSE.

Per Animal Tries to Rescue His Master, Who Had Been Thrown.

Harry S. Grover, a delegate to New Rochelle, N. Y., from the Bronx, lost off his ear to-day. Grover grasped the colored man by the collar and was dragging a worker out through a fence when his horse, which had been standing near, began to nipp at Grover's ear and got it in place. Grover was not aware of it when the accident occurred. The colored man escaped while Grover was busy rendering his companion. The horse attempted to eat the ear, but was led to desist by a pull of the rein.

RUSS TROOPS AGAIN REBEL.

Samara Revolutionists May Seize Chance to Declare Republic.

Disorders occurred in St. Petersburg from Samara when two regiments garrisoning that important provincial capital have joined with the revolutionists of political and service demands. The officers resisted to satisfy the service demands if the mutineers would return to duty, but the men replied that they would be satisfied only with compliance with all of their demands. The authorities still consider the situation, but are not indulging in optimism. The situation is complicated by the fact that in Samara the revolutionists are planning a movement to proclaim a republic in consequence of the Jubilee and seize the opportunity to further their cause. The Jubilee, which is the Jewish and Christian Easter and Passover rolled into one, begins to-day. Trade unions are the mainstay of the revolutionists, and the Jubilee is their holiday. The organization of unions is universally forbidden in Russia. Great disorder was in Samara and Saratov, and serious fighting with the local soldiers of the Vladimirski garrison for the possession of the arsenal in Saratov again was in progress when the telegraph wires were cut. Three Cossack Sotnias, which were ordered to Saratov, have been ordered back to Kozlowski, a town about 100 miles to the south, and are concentrating there. The Cossacks are reported to be in a mutinous state. The Cossacks brought to Saratov a large force of refugees, who fled on foot from Saratov before the sailed, fearing that our troops would be in a position to interfere with their designs. No shelling of the imperial troops, which are now in control of the situation, the Russian papers say. Detonations were heard in Saratov, and the refugees, who reached the telegraph, said it was probable that the arsenal was in such condition as they did of the big explosion. Two hundred and twenty-two persons were killed and 1,000 wounded in the Saratov arsenal explosion.

When Cyrus W. Field proposed the first ocean cable his ideas were characterized by doubters all over the world as "Yankee nonsense," but the cable was laid, and its success was a medium of communication between the two worlds was immediate and pronounced. The result, says the New York Tribune, was that deep sea cables soon became a "fad" with enterprising capitalists, and today the electric wires traverse the civilized world through the wires of the submarine cables. When from any accident the wires are borked and communication ceases (happily, the world of business suffers a shock which almost paralyzes its energy, and until the connection is again made the commercial community is practically at a standstill.

Of all the nations of the globe Germany is one of the most energetic in the work of sinking electric cables in the depths of the ocean. She has just completed a new line between Shanghai and Yap, in the Carolina Islands, which covers the distance of more than 1,900 miles. This cable is laid at the medium depth of any in the vast system of the world, and it closes a gap which makes it the first continuous uninterrupted line to encircle the earth.

The year 1903 was for the German cable industry, a most significant one. It not only gave the nation's dominion a great many new cables, but it showed that the process of laying them then had advanced wonderfully in technique so that the work can now be done rapidly in comparison with the days of past achievements in this line of industry. The number of German cables which have a length of more than 62 miles has been increased by 19 new cables in 1903. These include lines to England, to Norway, to Iceland, to Spain, to Sweden, two to New York a distance of 4,200 miles each, one, two to China, to Canstantinople and to the Caroline islands. Besides these large ocean cables, there will a great number of shorter lines which are mainly in use between various German seaports, and between Germany and adjoining countries.

Altogether, Germany has more than 15,000 miles of submarine cable of which however, only about 3,200 miles are owned directly by the government. The total cable length in Germany is the second in the world, being 23,000 miles, so that for month's percentage, notwithstanding the immense work she has made in one year, is very modest. Britain's great monopoly of the cable length of the service of Germany is Germany in its proprietorship, while England owns more than two-thirds of it. Not more than two years ago, however, Germany did not own more than one-twentieth of the cable length upon which she depends for service. Up to a few years ago no ocean cable was in a greater depth than 15,000 feet. The American cable in the Atlantic ocean was in 1903 laid in depths of 20,000 feet. The cable Manila-Yap, laid by the German cable steamer Stubenrauch in 1903, surpasses this record, as it reached depths of 22,000 feet, and in laying the Shanghai-Yap cable, the engineers had to overcome difficulties of the Linkin islands, in reaching depths of 24,000 feet, which is one of the deepest places to be found anywhere in the oceans of the world. The new cable was manufactured in Germany, by the North German Sea Cable works, in Nordenham, at the mouth of the Weser.

GROWTH OF SKULL.

MODELS ILLUSTRATING DEVELOPMENT AND PROGRESS.

Museum of Natural History Has in Preparation an Extensive Collection of Casts for Scientific Study.

How man's headpiece was built up from a baby beginning, how his face happens to be under the cranium what he has gained and lost in his long work during the ten time ten times—these are the profound problems that may be more easily answered when the scientists of the museum of Natural History have completed a new collection of skull models. The work of making a model representing the skull from the lowest forms to the highest, has been in progress for the last 18 months says the New York Tribune. The reptiles have just been added to the astonishing collection.

It is the motto of science to work slowly, but surely; therefore, the three startling results are held in abeyance and it would be taking a liberty to predict the announcement that Shakespeare's brow was rounded by the mental habit of the lamprey or that the star of Russia owes his "moral sensibility" to the playful sea mammal. It would be as premature, anyway.

One might ask why the skull was chosen for study instead of the brain. The answer for one thing is that no brain exists without its covering and by measuring the cavities it is easy to know the exact content of grey matter. Moreover the cranial bones involve the larger structure of the vital seat. As for the question whether skull or brain came first, it is like the riddle of chicken and egg.

Many of the lower forms being edibles and almost microscopic, it would be next to impossible for the scientists to make a thorough comparative study of the skulls in their natural state. So by an intricate process casts are made which number many thousand times larger than the original. A skull no bigger than a pickerel becomes a structure a foot long and half as wide in this process. Now that it can be examined in all its parts at leisure, if rare specimens of pickerels, it can be beaten by the chance of a reptiler that is relieving from invisibility on 242,000,000 times its size.

How the brain and skull develop always keep a step apiece with the other. In the last century there supported the theory of purely vocational growth, but the research showed the skull to be of composite derivation. It has arisen in part from modification of anterior vertebrae, the lower jaw and mandibular arch, lower jaw, have a different origin. Many fine bones are not preformed in cartilage as are those in the brain, bones and others now there exist in a modification of the amniotic sac in the higher animals these latter are replaced by membrane bones, and the derivatives of gills appear only in embryonic stage. A recent reconstructed on beautiful cats, therefore, may offer when specimen; gills be of the kind to live in the fifty days.

It is well to remember that the skull with its 200 bones is not dimally in the vicinity of its base. The mouth need to be much lower down, even in the dinosaur and not utility or worked its way up in order to be brought beneath the cranial genus. The eyes, nose and ears of birds ran it would be better to accompany the mouth, in a commanding elevation. Of the eyes were in the knee, for example, a bow-legged man would be crossed-eyed also.

VIEWS ON GRANGE WORK.

State Master Horton of Michigan Gives Answer to Some Questions.

Hon. George B. Horton, master of Michigan state grange, has for several years been at the head of the grange movement, and by his individual efforts, assisted by a strong digest of legislation, has built up the grange to the present high standard of success. In a recent interview he was asked if there was any danger or signs of danger ahead in the grange movement, if so, what are they? He replied: "In my opinion there is danger of those being attracted to activity for selfish purposes. For farmers, it seems to me, the interest of farmers should be the words spoken all along by the pioneers. No matter how seemingly minor or special and selfishness for the moment, be watchful of the active movements of those members not so much interested in the things of the land as in farm life."

Asked if the grange was undertaking too much things in matters and going beyond its sphere, he said: "I think it would not be wise to attempt less and perhaps more from Mr. Horton replied: "There is very little danger of the grange becoming congressional or any other state affairs. It is more likely to get upon open common sense and justice. If we do some good, the good name of the grange will be perpetuated through generations to come."

Asked what questions of a public nature are now demanding the attention of the grange in Michigan, Mr. Horton said: "We are attempting to amend our school system and have the school fund equitably distributed, and we are also attempting to secure a good road law, and a general road law. We are discussing forestry from the farmer's standpoint, and favor the agitation for the development of Michigan's forests, which is now on our notable books."

CIVIC AFFAIRS.

Each Grange Should Be the Center of Civic Life.

The field for grange activity is wide, as its members come to realize it. Year by year it comes to be more the grange, the center of civic life and social intercourse. It is a wonderful institution and exceedingly conservative, and they should be a recognized body, and influential in public affairs. The future is to see increased strength in organization, and a step in the direction of schools, agriculture and economy. The rural schools need attention to be the best school, but its school should be brought into closer touch with life on the farm and in the home.

In commenting on civic affairs there is a possibility in every grange, and through this channel the grange and its influence generally would be induced to publicly speak objecting to some of the evils of society, and greatness always commences and utilizes honest, sensible, practical methods. Free from politics, but this does not mean be a cowardly or non-committal body, and a chatter to the landscape, there proper cause of freedom and liberty that they are threatened with, or have destroyed by insects, fortune, conquest, or a disease involved and other lessons, so the trees will not only be a useful, but have a beauty here. Nothing finer, gladdening, culture and so, and the impressionable, and the young, is made along the highway and on private holdings, which cultivates a spirit of pride in the whole community, improves, social life and industry; organization and co-operation, and the effort to encourage the development of small or large manufactures, home industries, handicraft, etc.

Every intelligent effort along these lines will redound to the interest of the grange as well as be a benefit to all the community.

Oregon State Grange.

The Oregon state grange is one of the few that hold their annual meeting in the spring. At the last meeting held in June, A. T. Buxton was elected master to succeed Mr. G. Lewis, who had held the position for several years. Resolutions were adopted favoring woman suffrage, a local option law, and all moving banks, interest, and distinctly against monopolies by trust and the people, publishing the minutes about full similarly in each county and holding an educational conference of grange members with your Congressmen expressing satisfaction at the passage of the free alcohol bill now pending in congress and to the master of the national grange.

Married in the Grange.

A rather unusual proceeding was that presented by a grange in Maine recently. After several months of the engagement had been rendered the wedding march was being played, the previous marching around the hall. They stopped before the marriage desk, where a minister and master in the order were united as man and wife by one who was a justice of the peace, and in this case a license was declared and congratulations extended by the newly married couple. Refreshments were furnished by the groom.

Grange National Banks.

The grange national bank now now crowding from two centers in Pennsylvania and the Potomac or two gains in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, are assuming such authoritative form that the attention of the officers and members of the Order are eligible to office in those grange banks.

Some granges in New York are agitating the formation of a grange bank of New York city to secure farm loans from among the immigrants arriving.

DENATURED ALCOHOL.

It Will Hardly Prove Profitable to Manufacturers or the Farm.

Now that the denatured alcohol bill has become a law and will take effect July 1, 1907, the question will doubtless be raised among farmers if it will be possible for them to manufacture alcohol from their various farm products in individual distilleries on their farms. They have been led to suppose, and rightly, that denatured alcohol can be manufactured from many farm products, and therefore it will create a new market for their products.

Professor H. W. Wiley, chemist of the department of agriculture, says that it will hardly prove profitable to individuals to manufacture alcohol in small way upon the farm. No difference how small the quantity of alcohol may be, it cannot be manufactured except under the supervision of a revenue officer, and the manufacturer must pay the salary and expenses of this officer, and it is likely that he will be required to do no more than the regulations. Thus in the case the manufacture of alcohol, as at the present, will probably be confined to large establishments. It is not likely that it exactly the same as that employed in the manufacture of whiskey, which, it is found, is impossible in a small way. Central factories are necessary for the success of the motor industry, and central distilleries will be necessary in the alcohol industry.

We are inclined to believe that this alcohol is likely and important for the general satisfactory of farmers, as it will, through knowledge of the history of the production and high quality of industrial alcohol, as stated by Professor Wiley in answer to an inquiry, the manufacture of which, in manner, which, it is found, is impossible in a small way. Central factories are necessary for the success of the motor industry, and central distilleries will be necessary in the alcohol industry.

The Trail of the Dead:

THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

CHAPTER XVI.—(Continued.)

And so, to make my story short, we got passed into the house, while we dodged away in pouring rain, and we took the work more manfully than ever well, but I was a mistake. I'm glad what I stumbled into the battle of the rats. They had not seen Mr Hermann, they said, since lunch-time, perhaps he was down in his room.

"Dead—what, Inez?" I gasped.

"My eye!" said the landlord's wife, stopping at my exclamation, "you look pale. Drink a glass of brandy, sir, I'm sure. We had enough to frighten any of us, I'm sure, when we came in from the garden and found the poor man lying there with his head all to pieces."

One of the old pioneers of Elk Rapids, William H. Darls, died at his home Sunday afternoon at one o'clock, at the age of 81 years after a lingering illness of Diabetes.

Last month the village of Petoskey held a special election, the question submitted being that of bonding for the purchase of the water works system. Henry Richardt, the owner of the system, at once applied for an injunction stopping further action. Judge Mayne has just decided the case against the village. The vote was strongly in favor of the purchase. Probably the matter will be carried to the supreme court.

What might have been a fatal accident was averted by the grit displayed by Fletcher Empey at East Jordan one day last week. After delivering some furniture his wagon was overturned and he was dragged underneath the horses' feet. His holding tight to the reins he finally succeeded in stopping the horses, but not until he had been kicked in the head and seriously injured. He will recover.

M. F. Quaintance, who was a member of the public works, has been removed by the board of aldermen of Petoskey. Mr. Quaintance holds a responsible position with the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Co., and that corporation and the city of Petoskey are at loggerheads over the closing up of a certain street. During the process of depositing Mr. Quaintance it was remarked that he "could not serve both God and Mammon."

Many people can't see how it comes that the sun does not boom after several million dollars have been spent in building a water power canal calculated to furnish 40,000 horse power or more for manufacturers. We learn from a resident of the sun that there was a mistake in building the canal, and that all the horse power available is 2,500, and the Outside Works under a lease were to have 20,000 horse power, and of course take the entire power developed, and there is no chance for other industries at the Soo until at least 1,500,000 more is spent on the power house and canal, and there is little prospect of getting this amount. This keeps the Soo down and it has to live chiefly off the government improvement made along the river.

Petoskey Record: The work on the government breakwater which makes the harbor of Petoskey, is nearing completion. The last 100 feet with was sunk in place at the outside end of the breakwater Saturday, and filled and capped with stone. This with has to be built up several courses of spruce timber and decked (boxed) to be completed. The work done by another company of contractors last year has also to be completed by building up to the required height and decking. The harbor will be substantially finished this season. In fact it is now so advanced toward completion that its dimensions are now apparent and the form of the harbor will not be changed by what remains to be done. Of course the government may hereafter enlarge the original plan, and possibly after it was made change the appearance of the harbor, though this is not probable.

Traverse City Tribune: As a setting for a magnificent sweep of overlooking water, Mission Island has for many years been considered a private pleasure ground, one which though duly admired by residents of Traverse City, as well as the transient tourists who were yearly attracted by such beauties as this inaccessible island presented, was a problem which became unnavigable. With no park, no rest spot, no public or municipal breathing place for the 10,000 residents of Traverse City, a plan was conceived early this spring by Capt. Charles Webb to open up this well untouched island. Several weeks since consumed before the plan was fully materialized, but judging from the steady stream of visitors who are daily unloaded by all manner of craft, both steam and motor, upon its shores, the idea of the people of Traverse City capable was just the one that residents have wanted for since the landing of the early pioneers some 60 years ago. From the statistics of the steamer Colonialia during July alone, it is found that nearly 4,000 passengers, many of with lunch baskets, have been privileged to enjoy an outing on this island.

The old Catholic convent at Cross Village was struck by lightning Saturday night and burned. The history of the convent is interesting. It was established in 1855 by Fr. Wholey, who was a very eccentric person. He made his own racket and kept it in his study for 25 years before death. One night he slept in it just to see how easy it was going to be. The grounds adjoining the convent contained 160 acres and were largely taken care of by the nuns up to 10 years ago when the mission was broken up by the removal of the convent bells, crucifix and other paraphernalia to Indiana. At this time the property was owned by a stock company and one of the brothers who had lived at Cross Village refused to go away. He kept one room at the convent and remained in the building. An endeavor was made to tear down the building but Indians refused to do the work. The place has long been one of the curious spots for tourists and hundreds from Petoskey, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix have made annual pilgrimages to the old historic Catholic village and visited the old church where in the primitive days the men and women of the forest were taught to reverence the true God.

Traverse City Record: M. A. Kildoe left last night for North Fox Island on the tug Maggie, where he expects to operate the timbering business on a large scale for the Kelley Lumber & Shingle Company, who owns the timber. Mr. Kildoe took with him about fifteen men and four teams which he brought with him last Monday from Missaukee county, where he has for the past year been timbering for the Kelley Lumber & Shingle company, who have been waiting for the arrival of the tug. Mr. Kildoe expects to hole the remainder of his crew in Northport, Suttons Bay and other northern points and will employ about sixty men. A large amount of provisions and camp equipage were taken, including a number tents in which the crew will be comfortable during the cold weather. The other supply will follow in a few days which will include among other things about nine teams recently bought by the Kelley Lumber & Shingle company in Chicago. It is further will act as agent for the tug, making regular trips to Manistique and communications will be established with the islands so that daily transportation will be possible. The island is covered with valuable timber and after its removal will be made into a summer resort.

Gelt on Baptist Church to be Raised

For a number of years the members of the Baptist Church have been heroically struggling with a church debt. The day of deliverance is soon to come. Sunday August 12, has been set as the day when the members of the church and the friends of the church are to make a freewill offering unto the Lord for this purpose. It is not to be a penny collection. We propose to honor the Lord by gladly giving of the Lord's money for this cause. We are not begging. No contract or high pressure methods will be resorted to to extract money unwillingly from the people. The charity of the church and cause of Christ will not be satisfied in any such manner. Rather one will simply be given an opportunity to have a share in this good work. There is no question as to the success of this effort, that is already assured. The only question is how large a share of honor each one desires. If course every member will be expected to contribute something, however small the amount. Gifts from friends of the church will be gladly and thankfully received. We are greatly encouraged at the generosity already manifested. Some very substantial donations have been made. Any one desiring a share may so indicate by notifying the pastor, or the treasurer, F. W. Cooper. We invite all who can to come and replete with us. We will be a happy day. Special music, special sermons and a special offering. Remember the day, August 12, 1906. Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that he doeth well and kept it in his study for 25 years before death. One night he slept in it just to see how easy it was going to be. The grounds adjoining the convent contained 160 acres and were largely taken

The Trail of the Dead:

THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON and J. MALCOLM FRASER

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Gheen.)

I do not know how we lived through that first frozen night. Indeed, I make no second mistake, my comrades will bear me witness, when I say that good food and warm clothes spun in out of the frozen air, blown along by rosy-faced Canadian Boreas! In the skin and out of the skin, we lived through it, and, with the dawning, rolling out back needed with stiffened limbs and frozen joints, I, for one, could, the long and the short of it, be counted on to be ready and eager to keep the water under. Now and again, all on the rolling deck, she showed me Warner, lying by the wheelhouse, who, was in fits or jibes? I, for one, was not the man to make worse.

The daylight came at last, the first green light for which all poor mariners look upon as the same hours of danger. With it came a lessening of the wind and a falling sea. Yet there had been an angry memory in the brilliant colors that the morning gave us. We, regardless over the muddy ground of the heaving waters, looked. I was the first to see a traveler's smudge of smoke on the western sky.

"He is making for us, gentlemen," said a voice behind me, and I, turning, stared in the direction of the smoke. "Happen he would make for Liverpool," he continued. "The weather the blowing up again, and he's a big steamer, the Palestine."

I, for one, leaning the ship, leaned and looked, though to tell the truth, I was more concerned to get under the lee of the wheelhouse.

The man's intuition, or the old Jack-tar's, was right, for, as we, all of us, with half an eye, knew, the lighter Palestine, with the lighter freeboard, was the steamer to come to us.

Of the rescue, of the joy and thankfulness, of the cheers and the exceedingly strong, the Bible that we found in the cabin, I need not speak. Nor need I speak of the Bible that the lighter Palestine had on board, guarding Mr. Harland, as, we learned, she had come from Montreal, with her garments and running gear of the coffin and shroud, and the Bible that, in the hands of some brought in the worldly frame of mind, had, we learned, saved, as he, as could be judged, I, for one, was not, from the fire, and, in the back, begun on long exposure to the cold, and, in the front, on long exposure to smoke behind one—strange as it seemed, I, for one, was not the man to question—the life of Mr. Harland.

Very, very slowly Mr. Harland, on the weather deck, on sunshine days, at the side, I, for one, was not the man to flank, with a sickening sail, was put from the gangway, first and second, on Gradius, of the Palestine, and, at last, proved, at our side, Gradius and whole and hearty.

"I have a strange dropped-away memory of Gradius," Harland, to an early Palestine, Mister, you sailor, a, you, I, for one, was not the man to question, he said, as, I, for one, was not the man to question, he said, I, for one, was not the man to question, he said, I, for one, was not the man to question, he said

I do not know how we stood through that interview, and I make no sound excuse, nor consider it any palliation of my offence, that I never even thought of resenting Mrs. Jeffreys's insolence. Thing by passing kaleidoscopic through my mind, the only possible course which a man of honor could pursue in such circumstances

DARRAGH OR COVELL—WHICH?

It is our desire to treat Mr. Covell with the utmost courtesy in this congressional matter. We expect to be called upon some time to support him as the republican nominee for congress. If next fall or two years from next fall, we shall be able to do it with a conscience void of offence. We have said nothing and shall say nothing, that that can appear against him in the political judgment day. We know Mr. Covell to be a capable and entirely worthy man. He has a right to seek the congressional nomination if he thinks it is a legitimate and honorable ambition.

But—

We believe the best interests of Charlevoix county and the 1st congressional district can lie best subserved by the re-election of Mr. Darragh next fall. Mr. Darragh has never solicited the support of the SAVINGS in this canvass. This paper has no axe to grind or no favors to ask of either Mr. Darragh or Mr. Covell.

We know what Mr. Darragh has done, and we know what he can do in a fourth term. We do not believe it is good business policy to discard him merely to gratify Mr. Covell's ambition. The lawyers of Northern Michigan, or a majority of them seem to have formed a committee of the whole to advance Mr. Covell's political interests on the strength of his ability as a lawyer. The attitude of the legal profession in the matter is quite natural.

But we believe the business men and farmers will view the matter from a business standpoint. We believe they will recognize the fact that Mr. Darragh has proven himself a sound-headed, industrious, business congressman. We believe they will agree with us that his public services have earned for him a fourth term.

The state board of equalization which meets to equalize the basis of taxation between the counties every five years, following the census years, will begin its sessions at the Capitol on the 20th of August, and is likely to be at work for a month. The last session, in 1901, occupied exactly one month, and the previous one in 1896, all for a month and three days. The board is composed of the lieutenant governor, the auditor general, the secretary of state, the state treasurer, and the commissioner of the state land office, and the deputy auditor general is designated in the law as its secretary. The law creating the state tax commission also constitutes that board an advisory body to the board of equalization. Under this provision, the investigations and the conclusions of the tax commissioners upon property values in the state, which have been extensive, will be brought to the aid of the equalizing problem, in the interest of the state at large, as opposed doubtless in many instances to the claims of individual counties whose special interests will be urged by their representatives from the county board.

THAT this government is carrying on its enormous day-by-day routine of public business at home and abroad in building machines and costly public buildings in cities and towns all over the union, is paying liberal pensions to its old soldiers, is concerned in the best warship in existence, and is meeting every ordinary and extraordinary national need, and at the same time can declare a surplus of twenty million dollars on a single year's business as was true of last year, is an experience and a record that has caused the other business nations of the world to sit straight up and take minutes of the occasion. There is not one of the nations that does not regard the United States as a leader in all means and methods through which the progress and prosperity of its people are secured. And yet, we are told that a return to the experiments of years gone by is desirable and will be urged. It would be quite pleasing to our national competitors to have this country make such a change, however disastrous it would be to the American people.

The free coinage of silver, the monetary standard, bimetalism, the quantitative theory of money, or what ever term may be used to characterize the leading issue of the contest waged in the United States in 1896, will be fought over again in 1908 if W. J. Bryan is made the candidate of the democratic party. Mr. Bryan says he has not changed his views on that question. He believes yet, his very last utterance on it was, that the free coinage of silver would be a good thing for this country. He thought it was a good thing for Mexico, and he so declared in the country. And yet thousands who were in the city where his declaration was made cast one of a hundred votes for enough for the coming day. They had demonstration there then, but they have since cast it off. There is no more truth in the free silver theory now, nor will there be two years from now, than when it was first fought for so desperately by Mr. Bryan and his followers.

THERE is nothing in common between the most aggressive friends of American progress and such sentiment as makes heroes of criminals and devotes eulogies to crime. The American people have more to fear from any other people on earth through contamination with the theories of so-called international socialism. It is very true that ideal conditions have not been reached, here or elsewhere, but through the institutions of this republic, as the new exist, more progress has been made in the past few years than in the previous forty. There is nothing in socialism that would strengthen the home loving ideals of this country, but very much that would tend to disturb and disrupt them. As a theory theory socialism has attractions, but as it is practiced and proclaimed by its imported leaders and most aggressive affiliants it is unworthy and demoralizing.

THE discontent of Michigan should not forget that, on white years nine stages before W. J. Bryan can possibly become a campaign issue. In the meantime there is a whole campaign before them, and many heretofore paramount issues which they seem to be entirely forgetting. Mr. Bryan's prospective candidacy will receive adequate consideration from the republicans when the proper time arrives, and in the meantime they will do their best to keep it from as Bryan declared in London, that in all man's earthly stocks to attain, and all that a people should strive to be, the United States stands foremost.

REPORT

Of Annual School Meeting of School District Number One of Township and City of Charlevoix. Held in McKinley School Building July 9 1906.

Meeting called to order by Moderator H. W. Crosier.

Minutes of last annual meeting of July 10, 1905, read and approved.

Minutes of special meeting held August 25th, 1905, read and approved.

Director's report was read and on motion accepted and adopted.

Treasurer A. Bartlett read Treasurer's report, which on motion of H. W. Mayne was accepted, adopted and ordered placed on file.

On motion the meeting proceeded to elect two trustees to succeed G. W. Cromer and H. L. Iddings. Tellers appointed by chairman, T. W. Mayne and A. F. Bridge.

On ballot for trustee to succeed G. W. Cromer, G. W. Cromer received a majority of all votes cast, and was declared duly elected.

On ballot for trustee to succeed H. L. Iddings, A. F. Bridge received a majority of all votes cast, and was declared duly elected.

Moved by H. W. Mayne, That the school board be instructed to investigate the expense and advisability of introducing Manual Training into our Public Schools and report on same at next annual meeting. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Sutherland that school board be authorized during the coming year to spend any part of $1,000 which they may deem advisable for the improvement of the school grounds connected with our public schools. Motion carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. Hawkins that the school board be authorized to use any part of $5,000, including the money in the Sinking Fund for the payment of the outstanding bonds against the school district and bonds to be issued as ter as in the judgment of the School Board it is advantageous for the district to do so. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Rowe that the sum of ten thousand dollars be raised by School District No. 1 of Charlevoix by tax on the assessable property therein to defray the general expenses of said District and for the general purposes thereof, including the payment of any bonded indebtedness of said District which may be paid during the current year. Carried.

Honorable H. L. Iddings having declined to declare a re-election to the office of School Trustee, which office he has held for five terms embracing a period of fifteen years during which time schools have grown from a comparatively insignificant basis to their present large proportions, therefore Resolved, by the electors of said District in this annual meeting assembled that the thanks of this District be and hereby are extended to Mr. Iddings for the faithful and eminently safe manner in which he has discharged the duties of the office.

That the high character and unsullied reputation which our schools enjoy are due very largely to the untiring and skilful efforts of Mr. Iddings as president of the School Board for a period of years so favored their interests and that in retiring from this office he carries with him the best wishes of all the teachers and pupils who have enjoyed the privilege during his term of office, as well as their general appreciation for his wise and hearty co-operation with them in the conduct of the schools and has earned the sincere gratitude of the parents and his payers of said District by his efforts at all times to guard and advance their interests.

RESOLVED FURTHER that this resolution be spread at large on the minutes and that an engrossed copy thereof be presented by the secretary of the School Board to Mr. Iddings. Resolutions were unanimously adopted. On motion meeting adjourned.

F. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

BOYS CREMATE BABE.

LITTLE FELLOWS SET IT AFIRE IN A MANGER.

Curious in Our Whether Hot or Not—Not Discovered First —Nr. Pentlebury for Threats Shown Wife and Himself.

Dozens of a dozen boys of Charlevoix in deliberate and unpremeditated manner burned the mangers of the Pentlebury stables Sunday afternoon, leaving a pile and ashes, even as the Nazarene did. The circumstances will vary, to attest, the criminal manner in which the burning in death of the Christ child in the Bethlehem stable, Frank and Clemens Weber aged 14 and 15 respectively, are alleged to be responsible for the conflagration which destroyed the Pentlebury stables, and a manger in the Hotel Dixie, upon which both were. The Pentlebury stables were discovered in the flames about three o'clock. The Dixie fire was discovered an hour later and in the interval between the two fires the Weber boys had left the village and were not found until late in the evening when they were found in the woods on the Lake Michigan road, about two miles from the village. The Weber boys were found in the woods by Constable Charles Dougherty, who had been deputized to find them. The Weber boys were found in the woods, and were arrested and taken to the jail and then and there confessed to the crime.

KILLS WIFE WITH SHOTGUN

Jealous Husband Then Kills His Own Brain with Pistol.

Chicago, June 25.—Jealousy, claiming a victim, Jacob Hillman, Minnie Walsh and himself, lies dead in a flat in Lake Street as the result of a double murder and suicide early today. Hillman, who was a saloon keeper, shot his wife with a shotgun and then killed himself with a pistol. The tragedy was discovered by a janitor who was called to a room by the sound of the shots.

EXTENDS REPORTS OF CROPS

Department of Agriculture Will Cover Larger Number of Products.

The bureau of statistics of the Department of Agriculture has so extended the scope of its work that its reports will hereafter cover a far larger number of agricultural products than in the past. The added crops includes alfalfa, hemp, broom corn, soft corn, sorghum, blue grass, sugar beets, Canadian peas, sun grass, lespedeza, cabbage, onions, tobacco, hops, onions, flax-seeding, timothy, orchard grass, cotton, watermelons, cantaloupes and potatoes. The four years of the crop report includes a summary of the condition of the new crops, showing that in some of them a beginning has been made throughout the country. Montana is the only alfalfa growing State that comes up to the standard in that article. Minnesota takes the lead in hemp with a full crop. Oklahoma shows an injured crop in sugar beets and in the only Western State in which there is a noticeable falling off in acreage, several States show a gain of from 50 to 75 per cent of a full crop. A similar condition exists with regard to potatoes.

PANAMA WORK IS PROGRESSING

Admiral Endicott Reports, After Visit, that All Is Well.

Admiral Endicott, a member of the board of consulting engineers, on his last duties as chief of the bureau of yards and docks of the Navy Department, returned to the Isthmus of Panama on the Panama line steamer Allianca, Saturday, and he reported to the President upon the work of the canal. He spoke in high terms of Col. Gorgas, sanitary expert, and of the work he has published in the way of sanitation in connection with the canal. He said he found the work in the canal zone in a satisfactory condition, and that the contracts were keeping pace with the work. He said the Panama railroad was in good condition, and that the canal zone was free from malaria. He said the Panama canal was in good condition, and that the work was progressing satisfactorily. Pittsburg Player Killed by Engine as He Runs After Ball.

Running a baseball game between railroad employes at Pittsburg, Pa., June 25, 1906, a man was playing left field, was killed by a train as he ran on the track after a long foul. He was getting the ball when the ball and whole life ceased. Witnesses said he thinks that the train was coming from the south and he was intent on getting the ball that he failed to take a warning. Just as he caught the ball the engine struck him. When the body was picked up the ball was still caught in his hand.

Czar Dissolves the Douma.

PLAN DEATH OF BABES

RELIGIOUS SECT ACCUSED OF PLOTTING SUCH ACTION.

"Holy Jumpers" in Suburb of Los Angeles, Cal., Said to Contemplate Making Human Sacrifices—Blackmailer Said Plotter Killed.

"Holy Jumpers" at Monrovia, a fashionable suburb of Los Angeles, are alleged to have reached such a wild degree of fanaticism that they are preparing to sacrifice human sacrifices. Evangeline Cook, who is leading the little band of so-called "Jumpers," is said to be an adherent of Dowie, of Zion City, near Chicago, Illinois, and has recently formed a new sect of her own. Monrovia is the only suburb of Los Angeles in which there is a considerable colony of Dowie's followers. Mrs. Cook is said to have called upon the sacred services which have been continued on a small charge in her house and little attention was paid to the Jewish sabbath. It became rumored that the Jumpers had decided that the first born child in each family of true believers should be killed in worship. At first the story received little credence, but the increased violence with which the Jumpers began to appeal to Marshal William Miller to protect the "Jumpers" from carrying out their sacrifices became so serious that he had the story of the intervention of several children and women that the parents were keeping the little babes in confinement until the sign came from heaven for the sacrifice.

CLEANLINESS PROVES FATAL.

Makes West Indian Negroes Susceptible to Pneumonia.

Perfect sanitation and cleanliness are proving fatal to the West Indian negroes employed on the Panama canal. Dr. Gorgas and his assistants find that auto lung pneumonia makes them especially susceptible to pneumonia and other throat and lung troubles. West Indians are not considered as an abundance of fresh air and well ventilated canals question. Life in the generations of all the white large lungs, need this home lightly used against the sight air, they have developed large with trained capacity and especially susceptible to changes of temperature. The West Indian laborers cannot be induced to be efficient while exposed to keep their lungs in good health. Two white engines are furnished at each Chief Engineer Stevens and other officers have that lots of long experts and sufficient sanitarium, rather than last. Are responsible for the small amount of work done by West Indians. The negroes are good only 50 cents a day while the white men from Spain and Italy get twice the amount and do more than twice as much work.

FOLK DRIVES AT MAIL ORDERS

Missourian Talks for Country Merchant and Home Trade.

Gov. Folk is advocating the local merchants of Missouri at their convention in Jefferson City, spoke against the mail order business and favored advertising in the home papers. He said: "We are proud of our splendid cities, and we want our home trade to be in our people's hands, and we also want self-security among our people. We want our merchants to build up, but we also desire the country merchants to compete. I do not refer to the mail order system. It is plain to everybody that it is a great evil. It is a matter for legislation. It is a good enough thing for the city people, but it is overdone on account of unfair advertising and misleading statements. The farmers, people, local items, up and they have to pay the cost and build up our business trade and greater opportunity."

Russian Ruler Peremptorily Dissolves Parliament.

NATION NEAR TO WAR

Great Empire Now Seems on the Verge of Bloody Revolution.

Nicholas Justifies Strife by Surrender to Police of Grand Duke—Members of the Disbanded Assembly Flee to Viborg, Finland, Where Parliament Executive and Plan Rebellion—Troops Are Massed at Kronstadt—Police and Martial Law Is in Force.

Russia's first experiment in parliamentary government came to an ignominious end Saturday night with the promulgation of imperial edicts the first dissolving the present parliament and providing for the convocation of its successor on March 5, 1907, more than six months hence, and the second proclaiming the continuance of Russia under the autocratic prerogative to be a state of extraordinary security, which is only intelligible in different from full political law. This measure of safety is to provide for the autocracy which undoubtedly will be promulgated within the course. It is now but a step to dictatorship. A large part of the Province of Kiev where stirred up risings are expected in consequence of the dissolution of parliament was placed under martial law.

The Emperor has promulgated imperial edicts to the effect that the Douma, September night at Peterhof he summoned the Premier, Count Trepoff, the most hated man in Russia, and the officers of the guards, and told them of the decision. When the orders were read Nicholas, the emperor, said: "Gentlemen, I am sorry to have to do this, but I have no other way of saving the country." Nicholas addressed an eloquent appeal to the officers of the guards, and he said he was a slave to the people, and he called upon the officers to be true to the emperor.

mostly the abolition of capital punishment, the amnesty case and others, on fetters on the ground that the people leaders are using the people as a tool. Meanwhile, the government is in intimating efforts to the present assembly to be dissolved and to call together all democratic leaders to take places in a reorganized cabinet.

The Emperor has summoned to his aid the leaders of the Liberal party, which participated has chosen, was prorogued, after enacted, chosen, elected, adjourned, in the old, a final appeal from the assembly to the people and to order the dissolution of the present parliament to strengthen the cause of the reactionaries or to stay into being those the chosen leaders of the Liberal party, which extends Parliament

BIG APPROPRIATION.

School Money to Be Distributed in Nov. About $10 per Capita.

Some discussion was had some time ago, when it was first assured that the primary school fund would receive a large accession from the result of the railroad tax suits, whether the entire amount would be apportioned to the districts at once, or be distributed over a series of years. The law places upon the auditor general the duty of making the apportionment, the distribution being made through the department of public instruction, and Auditor General Bradley has decided that there is no authority for withholding any part of the fund which shall be on hand October 1, and that the whole amount must be distributed in November. It can also now be stated very closely what the amount will be in the neighborhood of seven and a half millions of dollars, apportioned per rata among the counties upon the basis of their number of children shown in the school census; and the apportionment will be very close to ten dollars per capita—varying just a few cents from ten dollars for every child of school age.

It is interesting in this connection to make comparisons with amounts distributed in recent years. There are two distributions each year, in May and November. In 1896 the amounts were fifty cents and a dollar respective, a total of $2.00. The next year it went to $2.40; in 1898, to $2.92; in 1899, to $3.40; and last year it reached $3.90. This year for the first time the May apportionment reached one dollar, and now the November distribution will make the rate for 1900 about eleven dollars per capita. A few years earlier the amount was only about one dollar for a year.

MARINE NOTES.

Capt. H. Gerlling, who well and very favorably known here, has sold his schooner, the C. H. Hackley, to Win Schlosser, of Milwaukee.

Capt. Peter McCafferty and Mike Green have bought the tug Messenger, at Detroit Harbor, Wis, and will bring her here. October first they will put her into the baling business.

The schooner Oliver Mitchell, Capt. Wm. Hotton Jr., recently collided with a steamer in Lake Huron and received damages to the extent of $4,500. The accident puts the vessel in the dry dock for a month. The question of responsibility has not yet been settled.

The steamer Pine Lake, bound from the north shore, went ashore near Hunter's landing, on the West side of Beaver Island last Friday night in the fog. The captain called here and the tug Taylor went to her assistance, releasing her Saturday forenoon. No damage.

—Capt. H. C. Flinn on Saturday sold the steamer Crescent to Gus Kringer, of Manistee. Capt. Flinn will continue to sail the boat, and she will be placed on the route between Manistee and Onekama. The Crescent has been on the ways here several days, having keel bar shaft by striking a rock last Thursday. She was launched Tuesday.

The recent Chicago Mackinaw yacht race demonstrated that the sail is still considered by far the most reliable and all motive power," remarked a former sailing captain this morning. The motor yacht which intended to follow the sail boats over the course, was not in race and disabled, but was obliged to seek a harbor for repairs before half the race was run."

Steamboat inspectors say much attention has recently been called to the violation of the rule requiring the blowing of the whistle every three minutes when navigating during a fog. Passing signals also are often ignored, and there is a general disposition prevailing among captains to go the fast in a fog. Captains make themselves amenable not only to heavy fines but to permanent suspension when a clear case of violation of the cardinal rules of lake navigation are discovered.

The day of the sailing vessel is passed, says Capt. Holmes of Charlevoix. Another year or two he says will see the last of the white winged passengers, which twenty or thirty years ago were the pride of the inland marine. He cited as an example the fact that the schooner Mitchell, which delivered a cargo of coal at Charlevoix, had been on the trip for three weeks, and that her freight amounted to less than $200. Capt. Holmes, who has sailed the lakes for nearly thirty years, has been obliged to retire on account of failing eyesight.

Twenty seven vessels, with a total gross tonnage of 35,000, have left the port of Milwaukee and registered at ports in other states since the passage of the law by the last state legislature taxing vessels on the advalorem basis. All of the Goodrich and Faxly boats now hail from Duluth, and the Pere Marquette line and Michigan Sail and Transportation company boats are registered at Michigan ports. The loss of these boats to Wisconsin ports, Milwaukee especially, makes a considerable difference in the receipts at the local custom house, yet ship owners did not propose to be assessed a higher taxation without any corresponding protection. There are now comparatively few boats which hail from Wisconsin ports, and what remain are of the smaller sized crafts.

The Trail of the Dead:

THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON and J. MALCOLM FRASER

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles)

CHAPTER XX. (Continued.)

The Prisoner revealed and gave vent to the sentiment of malice. Their hot temper spread spitefully the pepper and the scrubbing the bubbles. At the edge of the bath I could see the Doctor, who had his own way of his own and jangle the glassed drawers above. Presently there was a loud oath.

A man in white ran up, followed Hickey by the bubble and wished against which he had set Gradley's razor-cut and the Indonesian on the flap of a bottle rolled behind where the mirror was standing. A scant space for the mirror and the Prisoner began again.

The engineer said you to know, he is a self-meaning Gradley, with a greyish digestive and a mouth like a trap, weighed at a less substantially answering. The Prisoner spread incurvature of the cold gray leather and committing fury day or a year, and I helped to go back to that, and?"

"I accordingly agree."

"Was for long, Jim. But, I'm to say, I'm a man of the Prisoner, and I'm to be your secret the engineer is hanging in the attempt to see the Prisoner, and I'm answer from on the painted inside to the Prisoner.

"Now, I belong to the old gentleman."

"The answer is him. Turn now did you mean?"

I had common sense if we cannot, and the Prisoner, and I'm to be your expense, the Prisoner, and I'm to be your secret the Prisoner, and I'm to be the effect. But this method of the Prisoner, and I'm to be the Prisoner, and I'm to be the Prisoner, and I'm to be

RECORD OF REPUBLICANISM

Fifty Years That Have Been Milestones in the Progress of the Party.

The observance in Philadelphia of the fiftieth anniversary of the first national convention of the Republican party in an event calculated to stir not a few recollections of moving events and events. It cannot be said, remarks the Chicago Chronicle, that it was the fifth year of the party. It is generally difficult to assign any particular date as the birth of any great party, for a party is the result in the nature of a coalescence of a number of more or less cognate but separately independent movements.

Few who can remember the time and even one who made its record closely could be impressed with the sullenness with which the Republican party approached what lay at its foundation—the slavery question—and the alacrity with which the platforms of 1876 and 1880 evaded its discussion. The political difficulties that lay in the way of action were intelligible to all, but their formidable character was felt.

There was great care to disclaim any purpose to impose anything on the southern states. Their sacred possession of the form of government which the union of states was recognized to exist in each state. The main avowed purpose was to exclude slavery from the territories. It was a struggle against party lines and that followed the Democratic "free soilers" of 1848 and 1852 and which contingent had a few men who felt that the only escape for the Negroes from being held in various states by the union was in allowing the removal from the liberal slavery it held to the territories. Lincoln was the result in the national life every bosom of the aphorisms or the tentative vaguenesses of the party and for some of the years of its life it was strong in a affection supposed positive and in some instances. Therefore the idea of party was not the result of a political affection.

In fourteen years it has had a new experience of its vitality. Its success has made it the fact. Its pen for and also the whole American history. The man who organized victory, whether successful or not, was the Republican party. The war had brought the Dark Ages of political legislation, which government the Republican party, which continues to be a party of the American people, for a higher civilization.

Whatever useful or honorable government has accomplished, whatever it has to be to be any thing, it has to be a party. Government is a thing to create a party, with a vital force, and the government of the United States is a thing to be created by a party, which is the Republican party. The Democratic party authorizes, which is the Republican party. It stands for an idea, and the Democratic party is a party of negation. It stands for nothing in its relation to the Republican party. TWENTY HORSES ARE INJURED AND DAMAGE IS ESTIMATED AT $15,000 Horses Women and Two Babies Made to Venue Early.

Henry Lemon was killed instantly and Ed. Cannon died a few hours later when a boiler belonging to the Vincennes Paper Mill Company in Vincennes, Ind., The Mills were owned by Lemon and Cannon. The explosion occurred about 10 o'clock in the morning and the boiler, house and adjoining building were completely wrecked. The dead men were in the boiler house when the explosion occurred. Twenty horses were injured, the most of them being so badly cut and bruised that they had to be killed. The loss will amount to $15,000 and only a small part of it is covered by insurance. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

TAKE MILLIONS FROM AMERICA

Records Show that Immigrants Send Earnings to Home Banks.

Millions of dollars of American gold are being taken annually by the banks of Italy, in accordance with an order issued by the government of the United States to Italian immigrants, who, after a residence of from one to five years in America, return to their native land. Italy is not the only country which is benefiting by the generosity of its emigrants in this way. Ireland, Germany, Russia, Austria, Hungary, Sweden, Norway and Denmark are all receiving money from a foreign land, and in some instances it is a very big sum.

WILL RECLAIM MANY ACRES

South Dakota Irrigation Project Greatest in Country.

Plans are being made for the reclamation of many acres of land in the state of South Dakota, which will be the greatest irrigation project in the United States, according to Frank Kennedy, of Chicago, who is in charge of the work. The Government appropriation for the work is $2,000,000 and it is estimated that the cost of the entire project will be $3,000,000. The land to be reclaimed is in Lyman and Jones counties, and is known as the Lower Brule Indian reservation. It is a very fertile section and when the Government has completed its irrigation system it will be opened for settlement.

WOMAN AND BABES SLAIN

Husband Returns to Find Family Dead and House Afire.

When Samuel Pulver, a well-known farmer of Washington County, Pennsylvania, returned to his home from a drunken spree he found his house in ashes and his three children dead, three having been burned to death in the house, and the two others being so badly cut and bruised that they died a few hours later. It is thought that the man, who is said to be a habitual drunkard, killed his wife and children with an axe, and then set fire to the house, and then committed suicide by throwing himself into the flames.

BOGUS LORD'S DEATH STAGED

The Man Who Posed as Lord Mayo Shows Some Sense.

The Mayo family, of Virginia and United States Army renown, have suffered from the effects of a bogus lord who claimed to be a member of the family. The man, who was married to a Miss Mayo, of Missouri, has been trying to secure an order requiring his wife, now the widow of a Mayo, to pay him a certain sum of money each month for his support. The lady in question, however, has proved that her husband died in Ireland, and that the man who claims to be a Mayo is an impostor.

PUBLIC LAND FRAUDS

A Trial of 35 Alleged Conspirators of Much Fame Ended in Acquittal.

The Government's case against 35 men charged with a conspiracy to defraud the Government of public lands in Oregon, Washington and California, ended in a verdict of acquittal after a trial of several weeks. The defendants were all prominent men in their respective states, and the trial was watched with interest by people in the three states. The Government claimed that the defendants had formed a conspiracy to defraud the Government of its lands, and had secured possession of a large tract of timber land in Oregon, which they had secured through the use of fraudulent entries

The Trail of the Dead;

THE STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF DR. ROBERT HARLAND

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON and J. MALCOLM FRASER

Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Gaulaer.

CHAPTER XXII.

In my narrative, now drawing to its conclusion, I do not propose to enter into discussion of conjectures. Yet as I glance over its pages, I cannot but wonder at the accidents—call them what you choose—by which the existence of a wretched creature, lurking in the sewers of Paris, and the wife I thought dead, were brought together in the Rue Lepic, and the great Fetishist was saved from the clutches of the law.

Had I not been in the habit of using a certain lotion for my hair, I should not have met Mademoiselle Marguerite Mathieu, and Madame Lefarge would not have been alive to-day.

Had I not been a member of the Jockey Club, I should not have met Prince Lucien Bonaparte, and the Fetishist would not have escaped.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

PETOSKEY NORMAL AND BUSINESS COLLEGE

M. O. GRAVES, M. A.,
Principal.

FIRST FALL TERM BEGINS MONDAY, SEPT. 3.

REGULAR FALL TERM BEGINS MONDAY, OCT. 1.

Students may enter at any time but are advised to enter as late in beginning of the term.

No entrance examination.

You will find this a good and advance as rapidly as you can do the work thoroughly.

"Often the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, but it is so."

PURPOSE.

The Petoskey Normal and Business College was established nearly eighteen years ago to make the school for a more thorough and practical education than the public schools afforded. The success of its work is the best evidence that it has supplied the demand and that it furnished to pupils an intellectual equipment superior to that to be obtained at any other school.

Here the work is drilled in the necessary to fix habits as a part of his intellectual life.

Here the ambitious student may prepare as rapidly as he can and then more years of attention may.

If a generally recommended time the average student makes in the Petoskey Normal (and then there the student that is made in ordinary schools.

Time saved is money saved. Time saved in preparation for life that much to the period of active business or professional life. Anyone who knows the best in the year or two, or more, that the Normal is supplying the best school, but the cheapest as well.

COLLEGE PREPARATORY.

All regular and literary departments prepare the student for the best colleges and universities. Several of our graduates are now in the University of Michigan and in various other higher institutions of learning, and many have graduated and are engaged in the practice of the professions. Our courses are revised from time to time and are always kept up to the highest standard of scholarship requirements.

Young men and women whose courses have been somewhat broken in years, will find the work in the Normal adapted to the greatest advantage of their self-reliance and self-help. The methods especially adapted to their needs. The following courses are offered in the library department.

ENGLISH COURSE.

This course prepares for college or State Normal schools which do not require preparation in foreign or ancient languages.

SCIENTIFIC COURSE.

This course includes in addition to the studies of the English course two years or four years in Latin, Greek or German, according to the requirements of the school for which the student wishes to prepare.

CLASSICAL COURSE.

This course includes two or four years in Greek in addition to those studies in the preceding courses. It is for those who wish to pursue thorough literary preparation before entering a commercial course or may prefer to take an extra year in some preparatory institution.

The scientific course is required for schools of engineering and for most military schools. It is also to be desired when one may prefer to take the Latin course.

In the Normal department the work is prepared with care to properly study the admission requirements and compare with other schools.

COLLEGIATE COURSE.

This course is designed for graduates of approved high schools, who may wish to take their freshman college work here, or for special students who may wish to carry their studies further than is prescribed in the college preparatory courses.

NORMAL COURSE.

The studies of the various normal courses are prescribed in the laws of the state. The instruction is so thorough that our students easily pass the required examinations and are uniformly successful as teachers.

Third Grade Review for October examination begins Sept. 3. Students must be eighteen years of age.

Third Grade Teachers' Course of other months begins Oct. 1. Students admitted to this course must be seventeen years of age and must have eighth grade preparation.

Second Grade Teachers' Course begins Jan. 1, 1902. Students may begin these courses either before or after the beginning of the term, but the above terms are required for graduation and recommendation for a certificate.

There is a large and growing demand for qualified teachers. The increase in primary school moneys has caused a considerable increase in teachers' wages. For students, however, the thorough training they receive are worth the $10 per month more than other teachers.

School officers are invited to apply to the principal when in need of thoroughly qualified teachers. No charge is made for this service.

State Certificate Course. This course is the same as the scientific course in the Literary Department with studies in the science and art of teaching.

SHORTHAND COURSE.

Skill in stenography is the chief thing, some in excess in almost every line of business activity. The demand for skilled stenographers increases every year. Poor stenographers are a drug on the market. We have more calls for stenographers, wage, $10, $12 and $15 per month than we can supply. Send for our catalogue containing a list of graduates which will be out about Sept. 1.

No student need expect to succeed in stenography who is deficient in writing, spelling, composition or business correspondence.

We will make you proficient if you will do your part.

The system is the Eclectic Pitman and Graham, which is used by nine tenths of all professional shorthand writers in the United States.

Twenty typewriters is taught on a regular time schedule of regular machines.

The record of our graduates proves the claim that we have the best course in shorthand and typewriting.

COMMERCIAL COURSE.

Bookkeeping is the principal study of the commercial course, but everyone's possibilities to business life, laws and customs is taught with the utmost thoroughness.

No one should expect to succeed in bookkeeping who is deficient in arithmetic, penmanship or composition. Writing and spelling are required, and commercial law and bookkeeping are required, if the student is not already prepared in these subjects.

The course in bookkeeping includes double and single Entry, Commercial, Wholesale, Banking, etc.

The principal is a skilled accountant and expert and accomplished, and has examined in several lines of business outside of his school work and also lectures on the class room a knowledge of the best and most practical methods. No better course in bookkeeping is to be obtained in any business college in Michigan.

CIVIL SERVICE.

The course for civil service correspondence study to the requirements established by the Civil Service Commission, in examinations for the Civil Service Bookkeeping and typewriting are those that general knowledge. Here the thoroughness of our work is of the greatest value to the student. Our graduates everywhere represent the Normal to satisfaction and thoroughness. Our classes are small, our students receive individual attention and are closely watched, instructed and assisted.

Many of our students have passed the examination with high standings and are now in the service of the government.

PREPARATORY COURSE.

This course is in many respects the most important course in the school. Young and middle-aged men and women, no matter how advanced in their studies, are received into this course, and are thoroughly drilled in all the elementary English branches. Children who have fallen of the hundreds of the public schools, people who have lacked or who have neglected opportunities for getting an education which will be an

CHEAP INDIAN LANDS.

APPRAISED AT 40 PER CENT OF THEIR VALUE.

Commissioner Tonner Favors Lands Recommended for Sale at Figures Below Value of Adjoining Tracts of Equal Fertility.

The 22,000 acres of Indian reservation lands now under appraisement over in the eastern part of Clearwater county, Idaho, which are being offered for sale at a commission appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, will be sold at prices ranging at 40 per cent of the income or profit of actual farming and stock raising expected the purchaser. The finding in regard was announced in the commission that appraised the tract at the rate of Thirteen Dollars per acre, which is 40 per cent of the income of the average farm in the region, considering the soil, climate, etc. This finding is rather was approved by the Secretary of the Interior and the tract will be sold at that figure. The Nez Perce Indians, who appeared in the commission hearing, were represented by Hon. Frank Dunbar, former United States Senator from Idaho, who made a strong appeal for the Indians, asking that they be given a fair price for their lands, which they had been induced to give up in exchange for other lands in the Indian Territory, which they found to be worthless. Commissioner Tonner, who was present at the hearing, stated that he was in favor of selling the lands at a low figure in order that the Indians might be induced to come to the reservation and settle in small farms, which would be of great benefit to the country. The Indians are now scattered all over the Indian Territory and Commissioner Tonner said that they were not doing well there. He said that if they could be induced to come back to their old reservation and take up small farms they would be in a much better condition than they are now in. The land in question is rough, but there are many small tracts of it that are very fertile and will be valuable when the Indians have cleared it up and put it into cultivation. The Indians who were present at the hearing were well satisfied with the action of the commission and with the prices at which the lands were appraised, but in the case of the Indians who were not present it is feared that they will not be satisfied with the action of the commission, as they have been induced to come back to their old reservation and take up small farms in exchange for other lands in the Indian Territory, which they found to be worthless. Commissioner Tonner said that he was in favor of selling the lands at a low figure in order that the Indians might be induced to come back to their old reservation and take up small farms, which would be of great benefit to the country

The Teacher's Institute.

Editor Sentinel:

The three weeks Normal Institute which was conducted in Charlevoix closed Aug 3. Fifty four teachers enrolled during the session of which about one half were in attendance during the entire three weeks, while the others attended from one to ten days.

The character of the work that was done both by the instructors and the teachers in attendance was very satisfactory to those who planned the work. A few teachers seemed to think that it was imposing upon them when they were asked to attend an institute of three weeks duration.

In regard to this would say that in teaching more than in any other profession it is necessary to keep up in the work. It is certainly true that to successfully teach a subject, one must know the subject. Some teachers seem to think that once they have secured a second grade certificate, no further work is necessary on their part.

We notice, however, that this class of teachers seldom advance very rapidly in the profession and were we to study a list of the teachers who are holding the responsible positions in our schools, we would find that nearly all of them are teachers who have spent both time and money in preparing themselves for the work.

We are glad to be able to say that a good majority of the teachers of Charlevoix Co. have made an effort to prepare for the work either by placing themselves in a good summer school, or by attending the Institute.

Will speak briefly of the work done by each of the instructors during the session at Charlevoix. Miss Jessie M. Himes conducted classes in Grammar, Geography, Botany and Nature Study and Manual Training. Her work in these branches pleased the teachers. Original, pleasant and conscientious in her work, teachers all agree that they were inspired being associated with her. One teacher said: "She cannot work with Miss Himes very long without learning that teaching is not teaching, and that the greatest lesson that we can teach to a pupil is to do things for himself."

Supt. Woodley had charge of the work in Pedagogy and School Management, History and Civil Government. Himself an able teacher, he was proved interesting to the classes. He seemed to give to the teachers that which would help them to know and to teach, dropping many hints to regard to the management of the school, and the teachers who attended his classes will go to their rooms better prepared for the work.

In Mathematics, an attempt was made to demonstrate two things. First: That to teach Arithmetic, it is necessary that you know Arithmetic. Second. The subject of Arithmetic is important not alone for its own sake, but on account of the opportunities by the subject in developing the reasoning powers of the pupil.

Mr. Woodley very kindly took charge of the class in reading and her work was a revelation to the teacher, many of whom expressed a determination to stop hearing classes read and to attempt to teach reading to the future.

Miss Gail, who will have charge of the work in Music and Drawing in the Charlevoix schools the coming year, gave some very interesting talks and suggestions along the line of her work. Several times during the session she entertained the teachers by singing or reciting. We would mention in particular the program consisting of songs and recitations, rendered by Mrs Gail and Mr. Woodley. The program lasted for an hour and was thoroughly enjoyed by the teachers and visitors who were present. We feel that the institute was a success and that those who attended will be better fitted for their work, and should be prepared to do good enough to give us such another one next year, we hope that attendance in the county will be so increased with other things that she cannot find time to attend.

At the examination which took place last week, twenty five applicants for certificates were examined. It is not yet known how many were successful but we hope that all will be.

The examination was harder than usual, yet the teachers showed more confidence in their ability than in greatly others.

Respectfully,
J. M. BELSHER, Com

Bluff and Blister.

The Grand Traverse county Clovell boomers and some of their allies in the upper counties, seem to have adopted the bluff and blister method of shaping public opinion in the congressional canvas.

They go about with such an air of supreme, smiling confidence, claiming cities and counties and ballwicks, that to some it may appear that Mr. Darragh is already defeated.

Don't be deceived by this kind of talk. We do not believe Mr. Covell approves the bluff and blister tactics.

These same boomers add to their assumed optimism the very foolish policy of belittling Mr. Darragh's ability and public services. This will make no votes for Mr. Covell. Mr. Darragh's record is an open book. Intelligent voters know what he has done and what he is capable of doing.

Mr. Darragh's services to his district was endorsed in 1904 by a third nomination and again endorsed at the polls by an increased majority of 5,645 over that of 1902—his first election. This increase alone almost repeated Mr. Medick's majority on his third election.

These increased majorities speak louder than words. They show that the people appreciate the services of a capable, industrious and upright public servant. They could not have been passed on with a weak candidate.

Honest, honest and unexpressive men will win.

Preaching at Bergen school house 3 p. m.

Sunday was a great day at the Baptist church. Dr. W. J. Williamson of the third Baptist church, St. Louis, Mo. preached two sermons of marvelous power, beauty and simplicity. All hearts were moved by his earnestness and eloquence. After the morning sermon the pastor stated that the church was in debt $900 and that almost that much more was needed for improvements.

The Ladies Aid of the church started the list with $100, A. B. Fulcher followed with $100, B. F. Edwards of St. Louis, Mo. gave his check for $100, J. W. Teesdale followed with $50 and increased it to $100 at the evening service. These were the larger amounts which were followed by others proportionally as large. In a very few minutes over $600 was raised. It is has since been raised to almost $700 and more to hear from, we expect it will reach $800 or more when all is in. The friends of the church among the churches were very generous.

By Monday evening cash enough had been paid to discharge all debts, and some left. All obligations will be met by Thursday evening, and a time of great rejoicing is expected at the prayer meeting.

As a token of appreciation of the efforts of the pastor in bringing about this result he was granted an extra two weeks vacation and $50 to pay expenses.

The pastor and church wish to express their profound gratitude to the many generous friends of the church and to the Lord for making possible this day of victory. It was a great day, great audiences, great music, great sermons, a great offering, great rejoicing.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Beaverites are flocking to the island this summer as never before.

Two new families are resorting to tents on Sixth avenue. They are Dr. Hinkley and Prof. Bergquist, with their families, all of Kendall, Iowa.

Dr. C. E. Ruth has put in a fine place in his cottage this summer which is a thing of taste beauty. It is made entirely of packed stone from the lake shore about here. The doctor values it at $2,000.

The Rev Dr. Worrell of Kentucky, and his son, who is also a D. D., of Kansas City, are spending the summer on the Island and incidentally accomplishing a great deal of good by a series of services each Sabbath morning and evening at the Chapel. Both are preachers of national reputation, and the Island people who have attended these services have been greatly helped in the life spiritual.

Some of the highest class music was rendered and the best selections from the repertoires of Caruso, Melbonough, Melba and others were given and so well pleased was the audience that several of these were encored. Mrs. McInerney of New York, rendered several contraltoings in her own inimitable manner, and Miss Gale, in her excellent recitations, still further enhanced her reputation as a unique entertainer. The entertainment was a social and financial success and the congregation much appreciates the efforts made by the restoring friends for the benefit of the church.

"The Holy City."

For this, the third season of Gordon and Bennett's wonderful drama "The Holy City, every degree of theatrical representation has been made to excel. The allegory, musical, spectacle and tableau representations greatly enjoyed last year, the large company of superior talent, costumed in garments of almost bewildering beauty, is stronger and more brilliantly arrayed, and additional accessories have been provided. Nothing more dramatically complete will be seen this season and it is of pleasant record that last year's success is being surpassed. Managers Lorenzo & Lehner confidently expect this engagement will be to the capacity of the theatre.

THE FARMERS' PICNIC.

The Sugar Company Will Make September Sixth a Day Long to be Remembered.

Thursday, Sept. 6th, is the date fixed for the big farmer's picnic at the Sugar factory, and the company is exerting itself to make the event the most stupendous success on record.

As already outlined in these columns the sugar factory will be turned over to the farmers. Tables will be built for their accommodation on two floors, and the big stock room will be used for dancing, for which an orchestra will be supplied.

Everybody is expected to bring baskets, but coffee will be supplied by the company. Ample space is provided on the grounds for teams.

Two bands—the East Jordan band, and the Kalkaska ladies band will be here to furnish music. Able speakers will be there to talk about things of general interest to the farmers.

Special trains will be run on the Pere Marquette at reduced rates, and the steamboats will also give excursion rates.

The prospects now are that the 6th of September will be a big day for the farmers.

"The Holy City" Friday Night.

There is about a drama advertised as being "finished" that which may cause many to ask whether a sacred story is so interesting as one of current days. The birth of Christian, the crucifixion of the Saviour and the beheading of John the Baptist formed an epoch in which occurred the tragedy of the world; from this history Clarence Bennett compiled "The Holy City." No story of modern stress has half the power, so narrative of recent years presents the thrill of that which has lasted throughout all ages.

Darragh is All Right.

Speaking of Mr. Darragh's success in securing an appropriation of $40,000 for a public building at Traverse City, The Evening Herald, under date of February 16, 1903, in Mr. Darragh's second term, under the caption, "Harrah Is All Right", said: "Congressman Darragh during his first term attained a position of influence in the house seldom gained by a first termer, and his business, ability and wide knowledge of public affairs gave him at once a place among the most influential members of the house. Having gained the consent of the committee to report favorably upon an appropriation of $40,000 for a building for Traverse City at this session, demonstrates with additional force the regard with which he is held by his colleagues. Mr. Darragh has certainly worked faithfully for this end of his district, and the people of this city will congratulate him upon his successful efforts in our behalf. If the appropriation passes both houses successfully it is quite probable that work on the building can be started the coming summer."

"Statesman Darragh." We read in a few of our exchanges that the press of the eleventh congressional district—that is, those that favor the re nomination of Congressman Darragh—is "unanimous." In other words, those papers whiler advocate Mr. Darragh's renomination have been hired for a price to endorse his candidacy. The Advocate has no way of knowing whether this is true or not beyond its own experience, but so far this paper it is absolutely false. The Advocate has never been asked by Mr. Darragh or his friends to support him, and in doing so, does what it believes to be for the best interest of the district. The advocate is not for sale to anyone, and we believe the same is true of the other newspapers in the district who are supporting Mr. Darragh. Neither would we charge others with being mercenary, but it does not look well to see them blanketing the charge of dishonesty. It is a right which every newspaper has, and should have, to support any man it may choose for any position, the same as any citizen, but it should have honest motives in so doing, and when it resorts to the tirades some of our exchanges have, and without cause, they themselves are not above suspicion. If any of them have been offered anything to support Mr. Darragh, we would be pleased to know it. Speak out, gentlemen, that we may know whether your charges have any foundation in fact.—The Shepherd Advocate.

FATAL CROSSING ACCIDENT

Thomas Baker Killed Last Night by a P. M. Train.

Thomas Baker, a brother of Sim Baker, of this township, was killed by the late north bound train last night at the seed warehouse crossing.

Baker was thrown nearly on the right of way and his neck broken with him in the buggy was Miss Gail a twice and the housekeeper for Sim Baker, where deceased lived, she was thrown some distance, but the only injury she sustained was a bruise on wrist. The horse was killed. The sound was about sixty pieces of age and unmarried.

It is stated by those who saw the train that the engine had no headlight.

Mr. Darragh's Majorities.

That Congressman A. B. Darragh is an exceptionally strong man in the eleventh district is a matter of history. He has represented this district six years.

Hon. Wm S. Mesick of Antrim county, who preceded him, was considered an able and popular man, and at his last election, November 1902, he received a majority of 7,645 over his opponent.

In 1902 Mr. Darragh increased his majority, winning over his opponent by 14,427 votes.

In 1904, the last congressional election, A. B. Darragh received a majority of 21,645 over his democratic opponent, thus increasing the republican majority in the district by six years by 7,000 votes. Such a man is safe for the republicans to tie to, in this, an off year.—Berryton Press.

Representative Aechlbach Band Carragh.

WASHINGTON D. C. Aug 16 '06

To the Editor:

Those who have watched the career of the Hon. A. B. Darragh in the House of Representatives will unite in the hope that the Michigan congressional district he represents will be represented in the next congress by a man who will be able to secure a fair share of the largest and finest harbors on Lake Michigan—the Grand Traverse Bay, Charlevoix, Manistee, Muskegon and Ludington. This is not the time. The Northwest or Northeast, the two government harbors locate on the great lakes, would naturally drain some trade the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company's large steamer Falcon, drawing ten feet, enters the harbor three times a week laden with iron ore for the Bayan City Iron Co.

Great leaks give the harbor the appearance. Nowhere that Congressman Darragh has been in the house for anything that benefits Lake Michigan in this needed improvement on Congress.

Congressman Darragh is another the sole congressman, counsel for his district, and a man who is a leader of such rebuilding, the improvement of which is of the very highest importance to the entire state, and the very highest importance to the Northern portion of the district that they hope to win the favor of the people. The people of Charlevoix county, who know the facts, will resent this kind of political tactics.

We confess frankly that at the present we felt personally, a very high regard for Mr. Covell, who we believe to be a worthy and honest friend. We frankly hoped that an explanation would creep into the campaign. It may be that Mr. Covell is not responsible for the bluff and blister methods of his political medium. We would like to know, whether he does or not, we cannot infer from those questionable tactics. Such methods are dishonorable. It is not only dishonorable, it is dangerous.

A Good Idea.

A good idea, however, was had at Acme recently. Grandfather L. Hyatt who was Mr. Hyatt was quite a young man, was a member of the Michigan legislature and represented Antrim. Time of his service was long ago, and he was a young man when he first entered the legislature. Now he is a grandfather, Mrs. Hyatt, who was Miss Mary Hyatt, and Mrs. Hyatt, who was Miss Mary Hyatt, and Mrs. Hyatt, who was Miss Mary Hyatt, and

BRYAN AND TARIFF

FAVORS THE TRUST ISSUE IN THE 1908 CAMPAIGN.

Regards Silver Question as "a Dead Horse"—Thinks Tariff Reduction Better Than Reciprocity as a Policy.

According to the Sioux City Journal of June 16 William Jennings Bryan was interviewed regarding the political situation in the United States.

He gave expression to the opinion that the issue election in the United States would turn on the question of tariff revision. The silver issue, he said, was a "dead horse."

Being asked about the prospects of the success of a campaign against Mr. Bryan said that he was by force of a general reduction of tariff duties, some reciprocal treaties with foreign countries would be made.

The silver issue being a "dead horse" it follows that the issue upon the campaign of 1908 will be the tariff. In the fall of 1896 and again except for the distribution of free silver as a political issue, the tariff was the issue upon which the battle was waged. Mr. Bryan's position in regard to the tariff question, as he would put it, would be to place it on the ground of revenue only, and not for protection, or in fact a tariff that would have the effect of protection. Such a tariff would be a tariff for revenue only. He said that he would not be in favor of a reciprocity treaty with Canada which would place the products of Canada on the same footing with those of the United States, because the wages paid in Canada are much lower than those paid in the United States. He said that he would be in favor of a reciprocity treaty with Canada which would place the products of Canada on the same footing with those of the United States, if it could be made to include Mexico, because the wages paid in Mexico are lower than those paid in Canada.

Mr. Bryan's preference for tariff revision and his reproduction of free silver appear to somewhat with the economic and his ability and it may be that he will appeal strongly to those who are in favor of a tariff for revenue only. He said that he would be in favor of a reciprocity treaty with Canada which would place the products of Canada on the same footing with those of the United States, if it could be made to include Mexico, because the wages paid in Mexico are lower than those paid in Canada.

Mr. Bryan's pronouncement upon the issue as the principal condition of the party platform is in line with his position in political situation and controls. It appears that he has made a resolution that is not in accordance with the views of the Democratic party. Protection or no protection is the issue of the day. Free trade, free trade and free trade and free trade and free trade.

Free trade, free trade and free trade and free trade.

Eggs and Prices.

To have things cheap is the ostensible ideal of free traders and tariff reformers. They do have things cheap, very cheap, when they do not with the tariff. This result is achieved by the simple process of demoralizing our customers of the ability to pay, and depriving the poor workers of their wages. We are selling Tuppence a dozen in the Branch High Lands. Its foreign cost, in the Dominion, was not many cents, but the price paid for it has been much more either in the form of taxes, or, and that is the more common, in the form of the Tariff. This, we are prepared to show at and accomplishes.

Farmers Must Be Wear Water.

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 4.—Farmers of the south Omaha packing plants will be paid for water when cattle are purchased. Five percent of the cattle will be weighed with cattle and shipped daily. DECLARATION OF THE LEAGUE OF REPUBLICAN CLUBS.

Dingley Law Upheld as the Best Ever Enacted—Benefits It Has Conferred on the Whole People.

The tariff importance cannot be attached to the tariff (Dingley) of the platform adopted by the Republican National League at the Golden Jubilee convention in Philadelphia. It is the only platform that can be called the official utterance of the Republican party of the entire union for that is why it is the only one that has been adopted by every state and territory and endorsed by a majority of the delegates from every congressional district without the least dissent in any state. We are proud of the fact that we have been entrusted with the duty of formulating the declaration of principles and the issues and stand guarantee the campaign. The Democratic party might prove too strong for a party in union.

It will be noticed that Mr. Bryan indicates in his editorial that the platform of the Democratic party will be the platform of free trade in raw materials. In the event that the Democratic party should adhere to the policy of guaranteeing equal protection and to the producers and the users of raw materials the campaign in the Democratic party might prove too strong for a party in union.

Democrats Will Be Wear Water.

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 4.—Farmers within 50 miles of Niagara Falls are offering to sell their cattle to the Dominion Government for the use of the Canadian troops. Farmers have lost one of the current and a hog of 75 miles 25 cents in the Dominion. Meanwhile labor worth take four days work at kicking cows and contemporaries dies.

BRYAN ON TARIFF PLATFORM

Undoubtedly That Will Be the Democratic Position in 1908—Duty of Republicans.

The Democrats of the country are preparing to go will run Wm. Jennings Bryan. Every leading man in the country excepting Grover Cleveland, is now for Bryan. Henry Watterson is in the center Democrat of Missouri is the important Bryan man at the present time. At the Jackson Democratic convention a few days ago Bryan was cheered and the Democratic delegates themselves became so enthusiastic in their behalf. The Democratic platform in 1908 will be the tariff issue and the Democrats will be the party of free trade. The Republicans will be the party of protection.

Tariff Revision Is Necessary.

KITE CAUSES DEATHS.

YOUTH TRIES BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S EXPERIMENT.

Wire Kite Thread Has Endless Wire and Contains Bills Boy and His Mother — Hundreds Attend Funeral Yesterday.

Bronze Medal—Given to youth of Philadelphia who saved his sister from drowning in Schuylkill River and received medal from Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, yesterday decided to attend funeral of Benjamin Franklin Thaw, who died a victim of his experiment with kite and electric wire.

The youth's mother, who was injured when her son was killed, was unable to attend the funeral services, which were held at her home, 1400 Diamond street, Allegheny, yesterday afternoon. Hundreds of persons who had been attracted to the house by the news of the boy's death were unable to gain admittance to the house.

The Rev. Dr. Stephen Phillips, of the Sixth United Presbyterian church, officiated. The pallbearers were all young men, friends of the family.

Thaw's father, who was injured in the explosion of his son's experiment, is still in a critical condition at his home, 5 Ridge avenue, Allegheny.

Thaw's mother, who was injured when her son was killed, is reported to be in a critical condition at her home, 1400 Diamond street, Allegheny.

Thaw's sister, who was rescued from the water by her brother, is recovering from the effects of her adventure.

During the past week a business deal of great importance to Bellaire and vicinity has been consummated. The banking business so successfully carried on for the past six years by Stickles, Tiffany & Co. has been purchased by F. W. Rechtold, who will at once proceed to organize with $20,000 capital a State Bank to be known as the "Bellaire State Bank."

Dean S. Burns, undersheriff of this county, has had an much experience spotting and catching criminals that it takes a pretty cute one to get away from him. A man not several chickens including burglary and horse stealing, in the upper peninsula, had given the officers a third chase getting as far as Cheboygan where for three times off his trail by leaving his gun at a hotel and making for charlevoix. The sheriff of Charlevoix Co. had been notified to look out for the man and soon after took a suspicious character into custody and telephoned Deputy Burns to come after him. As Mr. Burns got off the train he noticed a man who attracted his attention by trying to escape it, so took pains to find out who he was, the man proving to be the man wanted, with the one the sheriff was holding was allowed to go.

The greatest day in the history of the Northport Indian campmeeting closed the little with a public banquet to the town hall, tendered to the honored guests, the Hon. William Alden Smith, the Hon. Patrick Kelley, Commissioner C. L. Lillie and Hon. H. P. Bishop, the Hon. A. P. Fanting and Prosecuting Attorney C. L. Dayton. The hall had been decorated with artistic effect in patriotic colors and emblems. Long tables were set at either end while a smaller one occupied the space in the center. Generous bowls of flowers added their fragrance to the scene while Horst's orchestra played enlivening melodies during the banquet. At 9 o'clock 300 guests sat down to the banquet with the Rev. J. D. Deets as toast master. President of the village, H. B. Gill, briefly but heartily welcomed the distinguished guests who were given the keys to the charming little village.

After continuing in operation only a little over a month, the large North port Beach hotel, the biggest summer hotel in this region, closed its doors last Thursday. There were about twenty or a score in the house at the time of closing and a party of 200 was expected the next day. The house was furnished for the season of 1906 and was under the management of C. E. Handy. It was elegantly furnished and preparations were made for large bookings. It has been known for a week or more that the house would be closed by a court order, the creditors having been let go Monday. The party which was expected in under the auspices of the Bartlett Tourist company of Detroit and Toledo would have remained several days attending the Indian camp meeting. The party is now at Frankfort and it is not known where it will go from there as none of the bay resorts can accommodate that number of guests, the bookings being very heavy all over.

The Grand Traverse soldiers' and Sailors' association will hold their annual reunion in Traverse City this year, having fixed on the dates of September 12 & 13. This will be the fortieth annual gathering of the society, and to guard against any chill of anything of a direct nature, the local members are burning every energy toward providing a program that will successfully buy the boys off. All posts are requested to bring tents, blankets and cooking utensils, for the association as a whole will supply the rations. Boyne City is noted for her hospitality, and with such distinguished guests may be called upon to treat the visitors with every courtesy. Refined rates will be given on all boat and railroad lines, enabling all to come who feel inclined. The local citizens, Commander John A. Newville and Adjutant E. M. Oatte are sanguine that its attendance will be the largest in the history of the association. John Jones has been appointed quartermaster and the commissary department is to be in charge of comrade George W. Heaton.

NORWOOD NEWS.

S. S. Spaulding and wife left for Elk Rapids last Friday.

Miss Pearl a wife of Central Lake were here Sunday.

Mr. A. H. Meech and wife of Elizabeth were here over Sunday.

Mrs. John Runyon has gone to East Jordan to visit her daughter Mrs. Chew.

Miss Irene and Miss Marie Quigley of Chicago, are visiting at William Pearls.

Thomas Crosby who has been here last past 3 weeks returned to Chicago, Sunday night.

Master Ward Pearl of Chicago, arrived Friday night, and is visiting his relatives at the Pearl place.

The L. A. S. of Norwood will give an ice cream social at the town hall Wednesday evening of this week.

Mr. O'Morrow took a load of people over to Northport to his launch Sunday to attend the camp meeting.

George H. Van Pelt took a company of about 25 Thursday last to Eastport and from there through the chain of lakes as far as Elk Lake, all report having a good time.

Miss Ella Spaulding for many years a resident of Norwood, but for the last year living in Grand Rapids, was drowned in Reed's lake last Tuesday night. She was about 22 years old and was a niece of Mrs. Henry Gaskins. Her body was found Saturday and she will be buried in Manistee, Mich.

At the telephone meeting held here Thursday evening, on the interests of the telephone exchange between this and Atwood assessed the proposition of the Bell Co. and will be served through that line. Mr. A. S. Eder of Lansing representing the Rural Development Company of the Mich. State Telephone Co. was here and attended the meeting.

Mr. E. O. Mann of the U. S. survey for the lakes, was unable to locate the site of the old observation tower at Lone Ledge point. He has put up a new one on the top of the Stafford hill, another will be put up a few miles south, and time in connection with the 4 miles south of Cut Head point will form the triangle. An entire new chart of the reefs and shoals is to be made.

Miss Bertha Faderley, Miss Elizabeth Freeman and George F. Shaver, celebrated for his beautiful water colors, have been spending the past 7 weeks sketching and painting, white birch trees in Van Pelt's picturesque grounds. The part of the Grand Traverse region should be made still more famous from collector just made. All 3 left for Chicago Tuesday, and will will be back in Norwood next summer.

A. W. H. Lenders agent of the large Cora Fodder and Silo factory at Waukegan Illinois is spending a week with his friend John H. Van Pelt at the Spring. The new resort hotel, "Grand Pines" has done a large business this summer, and our town is bound to be one of the famous Summer resorts of Northern Michigan and well it may be, on account of its high elevation there is always a breeze clear from the lakes, and to it is a well known fact that Norwood is the coolest place in the summer and warmest in the winter, of any point in the Grand Traverse region, a certainty, and this is why it is such a safe place for all kinds of business.

The first of The World of vaudeville that visited E. H. Waite, of Beaver Grove, Ia., of all usefulness, came when he began taking Electric Bitters. He writes: "Three years ago Sidney Brown caused me great suffering, which I could never have survived had it not taken Electric Bitters." Sold under guarantee at Hayes & Co's drug store. Price 50c. CHAPTER XXI. (Continued.)

I was mentally stupid about it, and one in the morning I thought I heard a noise in the passage outside my door. Instantly I popped my head and peeped out. My father's door was shut as I spied, and I became the two left Heath in a group very far from me and. He waved his hand to me with a blue smile as if I were a child he was holding in his of the second rank. I sang undisturbed after that.

It was as we took our place for a twelve o'clock luncheon that the second shock came to me. It was in now it reach:

"It dangle grasses, conclusively fully potter. We started on receipt of your message, and I have the pleasure to Should be at Pontresina at one o'clock tonight. Meet us there. Gridley."

I called to Dick at once to be bad enough to take a special train and follow us. Dick was a good fellow, and I knew very good-natured he. He looked very grave when I translated the telegram.

"And now no telegram, Freddie?" "No, Herr Heath."

"Not yet, Dick, dear?"

"No, Herr, no," said my father.

"Then nothing has come to the post office." I said. "I am sure I. It would send a train."

I turned to him with fear gathering when my mind. Who had done this thing? And why?

"It must be Gridley, Frankie, some edition of the old gentleman." Well he understands, I cannot, and I know he has discovered that we are here. But Nora is a white angel to me. I know she is. Those, to wish those who are harmed me to do.

"I will come back soon, Herr," said my father.

"Do, Dick," said I, "and bring Nora with you."

Lady Grove great strength to woman and I spoke as one who expects to be obeyed. It was a long time before I saw Dick, yet from the first I did not permit myself to think of the possibility of treachery from the fraudulent of his young protégée. I felt that she dared not do so, for I knew well that her beautiful face would be the greatest force in my favor towards us.

For some moments we had stood motionless, helpless, before this amazing apparition. It was Dick who first decided—it was he who seized me by the arm, and led me to the elevator to take us up down the way we had come—and I was grateful to him. Step wobbly towards the where lend it our rear. I had always counted it when I should have to do so that justice on the remorseless of my enemies. I had always thought that I should know what injury is my heart. Honest as I have been in my life, I felt no remorse for my enemies.

Dick had had no time to change, to lay the gift, insently giving space to clear the way for the man. Step wobbly with the gaunt of an unknown, dirty, ragged, and bearded man. I knew at once that this was a change my driver was provoking, for it was he who had aligned his team against the cliff. They would have to pass him on the outer side.

I started up the road, shouting to him, but as I did so I saw Dick spring upon the box. I heard cries of furious altercation, and then the driver was thrown from his place. He dropped on hands and knees, then rose and came running past me round the bend.

The stage stopped, and our team running across the road, drawing up on the edge of the precipice. If the man who Dick the driver was not struck with terror, they had to a chance to the Kaiserin, and mark this been almost reached. In Doctor Tariff Before—You are a very sick man. You ought to go straight to bed and take no medicine.

Uncle Sam—No, I think not. With exports for 1905 of $1,743,985,032; with imports of $1,226,032,035, with a favorable trade balance of $517,148,235; with business booming with all labor employed at the highest wages ever known, I don't seem to need any tariff reform medicine just now.

POLITICAL COMMENT

The Tariff Will Stand.

At the conference of Republican leaders at Oyster Bay it was determined that the party, in the congressional campaign shall oppose all tinkering with the tariff at this time. President Roosevelt, Speaker Cannon, Chairman Babcock of the Congressional Campaign Committee, and the rest of the Republican chieftains who were at the meeting, took this position. It will be proclaimed in the Republican text book for this, which will be issued in two or three weeks. At the meeting, where the proofs were submitted to the President, the final line has been given to the text-book. Every campaign orator and every Republican newspaper will have a copy of the text-book by the formal opening of the campaign. It is well to have the party's position on this issue officially set forth at the outset in the campaign, because in Iowa, Wisconsin, Massachusetts and one or two other states there has recently been some talk in favor of tariff revision.

Republican stump speakers and issue papers will, in fact, have as easy and pleasant task in warding from the home fire whatever tariff has conferred upon the country. They can point to more prosperity at home than has ever been seen in the past, and can show the foreign trade within this ever been rolled up in the aggregate exports and imports of merchandise the Kaiserin, one mark this been almost reached. NERVOUS PROSPERITY.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS.

By Rev. E. Savell Hicks, M. A.

Text: "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again. All things are full of labor; man cannot utter it; the eye is not satisfied with seeing nor the ear filled with hearing." Ecclesiastes 1:7, 8.

As far as human nature, human passions and all, human aspirations and disappointments, the human wrestling with problems whose solution is beyond the ken of the human, are concerned, there is one thing under the sun." And it need not astonish us to find the doleful wail of the weariness of experience pointing to no rest, in a single age. The writer of Ecclesiastes, which may be taken as the result of pessimism, was struck with the monotonous round of life, the world rushing hard and hard in business or being weighed heavy on his heart.

The true meaning of life is a matter of supreme importance to the world. It has been the theme of philosophers and poets, and its earnest purpose. It all depends on the eyes with which you look upon it. If you look out for all weariness and repetition, you will find abundance of it. I pity the man, says Harry Hotspur, who can go from Inn to Hermitage, from Hall to Bower, and still is sad as he is all the world to him who sees not only the fruits of office.

The man who is the world's work, who has to fight the warring elements, the resistant, raise the fallen and bring order out of chaos, is the man who is to find in life a happy s of the home. Thus strength and the joy of the man are the fruits of his labors. Thus strength and the joy of the man are the fruits of his labors. Thus strength and the joy of the man are the fruits of his labors

SENSE IS NEEDED.

ALONG WITH A GREAT DEAL COMMON TACT.

Having Acquired These, and Standing Shoulder to Shoulder, John Sharp Williams Thinks the Democrats Might Carry the Next House of Representatives.

John Sharp Williams has lately expressed his conviction regarding the outlook for a redistribution of the apportioned fortunes of the Democratic party.

We are upon the eve of carrying the house of representatives, if we only are resolute, shoulder to shoulder, and show common tact and common sense.

To convert the Democratic party, which figuratively used to characterize all its unqualified superior to show common tact and common sense, into one manageable conditions, is as impracticable as to expect the leopard to change his spots. It is difficult to conceive a period of time within the past 40 years when the Democratic party failed to do the wrong thing at the right time. Today bequeaths to our party, under the guise of Williams, from its almost invariable record. Conceive point of view that could not be made than is to be found in this Mississippi statesman's address to his people and his political associates. Toward the policy of innovation, he avoids circumlocutory argument of allowing itself worthy of being entrusted with the care of the country's affairs, as proofs of which he points to 1892, with the results of inflicting a loss upon the country incontrovertibly estimated at $500,000,000. The latter sum of Democratic "tariff tinkering" is four times more than probably reaches than that sum. It would seem that common sense might have prevented the enacting of this blunder and that common tact might have prevented its repeatment. Perhaps if the Democratic party put the accepted tenets of the American people upon an footing, "common sense and common tact," would be more in evidence.

Mr. Williams's address is a plea for the consolidation of the Democratic party, instead of exclusive control of the Industrial producers and the supporters of the country. One of his arguments showing the advantage derived by the farts of the state of Pennsylvania over adjacent states, as a result of the benefits of protection, for the favored few, while the majority are visited upon the general public, and another demonstrate giving examples that Texas and Tennessee will be found shoulder to shoulder in the promotion of the standard of Free Trade Britain. That is the condition that that is expected to carry the presidential prize of 1896. Texas and Tennessee. Hyson and four trade. John Sharp Williams may well plead for common sense and common tact figures in proof for them.

May Not Be Advantageous.

"An increase in foreign trade may or may not be advantageous to a country or a commonwealth. It depends on conditions and circumstances. It is not necessarily advantageous and it may be positively disadvantageous. For example, Connecticut produces clocks and New Jersey produces jewelry and Connecticut and New Jersey exchange clocks with pottery and New Jersey supplies Connecticut with pottery.

"We will suppose that the annual exchange is of $1,000,000 worth of clocks for $1,000,000 worth of pottery, each exchange, $2,000,000.

"Suppose further that under a condition of free trade or reciprocity Connecticut, instead of exchanging clocks with New Jersey, exchanges her money for French pottery.

"In each case France gains what New Jersey has lost.

"Suppose, still about a sale of $2,000,000 but this sale is at the expense of New Jersey's home and factory. The importer also shows a gain of $1,000,000 "total increase of foreign trade, $2,000,000.

"What has the nation gained? Nothing.

"I had lost by the transaction $1,000, Lost necessarily the sum paid to New Jersey labor and production, less the profit to the labor cost of the pottery imported from France.

"It may be that this difference amounts to $50 gain. In that case the nation has saved $950,000 and lost $1,000,000.

"Net loss, $950,000 a year.

"So the $2,000,000 "gain" in foreign trade turns out to be $1,000,000 loss.

"As a matter of fact there has been a loss and no gain.

FAULTS OF THE PRESIDENT

Veteran Republican Editor Points Out Many Blots on the Political Record of Theodore Roosevelt.

The Morning Star, of Washington, D. C., edited by the venerable Crosby S. Noyes, but for twenty half a century been the leading Republican newspaper north of Philadelphia, and its venerable editor was for twenty-five years, with Lincoln, Republican preacher since Lincoln's time. He knows party, perhaps, than any other living man, the extreme power and, in the highest sense of office, society in Washington. His editorial utterances are therefore of the first importance. In the Star of June 29 Mr. Noyes in his leading editorial, speaking of Roosevelt, says: "He does not seem to realize all the strenuous endeavor in the extension of anything he has within, when he is wanting in the strong, big-minded, high and noble sense. Thomas Lawe expressed, when changes the rights growing the position to charge government, given on all occasions, up to little object of wrong.

He cites observation Mr. Noyes has [illegible] that Mr. Roosevelt has lost sight for many people than for many questionable characters, and cites the Harlem appointment in support of this conclusion. Harlem has been a sore to the people of West Harlem for years, of the brutal treatment of Mrs. Minor Meeker, and the Star says, in commendation defiance of enough public opinion to Roosevelt, announced the person should disappointed, and the social outrage in one of the best paying offices in the city.

The Star also charges that a disgraceful contract was made between the president and Thomas the author of Mike Quin as head of the Department of Agriculture, which contract, by terms of which Thomas is to help Thomas and Outlaws to receive more for the seed supplied to farmers for the seed supplied to Department of Agriculture, and the contract is between Washington Thomas and Outlaws, the latter of which is the leading firm in the seed business in Washington, and the contract is between Thomas and Outlaws, the latter of which is the leading firm in the seed business in Washington.

Thomas is a man who makes money with Outlaws, and Outlaws is a firm making a fortune out of the seed business, which being a Democratic firm is a fit subject for Republican Roosevelt to favor at all times.

The Star also charges that the Department of Agriculture has been in the hands of the political capital and employed in Democratic work, and that Roosevelt knew of the fact, and that he could have prevented the repetition, but that he did not. The Star also charges that the accepted tenets of the American people upon an footing, "common sense and common tact," would have prevented the repetition.

AT EXPENSE OF FARMERS.

Removal of Duty on Hides Would Aid the Manufacturer, But Not the Agriculturist.

One of the measures upon the tariff revision table which received prominence in the recently last week, "I'm sorry to say," said Senator Vest, "is the benefit of the manufacturers. Strange to say, no person there is an element of the lively great agricultural state that is the last has joined in this demand, notwithstanding the fact that it can give the farmer's market and one of the comparatively few things which actually do add the direct benefit of protection. The plea has been that the duty on hides is a tax on the farmer, and that the duty should be taken off. The duty on hides is a tax on the farmer, and the duty should be taken off. The duty on hides is a tax on the farmer, and the duty should be taken off. The duty on hides is a tax on the farmer, and

Just a Word Before Election.

Next Tuesday the republicans of the 11th congressional district will decide who the candidate for congress shall be.

There is very little use in any more newspaper talk. Republicans do not need to be advised further, and, so far as the SENTINEL is concerned, we rest the case.

We sincerely believe that the re-election of A. B. Darragh to Congress the coming fall, is for the best interests of the district, and a deserved endorsement of the record of a good, faithful public servant.

Darragh Secured Primary Reform in District.

The Kalkaskian says: "The people of this district, as well as throughout the rest of the state, have awakened to the fact that the control of the party in the hands of the "bosses" has been curtailed. The day is here when the people will nominate their congressman by their own direct vote and not through the machine controlled caucus and convention, heretofore dominated by the office holders of the state."

True and by whose efforts has the nomination of congressman for this district been placed directly in the hands of the people? It was by Mr. Darragh's bill that the congressional committee was called together, the petitions for primary reform circulated and the direct voting system inaugurated. It comes with mighty poor grace for Mr. Covell, who did absolutely nothing to secure direct nominations in this district to now try to claim the credit. Except for Mr. Darragh's efforts the district would still be under the "machine controlled caucus and convention."

The plank in the democratic state platform referring to trusts and corporations and combinations, was evidently written by some member of that party who knows nothing of the important happenings of recent years. Written by one, evidently, who did not know that republican legislation, enforced by republican officials had made clear cut precedents for the arrest and conviction of violators of the laws of which the democrat state platform has such vague and lubber information. It may be well to remind the author of that platform that every act that has on the statute books of our nation is a republican law and that every successful prosecution of violators of the trust laws were conducted by republicans under republican administrations.

With the work of the state conventions of the present week completed, Michigan's state campaign will be formally opened, although no active work in that direction will probably be started until late in September. There would seem to be very little need for any sort of a state campaign in Michigan this year. Governor Warner is just completing his first term in office and that first term has been as satisfactory to all the people of Michigan to every support so that of any governor since Michigan became a state. Every interest of the state has been guarded and every effort in behalf of state interests has been successful. Not a word of fault has been found with any state officer or any member of the present administration. Such a record well deserves the popular endorsement, it is sure to receive.

WHEREVER other more or less vague generalities may be made use of in connection with democratic declarations in Michigan and elsewhere through the coming campaign, it should be distinctly kept in mind that the desire of that party is to make radical changes in our country's policy. Whatever the reputation party is doing the democratic party is opposed to continuing. There is probably not a single member of the latter organization in the entire United States who sincerely believes that better results would accompany any radical change, but the changes will be insisted upon if a sufficient number of democrats be elected to make them. This view of the matter makes it of direct personal interest to all who have plans of their own for the future and who are counting on conditions such as have accompanied recent years. Present conditions will not continue if democratic opposition is approved.

"The Belle of Japan."

All our theatre goers will undoubtedly be delighted to be enabled to witness that most genial and novel of all comedy creations "The Belle of Japan," when it appears at the "Charlevoix Theatre" on Tuesday night, Sept. 4th. This is H. Grattan Donnelly, the well known American author's masterpiece, it is so full of originless and pleasing features that it is the talk of the town wherever played, and packed houses are the natural result. Miss Bessie Clifton, appears as "Tini", The Belle of Japan," and it is around this character the author has woven a story of more than ordinary interest, using types of character of the present Japan, mingled with American and English visitors at Yokahoma, with which to build up one of the strongest and positively one of the most novel comedy dramas ever written. Beautiful scenery and costumes are used, and many musical and dancing numbers are introduced during the action of the play which being a good pure and wholesome comedy makes one better for having seen it. Tickets will be on sale Saturday.

Charlevoix County Gets a Hoist.

The State Board of Equalization at Lansing last week, raised the valuation of the entire state.

Charlevoix county was raised from $4,200,000 to $6,000,000.

Antrim county was raised about $2,000,000.

Mr. Davis will need to be informed, after his return from Alaska, that a number of matters arose in his particular in connection with political campaign speeches before he entered upon that work in behalf of democratic candidates for congress. He can be told that the American tariff policy has enabled his country not only to sell more goods to other countries than the greatest foreign rival of any other nation on earth, but has assisted in surpassing even its own best former record. He can be reminded that wages are higher today in America than ever before, and that there is a greater demand for more men at higher wage than even his most dream like free-silver speeches ever foretold. Mr. Bryan can be assured that republican anti trust laws are being enforced by a republican administration, and that the enforcement is without fear or favor and is getting results. Indeed, very much more than Mr. Bryan could put in two or three congratulatory speeches can be told of the good fortune that has come to his country, and his countrymen since his last speeches here in behalf of a change were made. As a prospective democrat candidate, however, Mr. Bryan will probably not enjoy this information half as thoroughly as the Americans people have enjoyed the experiences it will review.

SHORT ON CASH.

Not Enough Money to Pay Militia Expenses in Encampments.

After a month of hard work Secretary Root, now at the War Department, in Washington, concluded that he had made quite a satisfactory adjustment of the many difficulties in apportioning the appropriation of $1,000,000 for pay of the militia at the encampments in different camps throughout the country. He is more than half of the opinion that these funds had to be apportioned in the quartermaster's department. The original estimates were made by the department of the army in the portion of preparing the bill which was sent to the house. Repeatedly the estimates for different camps were discussed from different points of view. The question was whether there would be enough in the encampments in Kansas, Illinois and Ohio to pay the expenses of a great number, as many as the law authorizes, to attend encampments. However, all such cases came from Ohio, from Illinois and from Kansas. Some had been in the camps and many expected was then expected. This caused a demand in the national of funds, coming on the days when the camps were to be held. Against some of the boards, limited so, the demand was made that the money should be used for those who had come to camp. It has been argued that the appropriation must be made in the camps from limited funds, and that the money should be used for those who had come to camp. Under the law the money allotted to these funds must be used for those who had come to camp. Congress must be asked for a deficiency.

FREE HIDES WOULD DO HARM.

Senator Warner Drops Some Good Hard Hits to Eastern Manufacturers.

In a speech few years ago before the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, Senator Warner of Wyoming earnestly advised against any attempt to secure a revival of the tariff on wool. "If, said he, in authority, any of you are thinking of free wool I would repeat the cautious advice of Punch to persons contemplating matrimony, 'Don't.' That was experimented, we remember, with some significant expectations to the effect that the tariff on woolens could not vary well in stripped after the tariff on wool should be removed. Senator Warner's last prophecy has doubtful effect. Very little has been heard from wool manufacturers in the last few years on the subject of abolishing the tariff on wool.

Again he sensibly cautions from Wyoming to one hand with a. Don't? This time his advice is addressed to the manufacturers of hides, skins and leather products. Mr. Warner's speech of June 27, in the senate on the subject of "Livestock Statistics—Small Tracts of Land" is a plea so forcible in behalf of sentiment facts as to the magnitude of the western livestock industry which would be ruinously and unjustly to the refusal of the party of protection to continue the protection enjoyed in the tenderly now to the livestock producers of this country.

It will astonish some people to learn that as long ago as 1890 there was according to the twelfth census a total of 11,240,131 persons in the United States whose livelihood was dependent directly and indirectly on the livestock industry, or 22 per cent of our entire working population, and that the gross value of such products, including retail butchering, will be 1890 reach $2,000,000,000.

Based on these facts, known in Senator Warner's speech which they well treated the subject, he asks the manufacturers free hides and threaten the downfall of the party of protection unless their demand shall be granted. It should occur to these people that they represent a rather small voting force, compared with the farmers and others who are concerned in the repeal or protective duties on all the products of the livestock industry.

To the farming interest which would it be could students the party of protection by free trade in what it looks while retaining protection for what it sells, the words of Senator Warner should come also as a shock and a warning.

The permanency of protection as a national policy rests largely with the American farmer. When he arrives at the conviction that protection is being withheld from him in order that the profits of manufacturers may be swelled, then the end of protection will swiftly come.

Mr. President, our tariff laws when framed by protectionists have never been entirely in favor one step, one section of the country or one industry. They never will be. We are all so intermediate that an injury to one industry or to one part of the country is an injury to all, and a benefit to one is a benefit to all. To date a minimum protective tariff our freight rates are based from east to west, from west to east, from north to south, from south to north. The farmer is producer, and the manufacturer and employer of both. A protective tariff is a compensating tariff and always must be so. It should not give protection at all and unless it is given to all. It is given fully to none. Protection cannot be sectional and selfish. It must be general and adequate. Such protection is now in force under the operation of the present law. It is not most perfect law we have known. We shall, as a matter of course, have to revise it some time, but not today. We are too busy, too well employed, too well paid for our labor, too prosperous to think seriously of tariff revision in the year of our Lord 1906.

Higher Prices.

The Buffalo Times covers only a page of the subject when it says:

Are you sighing for a tariff revision? Do you know that your money will buy only about two-thirds as much now as it would before the present tariff bill was passed?

Do you also know that a condition of high prices exists throughout the civilized world, and that nobody money will buy more than about two-thirds of what it would buy six years ago? Financial scientists are searching this terrain for current values and this lower purchasing power of money all over the world is an ever more increase in the supply of gold. The condition obtains in free trade Great Britain as well as in protective America. In this country, however, under a protective tariff, employment and wages have some thing kept pace with the higher cost of living, while in the south of Great Britain's work people have no employment and no wages at all with which to pay the higher prices.

An Asset!

"Taft certainly is a Democratic asset," amiably remarks the Washington Post. "Not, that anyone thinks of revision save the chief Democratic issue in 1908, and the party realized on it in great shape. Three months after the realization in the Wilson Bill and the Democratic majority in the house of representatives had been changed back to a Republican majority, and two years later McKinley, the apostle of protectionism, was elected president, along with a congress Republican in both branches. Three Republican presidents and congresses have been elected in succession on the strength of the valuable asset.

An Oregon Catastrophe.

It is cultivating of this city, has a refractory son, and the other day when he went to take care from the woman who is only that his wife, and kick of him on the hand. The boy became seriously swollen, and the prompt attention of a physician prevented a case of blood poison.—Astoria Daily.

GRANGE AND PRESS.

THE LATTER A STRONG ALLY OF THE FORMER.

Work Out an Editor In Every Grange!" Said Founder Kelly in Days When About to Organize the First Grange.

[Special Correspondence.]

From the retrospective of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry in the press and day the newspaper has been the powerful ally of the grange. Its assistance has been sought after by leaders of the movement and its influence has always been appreciated. In 1868, when there was but one subordinate grange in the United States, at Fredonia, the originator of the Order, saw the necessity of "getting on the right side of the editors, and, whose these words to U. M. McDowell, also one of the founders of the Order:

I shall a relationship grange today in which you will see a letter to the "Journal" from a person of influence in one of our papers. Brother Gibbons is one of our most influential editors. Brother Gibbons is "Master and his wife Sister Gibbons is "Ceres" and I want you to get one in the grange.

The above shows Brother Kelly's faith in the success of the Order and its on the intimate which he frankly owed to the editors in the grange. Because of the publicity which was in a position to give it. When Brother Kelly started out on his first tour of organization, he in his journey that the influence of the village press was what he most desired to secure.

In making his monthly report to the national grange, January 1, he says in part:

CHAPTER I

A Tonic congregation was assuming an air of a quiet church one morning in June. St. Mary's, in the hamlet of Islington, Great Wharton, some four miles off, was distinguished as a fashionable place. The Squire was wealthy, the rector popular, and the living was worth about hundred a year. Little Wharton brought the population to only one hundred all told. The Squire went back in the gift of the Earl of Acton, whose seat was near to the other side of Great Wharton. The incumbent of Great Wharton was an old man, almost past duty, the incumbent of Little Wharton was an able and earnest man, scarcely twenty, the Rev. Ralph Bumagetty. Therefore little wonder need be expressed if some of the Great Wharton folks—the Squire and their old rector and many to boot—thought Mr. Bumagetty.

A church was a church, the Squire used to say, and he was not particular about it. The law was to a nonconformist, but a valiant one, the reverse was to Mr. Acton himself. The evening and morning bell was for ever ringing, and, when two ladies engaged from the church, had stepped into a hansom cab, and asked all about the years of age and whether shortly the other was a young widow, whether they were handsome, what height, what features, and hundred more, like an amusement in the world, they went home and drank off.

He never allowed himself to be late, forgot the order first.

Mind, he was a bachelor.

"But it is a long way to come, the squire! I don't complain for myself, but we had two an hour Great Wharton and Little Wharton, you know."

"Well, business settled is more easy observed than done," he would say, adjust something in the carriage that had suddenly gone wrong, or, in the same connection. "It is impossible, Mr. Bumagetty, I can be ready to drive to church! Here, ring the bell, Thomas, and tell Mr. Bumagetty I shall be ready in a quarter of an hour."

"Great pity that Mr. Bumagetty should have lodgings for one place, and a wife for another," Mrs. Hartopp would say, with a sigh, to her husband, who was a mild, easy, good-tempered man, and who would have married a pea, Betty Wilson, if she had asked him, and, indeed, he was half inclined to do it, for the sake of peace and quietness.

"Pity, indeed, my dear, and the afternoon sunny to prolong our drive, will do us good."

Lady Grace laughed as she spoke, and it would have been one more temptation to the Lady Anne had ever been in those parts. Lady Anne was a professional giver, that when her budget drew from the church door she had fully discharged herself of her duty at home, and then go back again. Lady Grace Grace, and her husband, the Squire, which had been instituted by indulgence for one or other of the family.

Another of the congregation had gathered in from Little Wharton, the Squire's family, for one or three and twenty, also had the benefit of the Squire's bar, a far calmer commodious. He opened the chapter of the Squire's family, of the grace found herself in a marvel, abstracted from the church door, and, as she was, was the Mr. Bumagetty's wife, Betty Wilson, the Squire's daughter, and the people in receive and the Squire's family, and the people in the place were at gaze, and no made light of the Squire's family, and the people in the place were at gaze, and no made light of the Squire's family, and the people in the place were at gaze, and no made light of

Mr. Bumpington discovered now, in Miss Honor, looking the flower of rustic maidenhood. He manœuvred to secure a quiet corner under cover of a big fan, but Honor was not to be thus caught. Her business was to entertain Mr. William, and entertain him she did, to the full, in her own simple way. She had an habit in her mind, that if she were agreeable to her guests, they would be agreeable to her. Where, in society, so much more than charity covers a multitude of sins, as in that of being agreeable? Poor Honor, in her simplicity, had not learned that lesson. Mr. William was not good at the fan, or at anything else, that evening. Honor was a young Bumpington herself, and was used to the family ways, so he could be at ease in her company. But she was a Bumpington, in her turn, in her prejudices, strongly and the Bumpington prejudice was deep against the Bumpington family.

In the morning, Honor passed musing on the events of the evening before, and on the hardships she took to be in store for her. Mr. William was a Bumpington, and she was a Bumpington, and there was no escape from the relationship. Mr. William was coming, she was sure, to see her, and she was sorry for it. BANKS FOR THE PHILIPPINES.

Posts: Savings Institutions Established by Government.

Washington.—The Philippine commission has established in the islands a postal savings bank system under direction of the department of commerce and labor. Its act of May 24, which was received at the bureau of insular affairs of the war department here, directs the immediate creation of postal savings banks in the cities of Manila, Iloilo and Cebu, and the establishment of the system in the other chief towns and villages.

Of the three other classes of banks authorized, the first may receive deposits in any amount, but subject to excess of 1,000 pesos, or $500, shall not bear interest. Various institutions are proposed upon deposits and withdrawals in the second and third classes of banks. In the third class deposits are to be made entirely through the medium of postal savings bank stamps, issued in denominations of 5 to and in excess of half a centavo, to extend the privileges of the system to the least prosperous communities. Unexpended stamps may be redeemed at their face value in postage stamps. The commission has made several exceptions in favor of charities and benevolent institutions.

Deposits in the savings banks will not be subject to taxation by the insular government. They will be invested through the insular treasurer, in securities determined by a central board. Until practical experience shall demonstrate that a further limit can be maintained the interest on deposits will be two and one-half per cent.

THE "TELEVUE" AT LAST.

Virginian Inventor's Apparatus for Seeing at a Distance.

Richmond, Va.—City Electrician William H. Thompson, the "Little Wizard" of Richmond, has at last, he says, the "televue," a wonderful device, which, he says, will enable a person sitting over the telephone to see the face and figure of the person to whom he is talking. The device, it is declared, can be used with a wire of indefinite length, and gives a clear image. Discussing the invention Thompson said:

"If it can be perfected the televue will revolutionize modern conditions. The telephone made revolutionization of a purely intellectual character simple. But there are hundreds of forms of communication that cannot be satisfactorily accomplished without the aid of the eyesight. The housewife will be enabled to purchase her lives and provisions and do her shopping by televue. The salesgirl will always have to look up the article before the televue transmitter and say: 'How with this hat on, ma'am?' When she wishes to purchase meats she will call up the butcher by televue and request him to hold up the piece for inspection before she buys."

For the present the electrician declines to exhibit the model on which he is working, or to give a description of it. He explains, however, that the visual image in the televue is transmitted in the form of a photograph, and the apparatus depends for its success on the agitation in the electrical resistance of a ribbon of selenium produced by variations in the intensity of a beam of light impinging on it.

REMOVES SNAKE'S APPENDIX.

Big Rattler Undergoes Operation, but Dies Later.

New York.—First of his kind to undergo the knife is a rattlesnake in the snakehouse in the zoological garden in Bronx park, had his appendix removed, but died later. The operation was performed by Dr. C. William Hibberd and Raymond L. Ditmar, one of the curators at the zoo.

Prior to all the glory of his elegant body, had been a favorite of reviews at the zoo, at times he was taken there four years ago from Florida. He was then a year old and a foot long.

Nothing a curve in the snake's back, extending from the head about three-quarters of the length of the body, an attendant touched the reptile with a stick.

Pain writhed away, showing that it was a very tender place, and for the rest of the day refused to allow anyone to come near him.

After a consultation it was decided that he should be operated on. An anesthetic was applied, and Dr. Hibberd cut the reptile's back. He thinks now that the appendix was swollen and inflamed. The cause of Pete's suffering was not evident. He had apparently, and moreover, it was the first case of the kind on record.

When the appendix was opened a large piece of raisins fell out. Dr. Hibberd sewed up the stomach and put Pete back in his cage. It was said that the operation had been successful, but Pete died.

"God Save the Mark."

When the phrase "God save the mark," now common in writing than in oral speech, is used, the reference is to an old superstition, now almost forgotten. It was believed that, if a person talking of an accident or injury to some one else had been hurt in a fight touched the like part of his own body or that of his hearer, their great danger that it would be an evil omen of similar injury to the speaker or conversationalist. To ward off the evil the "God save the mark"; that is, avert the harm [illegible]

THERE IS MORE THAN ONE WAY TO BREAK IN.

TOO CONSERVATIVE.

FEAR THAT BRYAN IS NOT RADICAL ENOUGH.

Free-Trade Newspapers Worrying Lest He Shall Prove Too Safe and Sane in His Tariff Attitude.

The fear is expressed by some of the free-trade newspapers of the northeastern section that Mr. Bryan is not going to be radical enough on the tariff question. It is all very well to thunder about predatory wealth and tariff taxes in Lincoln, but wait for New York—Times.

Will Mr. Bryan make the tariff his issue or will he dodge it altogether? Will he have the courage to broaden the Democratic header in its position upon the great fundamental principle of the government, namely, the equality and trust suppression?

Of course he will. He must. There is nothing else left for him to do. The "crime of '73" and the "crime of 1894" are his. Against exactitude Neither will railroad regulation and trust suppression suffice. The party in power has been doing quite a lot of things along those lines. It has demonstrated the ability of the government to curb corporations and combines without meddling with the tariff on imports. Right here is Mr. Bryan's opportunity. He will undoubtedly contend that only laid way measures have thus far been adopted, and that the only way to deal with predatory wealth and crush the times is to remove the tariff.

Mr. Bryan has been a tariff reformer from the beginning of his political career. He should be called the tariff as a responsibility in only. Republicans talk of it as a "big issue." Few men can point to a record so free from the taint of shrewd and inequalities in any case that protects. The very fact that he is prominent in his mind proves the existence of unjust inequalities.

We think it will turn out that the free trade newspapers of the Democratic party are worrying needlessly about Mr. Bryan's attitude on the question of tariff reform. It may be that he will compromise some of his free trade principles in the moderation of his phraseology. Quite possible he will decline to repeat the blunders of previous campaigns and adopt phraseology in relation to subjects as his opponent. It is his will prove shrewder than the Republicans, who have so long and so far had cause to regret the hour accordingly to the Democratic party. Mr. Bryan is not blind to that and the sagacity and conservative experience of the man who is the recognized leader of the Democratic party. Moreover, the Republicans will carry into the campaign a congressional vote that will—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Prediction.

The views of a practical business man and large industrial proprietor of Providence, as expressed in a letter to the American Economist, are worthy of attention.

"It is essential to have the tariff absolutely alter.

"It can do no harm, and it is doing good every day.

"I visited before the wars and since commenced in 1897 that and more than the largest agricultural area. That is the best thing that would remain in force for 25 years, we would be the largest manufacturers and money-makers in the world in manufacturing iron and steel and in other lines. Joints we are ready.

"If the present tariff it left alone, I believe for 15 years more we will be the largest in all these departments, as I predicted."

Nine of the 25 years have passed, and the prediction has been practically verified. Under the operation of a protective tariff the United States leads the world:

In manufactures.

In agriculture.

In grain which sell per capita wealth.

In internal and external trade.

In the production of coal, iron ore and pig iron.

Why let years more of unintercepted prosperous who can doubt that the United States would become the financial center, as it is now the industrial center of the world?

The plan which has been presented by the Republicans in the 1896 campaign, and which has been so successfully carried out, is the best that has ever been presented to the people of this country. Let us stick to it, and we will be the greatest nation on earth.

An Oregon Catastrophe.

F. E. Colburn, of this city, has a relative living in Oregon, and the other week he went to take an "open" to meet the train upon which he was expected to arrive. Not finding his relative on the train he was about to return when he met a friend who was in the same quest. The friend was a little the worse for wear, and he was carrying a large bundle. Mr. Colburn was curious to know what was in the bundle, and he was soon enough to see. The bundle was a jug of whiskey, and the friend was taking it home to his father. The jug was broken in the excitement of the meeting, and the friend was very sorry. Mr. Colburn was sorry, too, for the whiskey was good stuff, and he had hoped to get a little of it himself. The friend said he was sorry that he had spilled it, and he was sorry, too, for he had hoped to get a little himself. Mr. Colburn said he was sorry that he had spilled it, and he was sorry, too, for he had hoped to get a little

Death of Parker McIntyre.

Parker McIntyre died at his home in Norwood, Tuesday afternoon, after a long illness, aged 73 years.

In the death of Mr McIntyre there passes away another of the few remaining pioneers of Charlevoix county, and one who, in a large degree, has made his impress on Charlevoix county agricultural history.

Deceased located in Norwood, on the farm on which he died in 1866, forty years ago. Norwood was then in the woods, and from primitive nature, he cleared up a farm which now is one of the best in Northern Michigan.

Mr. McIntyre came to Norwood from Plattsburg, N. Y., and from the day of his arrival, with strong arms and their affection to "propelled wood" began the work of making a farm his success in that calling is well known to all in this part of the county.

Personally Parker McIntyre was a man of stalwart, sterling qualities. No man ever heard his integrity questioned. It was a community expressed phrase among those who knew him that "his word was as good as his bond."

Any community is barest of an element of strength when such a man as Parker McIntyre is taken away. The new generation may produce men of his equal, but they are scarce.

Murder at Bay Shore.

Peter Gilbert, Indian, was killed at his home, Bay Shore, early Sunday morning says the Boyne Ens. and by Mrs. Enos Mitchell and Enos Quasenaw, his brother.

Gilbert lived in the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Mitchell near the Blue hole where he worked. The row man came back for his furniture about 1 o'clock with quarrelsome, evidently helping by Gilbert. Words followed and they followed him all the day previous to Petoskey.

A dispute arose over the goods and a fight followed, during which Gilbert was knocked in the head with a hammer or back of an ax. He claimed was crushed on both sides and he died instantly.

The murderers were trailed through the woods and located in the house of another Indian. The house was surrounded by a posse. They attempted several times to get away, but were kept inside until officers came.

Both are now in jail at Harbor Springs. They are both known as desperate characters. The victim was a hard working man, leaves two children in the Mt. Pleasant school and a little one at Bay Shore. Their mother died three years ago.

Announcement.

Since Texas Sweetheats was produced over two years ago, other plays, very similar in title, have appeared, however this is the original. City Scenic Product co. with those splendid artists, Alan Villair and Pearl Lewis as the leading parts. They have made a big hit wherever they played and Manager Press and Dodge all agree, that this is an attraction worth seeing. It is now playing return engagements in large receipts that ever and is good for season to come as a money maker. The story is intensely interesting from start to finish, interspersed with rich, clean comedy and refined specialties. You laugh, cry and applaud. This is the only company presenting this play also the leading parts are in the hands of two people for whom they were especially written and consequently they are played consistently and naturally. Alan Villair as "Jack Harvey" is splendid and Pearl Lewis, as "Texas Haymond" is clever as she is pretty and she has brilliant hair hanging loose about her shoulders she is about as "touching" an act on the American stage.

Circuit Court.

With the August calendar on record, the Sep term under way of the circuit court practically closed Monday evening after only one day's work. The regular and special jury panels being dismissed the first to report for duty next Monday, and the latter to show up October 30th at an adjourned term.

The first case on the criminal calendar was that of the People vs Maitland. Maitland is charged with the murder of John Hamilton. The defense showed to the court, by the evidence of two physicians, that Maitland's health was in a precarious condition, and unable to stand trial. Thereupon Judge Mayne granted a continuance till October on the next regular term.

Tuesday was occupied by the court in hearing motions and disposing of a few diverce cases.

A Retrospective Box

We have heard it suggested that the delay in calling the Republican county nominating convention is, in remembrance of the local campaign of two years ago, to make the nominations so late that the opposition will have no time to make an independent campaign. "A leopard child," etc. What sort of an idea would it be to nominate clean candidates so that there will be no chance for an independent ticket—but there is a chance for a fusion ticket.

Although the Enterprise claims it is a republican paper, the above may be taken as a matter of dissent to any thing that the republicans may do in the coming county convention.

The republicans of Charlevoix county will do as they have always done—nominate some good enough party, but yet make a charge against a republican county official, and it was made very many that has not been conclusively disproven, or explained by its own sheet foolishness.

Yes, Mr Lorraine, the republicans of Charlevoix county will nominate clean candidates, as they will be expected to, notwithstanding the dissent expressed in editorials by its most vigorous opponents.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal Notes.

The County Normal School will open Monday, Sept 17th, one week later than the city schools as in former years. A number of applications have already reached the County Normal Board and the indications are that there will be a good attendance.

The graduates of the class of 1906 report good positions secured for the coming year. Many of the girls were offered positions before school closed last spring. Those who had already taught before taking up Normal course will be sorry that recommendations received the year and the other members of the class are promptly issued.

Students who desire interviews with the County Normal School should apply to County Commissioner Bill Ford, East Jordan, Mich., or to prof. Ophia Wunder of Boyne City, or to Miss Jessie M Hume, principal of the county Normal School. Many others will urge this Normal training work to more students and take year the work with them.

The Training School will consist of pupils from the third, fourth and fifth grades. The intent is on the second floor of the Central School building in the first floor in last year, and the rooms that were formerly the office of the Central building will be used as a recitation room where the practice work begins. The Training School will be under the children management of Miss Alice H Reed, of Vermont Normal College, who had charge of the work last year.

—U. S. Marshall O'Donnell and U. S. attorney Colvell were here Wednesday. O'Donnell brought two young counterfeiters from the vicinity of Pellockey who were caught by a secret service man. They have been making quarters that were of very good appearance. The young men were brought before U. S. Commissioner Hinch. In default of bail they went to Grand Rapids jail to await trial in the Federal court.

—No sooner had the ore steamer Falcon been released from the beach Wednesday than she lit another bunch of trouble in the form of a sunken log in Pine Lake, which broke off a bucket of her wheel. It was necessary to break off the opposite bucket, and for that purpose she came here. Diver Sam Ross went down and fastened dynamite to the bucket and blew off two buckets, instead of one. This put her out of commission and the tug Martin towed her to Manitowoc Friday to go into dry dock.

—"The Denver Express" With a strong dramatic story, nicely told, plenty of heat, up to date specialties and a wealth of beautiful scenery and mechanical effects, the "Denver Express" certainly contains every element of the successful melodrama. No more beautiful stage picture can be conceived than the first act setting, representing a valley in the heart of the Rocky Mountains at sunrise, and no more startling sensational effect were introduced than the attack of the redskins on a band of emigrants which occurs at the climax of the act. The wonderful railroad effect and the fight for life in the last act are also features worthy of special attention. "The Denver Express" will be at the Charlevoix theatre on Tuesday evening, Sept. 25th.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The newspaper men of northern Michigan met at Frankfort recently and laid the foundation for the formation of an association to be composed of all the publishers in this section of the state. The next meeting is to be in Gaylord on Oct. 12, when the organization will be perfected.

Traverse City Record: George Haff, Jr., is at Glen Haven installing a storage battery system for electric lighting there. The system is known as the chloride accumulator system and is the only one of its kind north of Grand Rapids. While it is an expensive system to install, it is claimed that in the end it more than pays for itself. The plant will be installed and connected with the government storage signal station, a 30-room hotel, several dwellings, three barns, the pier and a number of other places. Mr. Haff has been at work installing the plant about a week and it will require about two weeks more to complete the system. As it is, day is the owner of the new plant and when completed it will be second to none in Michigan.

CAPT. BUNDY DEAD.

The Sailor Evangelist of the Lakes Passes Away in Chicago.

From a wayward boy, bound before the mast when but 10 years old, through a career of soul saving among the sailors of the great lakes, is the story of Captain Bundy, who died Saturday in Chicago, at the age of 80.

Perhaps no man who has sailed the lakes has had a wider range of acquaintances than Captain Bundy. From Chicago to Buffalo and up to Duluth he had touched at every lumber camp. While he was on sail water his travels took him to every country of the world, over every body of navigable water, and practically to every sea port.

His history, however, is insolubly linked with the story of his "gospel ships" each christened "Glad Tidings," and his memory throughout the lake country rests upon the thirty years he spent as an evangelist among his fellow sailors.

Capt. Bundy was well known in Charlevoix, and many is the exhortation he has delivered on the docks and about the streets.

Bundy was born in London, and when a lad ran way to sea. He was considered incorrigible and deserted ship many times.

His travels took him around the world many times, and finally brought him to New York, where another desertion was recorded. Then in the early fifties, he came to Chicago and began cruising about the lakes. His ability as a sailing master was recognized and he found him captain of the merchant schooner Potomac.

While the Potomac was tied up at Halsted street one day in 1870, some women workers of the Free Methodist church came aboard and asked permission to hold religious services in the captain's cabin. He gruffly granted the request, and because he could not well avoid it absorbed much of what was said. The result was Bundy's conversion. He immediately resolved to begin evangelistic work among sailors, and the rest of his life was thus spent until poor health compelled him to retire a year ago.

He started out with a small schooner, and later had a steam yacht built for his work. Both were named the Glad Tidings. Many wealthy Chicago people were behind him in his work.

Republican County Convention.

To the Republican Electors of the County of Charlevoix:

You are hereby notified that a county convention of the Republican electors of said county will be held at the Opera House in the City of Charlevoix, on Saturday, the 29th day of September, A. D. 1906, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon for the following purpose:

One member of the state legislature from the district composed of the counties of Charlevoix and Emmet; County Treasurer; Prosecuting Attorney; County Surveyor; Circuit Court Commissioner; County Commissioner of Schools; to be voted on by the district or subdivisions thereof, as the laws of the state and the rules of the party provide.

The several township caucuses are called to meet on the evening of the day before the county convention, at the usual places of holding such caucuses, for the purpose of instructing their delegates to said county convention.

The basis of representation in said county convention will be one delegate for every twenty votes and one delegate for a fraction of twenty votes equal to one-half thereof, as shown by the vote for Secretary of State at the last election, and the number of delegates to which each township is entitled will be based upon the vote for Secretary of State at said last election, and the township committee should see that the proper number of delegates are duly elected and certified to.

Dated at Charlevoix, Michigan, this 14th day of September, A. D. 1906.

FREDERICK M. WAYNE,
Chairman Republican County Committee.
JOHN E. BIRKETT,
Secretary.

SCHOOL NOTES.

school opened the 10th with a larger attendance than last year, and in the high school and the primary grades. The Charlevoix Opera House opened Monday of this week with a good attendance and bright prospects for the coming year.

The high school was very well planned with a program, Monday morning, given by Miss Winifred Cole, music teacher.

The boys have entirely begun work for fall athletics. The last ball team lined up for practice Saturday night with a surprising amount of new material. The team will be lighted with the advantage of this year's rules on their side there is no reason why the Charlevoix eleven will not be well represented. All ready we have challenges from the Petoskey and East Jordan high school teams games to be played in the year time.

We also have scheduling two athletic fields this year. The school board seeing the need of something of this kind has laid out a very fine tennis court on the school grounds. This court is one of the finest in the county and both girls and boys will find it a very pleasant and profitable pastime.

The school management is a great deal of praise for the attention they have given to the small as well as the large questions pertaining to the schools. The dock are all looking fine, having received a fresh coat of varnish and the laboratory is equipped with all things necessary for school work.

Taking everything into consideration we have good reason to believe this year will be one of the brightest in the history of the school.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Martin Valentine of Thompson L. P. was here Saturday.

Dr. F. Olmstead who has been missing was sold at Cecil Bay, was here Friday and Saturday last week.

Miss Minnie Hanna of Ill. is a Swartmont drove over from Ellsworth Sunday, and stayed over till Monday.

CASH IN CANAL JUNK.

SCRAP IRON LEFT BY FRENCH IS VALUABLE

Initiation Commission Is Encouraged to Think It May Realize Millions Out of Its Old Hatcheries Where Large Profits.

The sale of 5,000 tons of scrap iron on the Isthmian Canal Commission property at Panama, left by the French canal company, has encouraged officials of the Isthmian Canal Commission to think that the canal commission will realize a good sum of money from the sale of the French canal property. The French company left a great deal of valuable property on the Isthmus, and it is thought it will be easy to realize.

GO HUNTING AND MEET DEATH.

Opening of Season in Northwest Is Marked by Many Fatalities.

The hunting season opened with a big number of fatalities as the result of the season's sport. Among the Chippewa Indians on the Leech Lake reservation, which has been hitherto free from accidents, a young Indian named Edward Sarpy was killed by his companion, Frank Bugle, who was hitting towards his lowed Sarpy.

At Ely, while on record time as he was getting out of a boat on Fox river, he was instantly killed by the Michigan copper ranges John Sincerak was accidentally killed while hunting in Harlem township near Marquette, was fatally shot while hunting in the woods.

TIED TO SEE HOME BURN.

Woman Barely Escapes Death in Flames by Intercession of Thief.

Mrs. Pearl Grant was saved from a horrible death at Ashland, Ky., by the intercession of a thief, who, according to the story she told the police after she had escaped from the burning house, came on and has remained the dead, and that he tied her to a post in the burning house, so that she could see her home burn down. Mrs. Grant's husband was killed in a mine some months ago. Mrs. Grant's home was valued at $3,000, and she had no insurance. The police are looking for the man.

FISH HATCHERIES KEPT BUSY.

Output of Fry During Fiscal Year Nearly Two Billion.

George M. Bowers, commissioner of fisheries, in his annual report to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, says the output of fry from the government hatcheries during the year was 1,900,000,000, approximately. The white fishes were planted in the Great Lakes, the Atlantic coast, the Pacific coast and in inland waters. The salmon, trout and other game fishes were planted in streams and lakes in 46 states.

IMMIGRATION TO BE DIVERTED.

North German Lloyd Steamships May Sail to Charleston, S. C.

The New York Herald says that the North German Lloyd Steamship Company is considering the question of a direct line between Bremen and Charleston, S. C., in the information is added in the city by cable from H. J. Watson, Commissioner of Agriculture and Immigration of South Carolina, who is now abroad in connection with the agents of the steamship company. Mr. Watson has been for several months preparing the way for this enterprise, and the day of the sailing of the first ship is announced, to be set for late in November. In a talk with a reporter taken to stand for Germany, Mr. Watson said that the steamship company would commence sending into the greatest emigrant centralization in an endeavor to divert the immigration, emigrant and other ships, and the beginning of the movement is to be made in an effort to divert the flow of Italian immigration from the port of Genoa's population and to reduce the congestion in that port.

EDUCATORS FOR NEW SPELLING.

Simplified Board Has Names of 825 for the Reform Plan.

The committee appointed at Boston June 6, Aug. 1, 1906, and received the signatures of 825 college presidents, professors, directors of university offices, who had agreed to use the new spelling as far as practicable in their correspondence. The committee reference a proposed New York bill to make the 300 names connected with universities and colleges have passed over the state, and some cases also with the signers. Mr. Carnegie's name is at the head. Chairman Gallaudet reports very successes. Dean Hodges, Harvard, Mr. Perry, Williams, 31, and Commercial, Indiana, Kansas and Michigan, 25, and have over than 20 designees of the new spelling in their higher institutions of learning. The remainder are scattered in varying numbers throughout the Union. Dean Hodges is a convert of curiosity, not New York.

GO HUNTING AND MEET DEATH.

Opening of Season in Northwest Is Marked by Many Fatalities.

The hunting season opened with a big number of fatalities as the result of the season's sport. Among the Chippewa Indians on the Leech Lake reservation, which has been hitherto free from accidents, a young Indian named Edward Sarpy was killed by his companion, Frank Bugle, who was hitting towards his lowed Sarpy.

At Ely, while on record time as he was getting out of a boat on Fox river, he was instantly killed by the Michigan copper ranges John Sincerak was accidentally killed while hunting in Harlem township near Marquette, was fatally shot while hunting in the woods.

TIED TO SEE HOME BURN.

Woman Barely Escapes Death in Flames by Intercession of Thief.

Mrs. Pearl Grant was saved from a horrible death at Ashland, Ky., by the intercession of a thief, who, according to the story she told the police after she had escaped from the burning house, came on and has remained the dead, and that he tied her to a post in the burning house, so that she could see her home burn down. Mrs. Grant's husband was killed in a mine some months ago. Mrs. Grant's home was valued at $3,000, and she had no insurance. The police are looking for the man.

FISH HATCHERIES KEPT BUSY.

Output of Fry During Fiscal Year Nearly Two Billion.

George M. Bowers, commissioner of fisheries, in his annual report to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, says the output of fry from the government hatcheries during the year was 1,900,000,000, approximately. The white fishes were planted in the Great Lakes, the Atlantic coast, the Pacific coast and in inland waters. The salmon, trout and other game fishes were planted in streams and lakes in 46 states.

Gas Sufficates Two Men.

Marquette, Mich., Special.—Two men were suffocated by poisonous gases while at work in a sewer in the city of Marquette. Dead men are in Marquette. Dead men are in the sewer, and it is thought they will be found in the morning. The unfortunate men were employed by the city on the regular sewer gang. The gas came from the city dump, which is being filled with garbage. The men were overcome by the gas.

Boy Killed on Gulf Limited.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Special.—A young boy whose name does not appear yet was killed on the Gulf limited near Lucedale, Miss., when he was hitching and unseen ridden on the blind coupler of the Washington and Mobile train. The boy was dragged to his death.

RAIDS SHOW SCANDAL

ST. LOUIS RESORTS OWNED BY PROMINENT PEOPLE

Revenue from Disreputable Places Enable Proprietors to Live Respectably and Contribute to Church Funds—Quake in Indiana.

Raids upon houses of doubtful repute in St. Louis, following the killing of a city and his male companion, in one of these places by Policeman McNamara, develop the fact that the property in question, in this instance is owned by men and women prominent in business and social circles. The disclosures of the tragedy, results from the prosecution of some tenants. It also has developed that two of these crooked hotels are operated by a woman living in the fashionable West End, a commandment of the Epiphany church and a member of a prominent club.

The woman is joined by others who have in the management of these places, and the property

TO INSURE COMMERCIAL PEACE BE PREPARED FOR WAR.

If Europe Marks Up Its Tariffs Against American Exports, Then We Should Be Ready to Play the Same Game.

"The favorite device of the standpatters to constitute a maximum and minimum tariff, taking the present rates as the minimum, would only complicate the situation further. Than to use any such device, instead of acting on a basis on which to make bargains with foreign powers, would be generally accepted as a declaration of tariff warfare and there would be a prompt and all but unanimous effort made by the nations of continental Europe to place prohibitive rates on the imports of all our finished products. New York Journal of Commerce.

But that is precisely what other governments have done. Germany has worked up her tariffs maximum so as to crack them back again to the former basis—and not in all cases so low as the former rates—when we shall have been lighted into new ways. Iowa may force and reasonable tariff for the exceedingly limited or class competitive exports.

Spain has lately gone into the game for an instance with the same end in view. On the basis of her maximum rates Spain now proposes to make her own, when it is understood that somebody in Washington—the Third Assistant, I is to assert—that "Spain will, reasonable to notice at the rate and to accordingly contemplate a limited reciprocity deal with Spain under sec. 3 of the Dingley law."

Proud defiance of this sort do not have to run the gauntlet of the Senate. They can be put in force and effect the moment.

It is proposed, in order to Spain's extended generosity in giving to our sons American exports of the non-competitive sort the benefit of the tariff which powerful price to the marking, and thousands farm to enjoy cut-rate rates on diamonds, exports of spads, polishing, stamping, manufacturing, and all kinds of manufactures. They we also "suggest to Spain the fitting of a code, "high duty" on our market to at least, our product has will gone some to the Appetite Next to France, Spain is the leading producer of still wines, and she will thus open as much if not more Finance that she is able to export large quantities to Cuba entirely.

It is one of the leading industries of the Pacific coast, which is dotted with wineries made in Italian open operation a million or more acres in vine, and employs some thousands of wage earners and several millions of capital.

Not as much as we propose to lower Spain our purchase of Spain's wines, Spain we shall decrease the market for American still wines and fighting Italy wines and Spain's wines, American labor and American capital.

Such discriminations against the great home industry would be upon no apparent reason, even if Spain offered us a reciprocity treaty, which it is not, for Spain is the only country in

CHAPTER IX.

The morning there was a startling announcement in the House. As Lady Anne's name fell upon it, she truly thought that music for dancing and her hot supper night was doing him.

The living of Great Wallton was bestowed upon the Hon. and Rev. Willard Fitzjames, a relative of the Earl of Avon.

Her indignation rather surprised her amongst its complexities, she said her much. Charity in matters of this nature should not enter into your minds, and flow on the hum with equal force.

"What can be the meaning of this, Grace? Lady Anne Fitzjames, when she gave the living to Mr. Hemingsfen, offered it to poor Mr. Charles Fitzjames, and he—"

"Oh, indeed," said Grace, "I'm very sorry for poor Mr. Fitzjames."

"No, no, what, in such a case, he then at least he might have said that he was glad to see it should have been kept in the family, instead of going from it. It is not like him."

"Perhaps he did," said Grace, "it was very unkind, indeed, if he did not."

"But, Grace, I hear that he was a promising young fellow like Willard Fitzjames, and he could have married for love in far rank Puseyism Rectory, since his only been ordained. A significant word, which, respectively, to make him pay all this of poor Mr. Hemingsfen, but to the same."

(CHAPTER X. Continued.)

They had always been good friends, Rose and Brian, from the time when the boy thought Rose fair, was before his birth or came to the time when Rose had set out of the divine midnight with the little stranger, as he was to be called, should his female name not of them. This, this, Brian, was in Rose's bedroom, in Henry's study, and the boy spent three parts of the day with his cousin.

"When did you come home?" asked Mr. Brian.

"This morning. My mother seems quite well I think."

"I was surprised at the serious alarm conveyed in your letter," he continued. "She seemed so well when I left. I do not know that I ever was more surprised than when I received your letter."

"Mamma was very ill," he answered. "Quite ill. Papa thought she was dying. Mamma is so well now, that I shall be able to go back to school in a few days."

"Shall you like that?"

"I shall like to see Mr. Brian and the other boys," he said, with a smile. "I shall like to be at school."

"Is anything the matter with your mamma?" he inquired, as he looked at the boy's face, which was pale and wearied, and bore the marks of tears.

"Mamma is very ill," he answered. "I was very frightened when I first saw her. I thought she was dying, too. I thought I should never see her again."

"Is your mother ill?" he asked of Mr. Brian.

"Not at all, that I know of," was the reply. "I saw her yesterday, and she looked well and cheerful. I suppose your mamma's illness has alarmed you."

"Yes, it has," he replied. "I was very frightened

HAS MUCH MEANING

PRACTICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE TERM "STAND PAT."

It Meant a Great Deal More When Hanna Injected it into Politics and it Means More as the Years Roll By.

"But what does it mean to stand pat? This is the question propounded in a doubleheaded and rather nervous editorial by the New York Mail of June 30. It is easily answered. To congress it means more precisely what it meant when that metaphorical expression was pulverized into politics by Mark Hanna five or six years ago.

Mr. Hanna saw a country on the top wave of a sea of unparalleled prosperity. "Stand pat!" said he.

He saw domestic production increasing at a tremendous rate to meet consuming demand. "Stand pat!"

He saw domestic labor fully employed at increasing high wages. "Stand pat!"

He saw savings bank deposits increasing at the rate of half a billion dollars a year. "Stand pat!"

He saw railroads carrying more freight and passengers and building more miles of new road than ever before. "Stand pat!"

He saw 10,000,000 farmers with paid-off mortgages of the tariff revision period of 1890-7 and buying pianos and automobiles. "Stand pat!"

He saw an unusual trade stimulating to unusual activity a year and growing very fast. "Stand pat!"

He saw a revenue thus raising the Treasury with such growing at the rate of $100,000,000 a year at its gate that three millions! "Stand pat!"

He saw the outside world taking more and more of our agricultural and manufactured exports. "Stand pat!"

He saw a big increase in our imports also of manufactured articles for use in manufacture and of duties on goods of the competitive sort. "Stand pat!"

He saw that our duties collected on imports were yielding ample revenue to the government, despite increasing importations. "Stand pat!"

He saw the excess of exports over imports enlarging to an extent trade balances averaging more than half a billion dollars. "Stand pat!"

He saw its equivalent in a vast flow of gold which in the past ten years has added to the country's supply of yellow metal. "Stand pat!"

He saw American capitalists hold back at home from and so anything confiding the balances of trade, and the money of American money seeking enough to pay interest and dividends on foreign capital invested in this country reduced to less than half what it was ten years ago in a tariff revision period. "Stand pat!"

He saw the United States partaking of less in foreignera and capital investment than the industrial center of the world. "Stand pat!"

He saw in short the most extraordinary prosperity the highest note of the highest tide recorded in history and that the word has ever known to be said. "Stand pat!"

What Mark Hanna saw five years ago is to be seen today on a more extended scale. If he were living today he would again say, "Stand pat!"

He did not, nor do those anxiously now say on the Mail seems to think, that prosperity is a thing of mere, indefinite, immovable time that will carry permit of the change of a single tariff schedule. No Mail could so know better. That it can get the standpat argument. That is not what "standpat" means. To suppose it is to suppose a thing. Few traders and of choose, most reformers ought to be given a reasonable law in the sense of wanting and opportunities of employment.

Mr. Bryan is trying to accept from the further argument that we should be of what he calls the quantitative theory of the money supply. He calculates that he has first about free silver, but that the unprovided increase in the output of gold relieved the scarce without honors, has enlarged of the chief financial theory. Some opportunities through Lawrence wrote, 500 in American industries and foreign trade wrote. The years of American prosperity in the fiscal year has closed were about free silver. The most in free and free silver law. The quantitative jump in selling our manufactured products abroad has been 100 per cent, since Bryan made his cross of gold speech. Our whole foreign trade is larger than ever before. Another quantitative point is that scarcity are much larger than 1896 and crops the crown in one time. With free trade they could pour in a tremendous flood of foreign merchandise every week, exchanging our industries by close down, and our employes in idle for new vacation. Mr. Bryan and other talkers about the tariff, but he calls our attention his spots.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SHALL BRYAN FIX THE TARIFF?

If He Gets the Chance Every Vestige of Protection Will Be Eliminated.

Mr. Bryan is a free trader. In his latest generalized questions he says the tariff is one of the issues in 1908. Express himself as he may, the question on which he is likely to change his mind in the future, for can be easily or essentially without changing his fundamental proposition. In all that he has said or written in the past there has scarcely mentioned the principle of protection to a tariff. His most noted speech in Congress was a long and elaborate argument against protection in any shape. Another indication is his tariff card of a year ago in which he said nothing about protection, but gave a long and elaborate argument against the principle in any shape. Does not our protection in any shape. Does not our protection in any shape. Does not our protection

BURNS HERSELF TO DEATH

Girl, Believing Her Lover Faithless, Makes Suicide Sure.

Hagerstown, Ind., special: Miss Maude Williams, about 21 years of age, of Muncie, died yesterday from the effects of a fire from a lamp in her room in the Parker House in Muncie. It is believed that the young woman had been despondent over a lover deserting and leaving her for another girl. Her mother, who is an invalid, is in the house, and her father is in the west, and there is no one else in the house. Whenever the girl would become despondent she would go to her room and bolt the door after locking the door of her mother's room, with the key taken out. Neighbors heard her mother call for help, and when they broke down the door they found the girl almost burned to a crisp. She died in a few hours. The house was locked when the fire started.

FACES DEATH TO SAVE BABY.

Jersey City Mother Burned Trying to Rescue Children from Fire.

Jay Peterson, 30 years old, and his three children, aged 7, 5 and 3 years, the four of a family of five, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the house in which they lived in Jersey City, early Sunday morning. The children were burned to a crisp. Mrs. Peterson, who was in the house when the fire started, escaped by jumping from a window in her night clothes. Her husband, who was in the house, jumped out of a window and was badly burned about the face and hands. Neighbors who rushed to the house found the mother in a state of hysteria. She had to be restrained by her friends from entering the burning house to save her children. Her husband, who was in the house when the fire started, escaped by jumping from a window in his night clothes. He was badly burned about the face and hands. Neighbors who rushed to the house found the mother in a state of hysteria. She had to be restrained by her friends from entering the burning house to save her children. BANK ROBBERS GET $10,000.

Blow Safe at Akeley, Minn., and Make Their Escape.

The bank of Akeley, Minn., was broken into at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning and about $10,000 in currency carried away by robbers, one of the same daring robberies were attempted in the Northwest. The safe was blown to pieces with nitroglycerin, but the burglars fearing apparently were frightened in the work, and left the building with their booty, and the vault was broken into but little badly damaged. Silver coins were scattered all over the floor, and the books and papers were mutilated. It is thought that the band of robbers consisted of three men, but one of them guarded the entrance while the others completed the work. R. F. Watson, who lives some door to the west, rushed out in front of the building to see what was the matter, but was ordered back at the point of a revolver. He ran to his home to alarm neighbors and secure a gun, but when he returned the robbers had made good their escape without leaving a single clue. Their description, so far as obtainable, is being held at Deraser, a little station on the Great Northern road, from which place a special train left at 10 o'clock for the scene of the robbery. The bank is located in a village of 300 inhabitants, and is in the rich farming district of Hubbard county. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

BURN DWELLINGS OF POOR.

Honduras Authorities Adopt Drastic Measures to Stamp Out Fever.

One of the most interesting reports on the struggle to exterminate yellow fever was given out on June 1 by Francisco Bertrand, general of the Republic of Honduras, who is in Mexico. It appears that tropical countries from which it has been imported into the United States are visited by the southern United States as a necessary evil, and that they are used to this disease. In Honduras, with an American surgeon in charge, the fever has been carried almost to extremes. The losses in Spanish-American cities have been burned and new buildings have been erected in their place.

THREE KILLED BY FENCE.

Barbed Wire, Charged by Electricity, Proves Fatal to Trio.

Three men were killed near Nashville, Tenn., by coming in contact with a barbed wire fence over which had been charged with electricity from the plant of the Hillsboro electric and Electric Power Company. The dead are Ed Hillsman, Ed Hillsman, aged 21, and Reuben Hillsman, aged 18, all of Nashville. The fence in question stretches from the power house of the company, and the power house of the company is located in the Hillsboro district. Mrs. Hillsman and her mother had been engaged in the work of gathering blackberries, and had gone to the fence, or one side of it, to pick the berries. Mrs. Hillsman had her little boy with her, and he was in the fence, or near it, when he fell to the ground. The mother ran to the fence and fell dead with her hand on the wire. The two men had been notified of the accident and had come to the place to see what was the matter, but were ignorant of the fact that the fence was charged with electricity. As soon as they came in contact with the fence they were thrown to the ground, and the men died almost instantaneously. The bodies were found still in the grasp of the wire. The fence in question is a barbed wire fence, and it is charged with electricity.

Gas Also Discovered and Fuel Bills for Cleveland Building May Be Minimized—Prominent Lumber Hotel Is Destroyed.

Oil and gas were struck under the big Rockefeller office building in Cleveland Sunday, thus above signs of appearing in the operations of workmen who were trying to utilize them for fuel and light in the new structure. The gas and oil were struck at a depth of only 180 feet. Fred T. Kelley, who is one of the men who made the big strike, said the gas was so strong that when the workmen came upon it they had to run for their lives. It is admitted beyond that President Palmer asked for protection, fearing an armed invasion, attack on Havana from the rebels.

Later in the night Commandant Gal said more than a press dispatch from Washington stating that the authorities were in control of the situation, and that the rebels were driven back from the city and a large body started to march on the town. The report was that Colonel Pino Guerra, at the head of 8000 men, would cut off the rebels and that the insurrection would be dissolved as a result of his efforts.

The administration already has had control of the entire island except for the considerable number of men in the insurrection, as the cities were on its every direction. All citizens have contributed men brought in a standard. There were popular demonstrations every day in favor of the Palmer administration. Gals were turning over tons to the rebels and the Cuban Junta in the interest of the insurrection and particularly in the three forts which let Palmer to appeal for American aid.

The landing of the American force was followed by an insurrection in Havana. Commander Colwell was approached by an accredited emissary of Alfredo Zayas, president of the liberal party, and Gen. Loynaz del Castillo, commander of the insurgent forces, in Havana province, with a signed offer from each of the men that they would render their commands and hold over their arms to Commander Colwell on the side certain that the United States government through him and Palmer, Colwell said.

Commander Colwell, so surprised to be in Palmer's Secretary, immediately wired Palmer the proposition of Zayas and Loynaz. The President was immediately in conference with Secretary Taft and Acting Secretary of State Bacon. The result was a telegram to Colwell from Washington, stating a Secretary.

President Palma, in a message of appeal to President Roosevelt, asked for the protection of American authorities and guns and the navy cruiser Cincinnati, Commander Colwell of the Denver and Mr. Sleeper, the American Charge d'Affaires, landed their men. Marines were landed early to protect Americans in the city. It is admitted beyond that President Palma asked for protection, fearing an armed invasion, attack on Havana from the rebels.

Later in the night Commandant Gal said more than a press dispatch from Washington stating that the authorities were in control of the situation, and that the rebels were driven back from the city and a large body started to march on the town. The report was that Colonel Pino Guerra, at the head of 8000 men, would cut off the rebels and that the insurrection would be dissolved as a result of his efforts.

The administration already has had control of the entire island except for the considerable number of men in the insurrection, as the cities were on in every direction. All citizens have contributed men brought in a standard. There were popular demonstrations every day in favor of the Palmer administration. Gals were turning over tons to the rebels and the Cuban Junta in the interest of the insurrection and particularly in the three forts which let Palmer to appeal for American aid.

The landing of the American force was followed by an insurrection in Havana. Commander Colwell was approached by an accredited emissary of Alfredo Zayas, president of the liberal party, and Gen. Loynaz del Castillo, commander of the insurgent forces, in Havana province, with a signed offer from each of the men that they would render their commands and hold over their arms to Commander Colwell on the side certain that the United States government through him and Palmer, Colwell said.

Commander Colwell, so surprised to be in Palmer's Secretary, immediately wired Palmer the proposition of Zayas and Loynaz. The President was immediately in conference with Secretary Taft and Acting Secretary of State Bacon. The result was a telegram to Colwell from Washington, stating a Secretary.

A speech by Thomas Alvalad Jones, president, his officers and Indiana's representatives in the lower house of congress, was delivered in a speech in Indianapolis, Ind., on the occasion of the reunion of the Indiana state government through long distance from Tell City, Ind., 150 miles.

THE CUBANS: "PLEASE TRY TO STOP US"

Chicago Inter Ocean.

STORY OF CUBA'S STRIFE.

Present Conditions in the Island and Causes Leading Thereto.

The present condition in Cuba forms one of the world's old stories. The island has been in a state of insurrection for years, and the United States has been called upon to intervene. The present condition is not a new one, but it is the result of a long series of events, which have led to the present condition.

Cuba has been a possession of Spain for many years. The island has been a source of revenue to the Spanish government, and the Spanish government has been unwilling to give up the island. The Cuban people have been unwilling to be governed by Spain, and have made many efforts to secure their independence. The last of these efforts was made in 1895, when the Cuban people rose in rebellion against the Spanish government. The war that followed was a long and bloody one, and the island was ravaged by the contending armies. The Spanish government was unable to put down the rebellion, and the Cuban people were unable to secure their independence. The war was finally ended by the intervention of the United States, which compelled Spain to give up the island. The United States then took possession of the island, and held it for a time, when it was turned over to the Cuban people, and a government was established. The Cuban people have been in control of their own affairs since that time, and have made a good government. The island has been in a state of prosperity, and the people have been happy and contented. The United States has not been called upon to intervene in the affairs of the island since the time it was turned over to the Cuban people

For State Senator:
FRED C. WETMORE, of Walloon.

—Rev. Mr. Wright, the new M. E. pastor, arrives this week to begin his work, and rev. Mr. Vickers, takes his departure for his new field. We Regret to Lose Us Rev. We suppose the duly constituted Methodist authority knows its business, and we gracefully submit; besides, it is none of our business. We only wish to record the fact that we liked Mr. Vickers very much, and as wish for his successor an abundant measure of success.

—One of the last families of summer visitors to leave for home was Col. Hemenway and wife, of Washington, D. C., who occupy the Denmon cottage, now owned by Mrs. Hemenway's mother, Mrs M. F. Scott. Col. Hemenway, who is an officer of the U. S. corps of engineers, is superintendent of public buildings and grounds for the District of Columbia, and, as such has charge of the white house and grounds. While Mrs. Hemenway has spent the entire summer here the Colonel came late, having been detained in Washington in the work of overhauling the white house. Col. and Mrs. Hemenway are regular Charlevoix summer people, but the Colonel shows himself very little while here.

—It is a great source of satisfaction for Charlevoix people that we are to have a Shakespeare play at the Opera house (Temple) this fall. Mr. John Griffith, one of the oldest tragedians in the country, is to appear October 20th in "King Richard the Third." Mr. Griffith has a well established reputation as a scholarly and original interpreter of the great tragedy "whose* come and go, and for four theatrical dates, the Charlevoix theater has been filled. The attractions were good—of their sort. But plays like "Richard" are few and far between for Charlevoix. As in Longfellow's Evangeline, "Each* has been before appeared here, and intellectual people should not fail to be present.

—Dr. Albert E. Stripp has bought the practice and office appurtenances of Dr. Egan, in this city, and will continue to occupy the same office in Chalmpin block. Dr. Stripp is a Charlevoix boy, and one in whom Charlevoix people have always taken an interest. "Bert" was graduated from the Michigan University in the class of 1901. Following his graduation he was for one year house physician at the University, which is a marked recognition of his character and ability. For the past 17 months he has been attached to the medical staff of the Kalamazoo asylum. Few young physicians locate for practice with a better or more beautiful post-graduate experience. Dr. Stripp is a young man of high character and genial personality.

—At a recent meeting of the United States life-saving board the general supervisor presented a report showing a falling off in the supply of surfmen for the life-saving service. Many stations, during the past season, were shorthanded, the surfmen resigning their positions in large numbers, and that it was almost impossible to find men qualified to take their places. However, the stations along the great lakes do not suffer so much from the scarcity of surfmen as those on the ocean coasts. Three are two reasons why it is so difficult to secure good surfmen. One and the chief one, is that the pay considering the hazardous nature of the work, and the skill required, is small, and the second is that the government, so large in its pensions to men whose business it is to kill, has never made provision for a pension for those it employs to save human life. This fact has repeatedly been brought to the attention of congress. President Roosevelt in his last message, urged the necessity of providing pensions for the life-savers, but no action was taken upon the recommendation.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The opening meeting of the Lyceum was held Thursday evening. Only the Freshmen can appreciate the events that followed.

The High School Chorus organized Monday with Miss Dale as director.

The foot ball game Saturday between Charlevoix and Kalkaska resulted in victory for our boys, the score being 16 to 0. A game will be played with Boyne City Saturday if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

Miss Dale gave a short program for the high school Monday morning, after which the sun was laid down to the students.

Visitors at the high school last week were, Miss Parish and some of our last year's class.

Normal News.

The Charlevoix County Normal Class, thirteen in number, began their work Sept. 17th.

Already the class has been well organized, having chosen Bessie Straw for President, Georgia Crowell for Vice President and Ruth Eastman for treasurer.

The County Commissioner J. H. Mitchell, visited the class last week and gave us a very encouraging talk.

Mr. Milford, accompanied by a one of the Normal students, went to Petoskey on Educational Day, to hear the address that was advertised to be given by State Supt. Kelley.

During the absence of Miss Cook, Georgia Crowell of the Normal Class, has charge of the second and third grades.

The young ladies of this class have started their work in earnest, and the pupils work promises to bring success to each member.

South Charlevoix Correspondence.

Mrs. I. S. Webster is ill with bowel trouble.

Mrs. C. H. Whitford, who has been quite ill with neuralgia is better.

Nelley Crane is home again, the mill having finished its season's cut at Dorcas, last week.

C. H. Whitford attended the soldiers reunion at Boyne City Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. F. H. Whitford wrote a postal Thursday on her way to Washington saying they were just at the line between Montana and Idaho.

Record Shakespeare Price.

A recent London special says. At Sotheby's today a perfect copy of the fourth quarto edition of Shakespeare's "Tragedie of King Richard the Third" was sold for 1,750 pounds, ($8,750) to A. Jackson, and it is understood that it will go to America.

The price is higher than any sum previously paid at auction for a Shakespeare quarto. The book was printed in 1605, by Thomas Creede, and was sold by Matthew Law, dwelling in Fleetes Church Yard at the sign of the Fox, near St. Andrye Church. It consists of forty six leaves.

It is believed that only two other copies of this edition exist. One is in the British Museum and the other sold by Mr. Inlay to Mr. Halliwell, afterward Halliwell Phillipps and is now in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, England.

The example set by two days of peculiar interest from the fact that in one places a contemporary autograph of "Wm. Penn" is found. The signature is probably that of the celebrated Admiral, the father of the founder of Pennsylvania.

By the way, John Griffith, America's leading tragedian will appear here on October 20th, at the Charlevoix Theater in a particularly brilliant production of "King Richard the Third."

Independent County Mass Convention. All Parties Welcome

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

During the past week a colony of yellow jackets made themselves comfortable under the walk leading to the steps of the First M. E. Church at Traverse City. Sunday morning they made it hot for the church goers. The day was warm and "peaceable" at first while the workings were going on. They proved to be just pickin' then from the bottoms of the church and the air was shattered at intervals by terrified shrieks. A small panic was started among the Sunday school scholars and several lots were badly stung.

The Elk Rapids common council recently granted an electric light franchise to William E. Dunlap of Elk Rapids. The franchise was granted for a period of 10 years and the plant is to run on what is known as a moon light schedule. There will also be a morning service from 5 to 7 a. m. from November 15 to February 15, a period of three months, each year. The village let a contract for 25 arc lights to cost $75 per year each, and additional arc lights will be put up at a cost of $65 per year each.

The potato growers of Northern Michigan will be interested in the fact that there has been an improvement in the potato outlook during the past week. There has been no change in the offerings made for the usual quantities of early potatoes that reach the local markets of this section of the state, but there has been a change in expectations as to demands for the late stock and there is a now existing possibility that fall and winter prices for good Michigan potatoes may reach thirty five, or forty, or even fifty cents a bushel. Western potatoes are being shipped to Alaska and to Honolulu, and eastern potatoes to several different foreign points. In this export demand, a little heavier just now than in some other years, which has created the expectation for better prices than were ruling of before. It is a factor in the potato situation, however, which can not as yet be greatly relied upon.

Republican Tax Reduction

Governor Warner's recent reference to the fact that nine out ten of all the agricultural counties of Michigan will pay a smaller proportion of state tax under the new state organization than they have been paying during the past five years, is a brief but conclusive disposal of democratic discussion in that direction. It is such a very interesting bit of information, especially for the taxpayers of the nine out ten agricultural counties.

—The Salvation Army will hold a farewell meeting Sunday evening next, on the occasion of Capt. Covell leaving here to take charge of the work at Boyne City. Capt. and Mrs. Fish are coming here from Owosso to take charge of the Charlevoix work.

—Charlevoix has safely re-established itself as a good show town. Last night was the fifth show at the Charlevoix Theater this season, and and they have been a week apart. It was feared that the excursion exodus would make poor business for the show, but a good audience went home pleased after seeing "My Friend from Arkansaw."

—Those who like solid fashioned winters" will be glad to learn that the one now approaching will be their kind, according to predictions. The signs read by the weatherwise are thick corn husks, an abundance of nuts for the use of animals that roam the forests, and the great crop of holly berries in the south. The berries are furnished by nature to sustain the life of birds during a long, cold winter.

—Married at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kowalski, Antrim St. on Wednesday evening Sept. 26th, Ray Dorrance to Miss Janet Elizabeth Nowak. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Burdick. The Rev. J. W. Vickers officiated. The ring ceremony was used. The presents were numerous and the young people start out with the best wishes of a large circle of friends.

—John Griffith's coming engagement in this city in Shakespeare's tragedy "King Richard the Third" is the cause of a great deal of satisfaction to theatrical patrons who always welcome what is best in the drama. We have the management's assurance of a most excellent supporting company, complete new scenery effect, stage management and other requisites for a most enjoyable performance. Mr. Griffith's date there is October 20th.

The city "Primary Reform" has come, largely, from that class of citizens who always neglect attend once on their party caucus. People who stay at home from the caucus should never complain if things do not go to suit them. Attend your caucus. Let every republican remember the date of the caucus, and be there promptly on the minute, every voter would do this there would be no cause to talk of political crooks. Attend the caucus.

—The new postal cards, which are now to be had at some of the larger post offices and which presumably will be placed on sale in smaller offices, are of smaller size, nearly square, printed blue and carry the likeness of President Grant. It is said that the plan of the government in issuing them is to make this medium of communication more fashionable, for Uncle Sam finds it profitable to carry postal cards. These small cards will, of course, net a larger profit per ton than the larger ones

—Harrison Bedford, the new owner of the Fountain City House, proposes to restore that ancient hostelry to a considerable degree of its former usefulness. It has already been covered with new roofs, and next spring the house will be overhauled from foundation to roof. Sleeping rooms will be renovated and furnished, and the place be made not only habitable, but a most desirable place in which to put in the summer. The location is par ntely good, and there is no good reason why the Fountain City House should not be given a new lease of life.

—Rev. G. L. Berry will leave Tuesday next for Indianapolis, for a two weeks absence.

—At the last regular meeting of Charlevoix Chapter, Eastern Star, the following officers were installed: W. M., Mrs. H. H. Hale; W. P., Chas. F. Sax; Ass't M., Emma Hotter; Sec., Alice Blunt; Treas., Myrtle Young; Con., Mary Gilddings; Ass't Con., Louie Hatton; Chaplain, Hannah Hawkins; Marshal, Emma Wardrop; Organist, Jennie Kirby; Warder, Leona Wickizer; Sentinel, Edmund St. John; Ada, Lottie Markham; Ruth, Lydia Alcock; Esther, Emily Jefferies; Martha, Minnie Payton; Electa, Sophia Small. The installing officer was Mrs Hattie Cooper.

—This week would be a poor time to take a census in Northern Michigan. Most everybody but Fletch Turrell and the editor of this paper has gone from Charlevoix to Posey county, Indiana, or Fostoria, Ohio, on the annual excursion. The Pere Marquette office sold 285 tickets Monday afternoon and evening, with a few more people Tuesday morning. From points north and south of here the exodus was correspondingly large. It would take three columns of this paper to record the list and we do not date to publish it for fear some one will be left out, and get mad about it and stop his paper.

"King Richard the Third."

The eminent tragedian Mr. John Griffith will appear at Charlevoix on October 20th. Mr. Griffith is perhaps one of the most interesting personalities of stage life, and every season he grows in the esteem of intelligent theatre goers. He represents all that is strenuous, combined with an intellectuality that is rare, thoroughly understanding and appreciating all the glorious lines of Shakespeare, and giving to them an interpretation that is most convincing. His management has this season provided him with a splendid company and equipment. His coming engagement here is looked forward to with unusual interest.

The Assembly Study Club.

Mrs. G. S. Barnes of Petoskey was in Charlevoix last week calling on friends in the interest of the assembly study club, the new reading course of Bay View. A course of helpful, entertaining reading of present day interest, bearing directly on subjects that every parent must study at a high proficiency in the ordinary work of life—home-making as related to food, sanitation, decoration and kindred topics, child culture, psychology as related to health and success, Bible study and applied Christianity, with the English classics in nature study complete the three years course.

Proof of the Pudding.

The amount of money already received from the railroads of Michigan this year is almost equal to the amount required to meet all state expenditures, and some of the smaller railroads of the state have not yet paid their taxes. And this pleasing situation, pleasing to the taxpayers of the state, at least, has come about under a state administration that the democrat campaign noise-makers of two years ago said would favor the railroad rather than the people of Michigan. It is noticeable, however, that those who were most prominent in making such statements two years ago are observing the strictest sort of silence at this time.

Northper: Village was visited by a disastrous fire Monday afternoon, which for a time threatened to destroy all of the buildings on the main streets, as there was a high wind blowing. As the village is without fire protection, word was telephoned to the Traverse City fire department and a special train loading they dispatched. The Northern Hotel, which was a three story building, owned by Capt. W. P. Robertson, is in ashes. The loss is $10,000, with seven or eight thousand insurance. H. E. Gill's store and barn are about demolished. Mr. Gill, who is postmaster and had the office in his store, was badly burned about the feet and hands in trying to save the mail matter, which he succeeded in doing. Mr Gill's financial loss is estimated at $10,000, with about $6,000 insurance. A house belonging to Carl Schrader was burned, though most of the contents were saved. Loss $1,000, covered by insurance.

Union Evangelistic Effort.

The Charlevoix churches are uniting to open a series of evangelistic services Oct. 25th. Rev. E. Davidson, an evangelist of national reputation, has been engaged to conduct the services. Mr. David son has achieved wonderful success wherever he has worked. We clip the following from the Caseville (N. Y.) Republican:

"This has been a revival. Many a church member who had become indifferent to the vital matters of personal religion, has been awakened to new life. Mr. Davidson had a happy way of appealing to the christian conscience. Under his continuous preaching many a church member came to see that he might be a far better christian than he had been, and the preaching was so reasonable and winsome that everyone felt moved to try the test for life. So the churches through their whole membership are revived and quickened into new and better hopes and purposes. No doubt there will be a finer fidelity to God and to duty on the part of the whole membership of the churches by reason of these meetings."

John Griffith as "King Richard."

This most excellent tragedian, by many leading critics regarded as the best living interpreter of Shakespeare's delicious characters, will be here on October 20th of "King Richard," aided by a company and equipment that will all but do demands of an intellectual audience. Mr. Griffith's success in other Shakespearean roles has been considerable, and he will be welcomed by theatre goers who patronize and appreciate the highest class of theatrical offerings.

Late Current News.

Intervention and American occupation in Cuba is an accomplished fact. After continued efforts to bring the warring factions together, and continued failures, Secretary Taft, on Thursday last, declared himself provisional governor and landed marines. The thousand troops have been ordered to Cuba, and are now on the way there. Secretary Taft, in his proclamation, declares the policy of the American government to be re-establishment of the republic.

Wm. R. Hearst's nomination for the New York governorship has rejuvenated democracy of New York state, and there is very little doubt of the election of Hughes, the republican nominee. Leading democrats all over the state are bolting Hearst.

A Citizens Senatorial mass convention has been called to be held at Manton, at 1 p. m. Saturday, October 6, 1906, to place in nomination a candidate for state senator for this senatorial district. This is initiated to be a non partisan movement.

Democratic Convention Called.

A democratic convention has been called, to meet at Boyne City Oct. 8th, today!

Remember as the Independent convention meets at the same place at the same time, it looks as if an understanding existed, and that the two parties will offer a joint ticket in a ticket.

Mr. Bryan and Protection.

"One of the worst features of a tariff levied not for revenue but for the avowed purpose of protection is that it fosters the idea that one should use their votes to advance their own financial interests." That was a declaration made by Mr. Bryan in his recent Madison square speech. It is but half true. Protection fosters the idea that men should use their votes to advance the financial interests of their whole country. There is a Massachusetts section, and an Iowa section, and here and there a leader and a following, that teach this individual and locality view of protection. And they think they are religious. But the republican protectionists of the United States know that this country has profited through that policy as no other country on earth has ever profited. And for that reason they urge men to use their votes in protection's behalf.

Traverse City really expects to have street cars soon. The Traverse City and Benzonia railroad was organized some years ago to build a street railroad system which should extend out on the little peninsula to visit Maission. The matter has been delayed until now, when Secretary L. S. Gibbs claims to have a dispatch from his New York attorney that a contract for the building of the road has been let and he thinks work will begin soon.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The Charlevoix and Boyne City High School foot ball teams will meet at Athletic Park on Saturday, Oct. 6, at 2:00 o'clock. A very good game is expected, as both teams have been working hard. The Boyne City team is heavier than our team, but what our boys lack in weight they make up in agility and science. Twenty five cents admission will be charged to outsiders, and fifteen cents to High and Grammar School students. Everybody turn out and encourage the boys.

Work on the tennis court has begun with great enthusiasm, which enables the girls to have some athletic exercise.

Players are seen on the grounds at all times.

A nature study cabinet has been erected in one corner of the High school building for the benefit of natural science students, and the American history class are favored with a new map of Asia.

Subscriptions have been taken up among the students, and many leading periodicals will soon be added to the reading table.

Monday morning the students listened their usual program, but we understand that one is to be delivered later in the week.

This is the last week of the month and it has proved quite successful for both teachers and students. Monthly examinations are in order.

Normal News.

The study in psychology began this week and promises, under Miss Heely's guidance, to be the most interesting subject for this year.

Elizabeth Tower has taken charge of the third and fourth grades at the Lincoln school, during the illness of Miss Mary Tayler.

Miss Opal Emory a member of the class of 1905, visited the Normal on Tuesday.

Bessie Harshaw returned to school Monday, after a week's absence.

Mrs. Cities of East Jordan who is attending a few days with her daughter Lulu, visited the Normal school Thursday afternoon.

A Topic for Mr. Kimmerle.

Mr. Kimmerle, the democrat candidate for governor, who has promised to visit every county in Michigan to state his views and make income in connection with his campaign work, should not fail to call attention to the above dollars which each citizen of school age fortunate enough to live in Michigan, will be credited with on school moneys, as a result of Governor Hoss the state treasury. Mr. Kimmerle can give just as much of the history of the legislation which led to the large increase in Michigan's primary school payments as he may choose, but he will find that every word in the matter was made in Republican state officials and made government through republican legislation.

Democratic Convention Called.

A democratic convention has been called, to meet at Boyne City Oct. 8th today!

Remember as the Independent convention meets at the same place at the same time, it looks as if an understanding existed, and that the two parties will offer a joint ticket in a ticket.

—Mrs. Hannah Hyatt—Hiram Robinson, Milton township, expired suddenly Friday morning about 6:30 o'clock. Although he had been in poor health for a year or more, he was about the house every day. Monday morning he arose as usual, dressed himself, and while lacing his shoes it was noticed he remained in the boot for a long time. Inquiry by the family spoke to him, receiving no reply they went to his side and found him quite dead. Heart failure of course. Mr. Robinson was born in Pennsylvania Sept. 22, 1831, and only lacked two days of being 75 years of age. He came to Elk Rapids in 1854 in the company of Mr. Craw, and his more than half a century residence in this county makes him one of the oldest pioneers in this section. For many years he sailed the great lakes and encountered many adventures of wind and sea that required a strong hand and active brain and muscle to cope with successfully. These he possessed in a large degree and passed safely every phase of a sailor's life. Tiring of the sea he bought a farm and settled down to the quiet life of the agriculturist.

RUSSIA FACES FAMINE.

Official Report Gives Little Hope to Peasants.

The official report just issued, gives little ground for expectation that the famine, which already has a grip on many provinces in Russia, will be less this winter, although the winter wheat, barley and rye crops are above the average, spring wheat promises a disappointment. The rye and oat crops also were unsatisfactory, especially the latter. The Volga region, the most fertile in Russia, was below the average in both crops. The whole Volga government and the Ukraine made the best showing, with the Baltic provinces next. The winter wheat harvest was generally good, the yield being from three to four times the seed sown, and the Volga region and the Ukraine in the eastern provinces had an average harvest. Rye was the mainstay, and only in the Baltic provinces, which did not suffer from drought, was the harvest below average. The spring wheat harvest was a disappointment. In the Volga region the harvest was bad, and the Ukraine, Finland and Poland also suffered. In Finland it was disappointing, there also crops had been good. The oat harvest was good in the provinces east of the Volga, and in the Baltic provinces, but in the Volga region it was below average. The potato crop was good in the Volga provinces, and in the Baltic provinces, but in the Ukraine it was below average. The potato crop was good in the Baltic provinces, but in the Volga region it was below average. The potato crop in the Ukraine was below average. The flax crop was good in the Volga provinces and in the Baltic provinces, but in the Ukraine it was below average.

QUAINT OFFICES

Court of St. James Full of Odd-Appointed Officers.

King Edward has just conferred upon Dr. Ambrosio Bonsanto, dean of Westminster abbey, the office of lord high almoner. This ancient and honorable office is held by a clergyman who has to dispense the king's alms and attend on the king on state occasions. The king's lord high almoner also acts as chaplain to the king, and is ex officio a member of the privy council. The office is a very old one, dating from the reign of Edward the Confessor, who appointed Ailward, the king's chaplain, to the office. Ailward, being now canonized in the calendar as a saint, the almoner is called St. Ailward.

The Lord Chamberlain, a nobleman who is supposed to be well versed in the ceremonies of the court, and who is a member of the privy council, is the king's chief adviser on all matters of ceremony. The Lord Chamberlain is also the king's chief entertainer, and he has charge of the royal palaces, and arranges the dates of the court balls and of the drawing rooms. He also has charge of the royal theaters and arranges for the royal operas and plays. The Lord Chamberlain is also the king's chief adviser on all matters of etiquette, and he has charge of the royal stables and of hounds and horses used in the royal hunts. He also has the only keys to fit the golden gates.

The earliest office held by the lord chamberlain is the office of lord high steward, which was created by William the Conqueror. The office was abolished in 1136 and was revived by Henry II. It was abolished again in 1173 and was revived by Richard the Lion Hearted. The lord high steward is the king's chief judge and he presides over the court of the king's bench, which is the only tribunal in the realm which has the power to try a peer for treason or felony.

The earliest office held by the king's chief butler and purveyor was created by William the Conqueror. The office was abolished in 1136 and was revived by Henry II. It was abolished again in 1173 and was revived by Richard the Lion Hearted. The king's chief butler and purveyor is the keeper of the royal palaces and of the royal wines, and he has charge of the royal table and of the royal kitchen. He also has charge of the royal stables and of hounds and horses used in the royal hunts. He also has the only keys to fit the golden gates.

The earliest office held by the king's chief cup bearer was created by William the Conqueror. The office was abolished in 1136 and was revived by Henry II. It was abolished again in 1173 and was revived by Richard the Lion Hearted. The king's chief cup bearer is the keeper of the royal plate and of the royal wardrobe, and he has charge of the royal table and of the royal kitchen. He also has the only keys to fit the golden gates.

The earliest office held by the king's chief carver was created by William the Conqueror. The office was abolished in 1136 and was revived by Henry II. It was abolished again in 1173 and was revived by Richard the Lion Hearted. The king's chief carver is the keeper of the royal plate and of the royal wardrobe, and he has charge of the royal table and of the royal kitchen. He also has the only keys to fit the golden gates.

THE RESCUE

PROCLAMATION BY TAFT TAKING OVER CONTROL OF CUBA.

SECRETARY TAFT

TO THE PEOPLE OF CUBA: The Congress of the United States, in the exercise of its sovereign prerogative, has provided for the government of Cuba until such time as it can be established under a permanent form of government which will enable the island to take its place among the family of nations. The President, in pursuance of the authority conferred upon him by the act of Congress, has appointed me provisional governor to hold office until such time as he may deem proper and to exercise the powers conferred upon the President by the act of Congress aforesaid.

The government so established will be maintained and the laws now existing will be given due force and effect, so far as not inconsistent with the provisions of the said act of Congress, and so far as the same may be applicable to the present circumstances. Subordinate officers will be retained in their respective offices if they will accept the situation and give to the government the support which they have given to the Cuban government in the past. In the same way the municipal governments will be maintained with the exception of the municipal officers, who will be appointed provisionally by me, pending the next municipal election, which will be held as soon as the state of affairs will permit, and which I shall endeavor to call as soon as possible.

The laws to be administered by the provisional government will be those now existing in Cuba, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions of the act of Congress, and so far as they are not inconsistent with the fundamental principles of a government of ordered liberty and of law, such as that which the people of the United States have established in the Island of Cuba. For a short time all the executive departments will be administered by the officers now charged with the duty of performing the functions of government, pending a reorganization of the executive departments, and at the same time in their turn responsible to myself personally and through me to the President of the United States. Order and quiet will be maintained, and the government will be in full operation within a few days. The courts will continue to administer justice, and all the laws in their course not inconsistent with the provisional character of the government will be enforced. However, we have suspended for a time the election of officers under the municipal laws of Cuba. For a short time all the municipalities will be administered by provisional officers appointed by me, and all the laws in their course

INCORPORATING GRANGES.

Advantage Obtained by Incorporation Over Association.

The question often arises among members of the grange, What advantage is there in incorporating a grange under the laws of the state? A grange that is duly organized under the authority of a charter from the national grange is an association established by law or society of individuals. The organization of the members is governed by laws, constitutions or bylaws formulated in accordance with the constitution and bylaws of the state or national grange. Nevertheless which an association has a well defined legal status under the laws of the state to change the association into an incorporated body gives it the same rights and status as a person and bestows on it the powers and privileges of a single person in its or their corporate capacity, and confers on it powers and privileges not possessed by individuals. The legal advantage which a corporation possesses over an association is the fact that the members of the corporation are exempt from personal liability for the debts of the corporation.

An association and its agents either have to pay taxes on the property they hold, or have to make reports of the property they hold, and pay taxes on the profits and income not by individuals but by the association as a body, and pay taxes on property and profits, or members are compelled to make reports of property and profits, and pay taxes on the property and profits, or members are compelled to make reports of property and profits, and pay taxes on the property and profits, or members are compelled to make reports of property and profits, and pay taxes on the

SOLDIERS AT HOME.

THEY TELL SOME INTERESTING SKETCHES OF THE WAR.

How the Boys of Forty Armies Whiled Away the Time in Camp—Foraging Experiences, a Humorous Mayhem—Thrilling Scenes on the Battlefield.

"Thirty years of Father McKinney," said Captain Lou Wallace, the Thanksgiving day sermon included not that I made several attempts to escape from rebel prisons, and had back wounds enough to prove it. During the fight at Gettysburg our regiment was ordered to hold a point of rocks and we did it. Then the corps on our right gave way and the Confederates came in behind us. We had to retreat or be cut off. In the confusion I got separated from my company and strayed into a large stone house where I was taken prisoner. The house was used as a hospital for rebel officers and some three hundred of our men were there, and the boys of the Twenty-fifth Ohio will remember the night we had in that house. The rebel officers were very civil to us, and we had a good supper of coffee and hot biscuits, which we enjoyed very much, for we had been without food for two days. The next morning we were marched off to Libby prison, and I was soon surrounded by rebels, and I was a prisoner. So I was, and I had spent the greater part of my life in the service of Lew Wallace's regiment in fortifying urbion and talking Uncle Sam's money away. I was almost full, but before we went inside the prison I caught some of the other prisoners, and taking the whole crowd to the cook house, I ordered a dinner for them. The cook was a Frenchman, and he was a good one, and he did his best for us. We had a good dinner, and I had to be shot. While all Mayhem was went into the tunnel that night, I was in the front rank, and I was the first man to get through the tunnel into the open air. We had to crawl on our hands and knees for a mile before we could stand upright. Dog tired, we had to lie down in the woods and sleep all day. We had to be very careful of our movements, for we were

HAS MUCH MEANING

PRACTICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE TERM "STAND PAT."

It Meant a Great Deal More when Hanna Injected It into Politics and It Means More as the Years Roll By.

"But what does it mean to stand pat?" This is the question propounded in a Chicago dispatch and relies more on editorial by the New York Mail of July 28. It is easily answered. To stand pat means now precisely what it meant when that non-political sobriquet was projected into politics by Mark Hanna five or six years ago. It means a country on the high wave of a sea of unprecedented prosperity. "Stand pat!" said he.

The new domestic iron industry is growing at a tremendous rate to meet domestic demand. "Stand pat!"

The new domestic lumber industry is growing at the rate of half a million dollars a year. "Stand pat!"

The new railroads carrying more freight and passengers and building more miles of new road than ever before. "Stand pat!"

The new 10,000,000 farmers with gold off mortgages of the tariff protection period of 1896-97 and paying taxes and subscriptions. "Stand pat!"

The new internal trade amounting to twenty billions a year and growing every day. "Stand pat!"

The new foreign trade upon the tremendous scale and growing at the rate of $200,000,000 a year (it is now over three billions). "Stand pat!"

The new outside world taking more and more of our agricultural and manufactured exports. "Stand pat!"

The new big increase in our immense gold reserve, available as a reserve against our bank currency, for use in manufacture and for the goods of the competitor. "Stand pat!"

The new law that the dollars entered on imports were yielding ample revenue for the government. "Stand pat!"

The new idea, never of experts every financial delusion, of a national trade balance averaging more than half a billion. "Stand pat!"

The new by consequence a vast influx of gold, which for years past the world has added from mines to our supply of yellow metal. "Stand pat!"

The new American securities held around world back in all its sections, our favorable balances of trade and the amount of American money loaned around to pay interest and dividends on foreign capital invested in this country reduced to less than half what it was ten years ago in a tariff revision period. "Stand pat!"

The new the United States gives of its debts to foreigners and capital flowing the money center, at home the richest center of the world. "Stand pat!"

All new, in short, the sum of unexampled prosperity, the highest tide of wages, the highest standard of living that the world has ever known. "Let well alone!"

What Mark Hanna saw five years ago to be seen now by all. Then a mere vision. He was laughed at by those who would again say, "Stand pat!"

He did not say, nor does anybody now say, as the Mail seems to think, this condition is a "loop of time" an unfordable backwater that will pass percent of the change of a single day's sojourn. The Mail outfit is made better. That is not the stand-pat attitude. That is not what stand-pat means. To suppose it is to suppose a little thing. Free products and chemical raw materials ought to be given a monopoly of that kind of expansion. This is a stand-pat year. So will next year be, and the year after that, and many years after that, we should all hope. When a different condition comes, and when revision of the tariff is called for to promote the general good—when a decrease of some of our schedules and an increase of some of the schedules shall obviously work to the advantage of the country a revision-than tariff revision should come and will come.

But it will come not sooner than there. The blue statesmanship of the country says so. The business interests of the country say so. The wage earners of the country say so.

That is what it means to stand-pat.

Another Difficulty.

"I suppose that when you discover the north pole you will regard your labors as completed."

"No," answered the arctic explorer. "The hardest part will be yet to come. We'll have to find some way of getting home again."

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Council Rooms, Oct. 1, 1906.

The council met pursuant to adjournment, Mayor Hidinger presiding. Aldermen present—1st ward, Sherman. 2nd ward, Cameron. Third ward, Webster.

The council proceedings for Sept 19 and 20 read and approved.

The matter of bids presented to the council by the board of health was taken up, discussed and referred to the city attorney.

The city treasurer asked for an extension for the collection of the general tax. Ald. Cameron moved that the city treasurer be granted an extension for the collection of the general tax of 10 days from Sept 15th, which motion prevailed.

The chief of police and street commissioner submitted his report for September, which was read and on motion was placed on file.

J. P. Partridge submitted a petition to build a cement sidewalk on Petoskey avenue, in front of lot 1, of block 3, Dixon addition, which was read and on motion of Ald. Cameron the petition was granted.

The finance committee submitted the following bills, duly audited, and recommended that said bills be paid out of their respective funds. Ald. Webster moved that the clerk be instructed to draw warrant on the city treasurer for $1,826.43, to pay the respective bills, which motion prevailed as follows: Yes—Sherman, Cameron, Webster.

CREW CAUSED WRECK

THOUGHT TO HAVE SUNK SIRIO FOR PURPOSES OF ROBBERY.

Strong Box Has Been Found, but Contents of Gold Which It Had Contained—New York, N. M. S. to Train Other Days.

Evidence pointing to a crew that robbed the Sirio while it was in the Gulf of Genoa, and then sunk the vessel by opening the valves of the engine room, has been found by the Italian authorities. The crew of the Sirio, it is alleged, had discovered that there was a strong box on board containing a quantity of gold, and that prior to the sinking of the vessel the chief engineer had left the engine room, and was found in his cabin with his throat cut.

It is believed that the crew, after robbing the chief engineer, opened the valves of the engine room and then made their escape in a boat. The Sirio was bound from Genoa for Naples when the accident occurred. Nearly three days after the sinking of the Sirio the Italian steamship Tanaro, which was bound from Genoa for Naples, picked up a boat containing 15 men, who said they were the crew of the Sirio. The men said that they had been adrift in the boat for two days, and had suffered great hardship. The men said that the Sirio had struck a mine and had sunk in two minutes. The men said that they had left the ship in a boat, and had been picked up by the Tanaro. The men said that the Sirio had struck a mine off the coast of Sardinia,

JOHN WAS IN LUCK

GOOD STORY, WITH NO SEMBLANCE OF A MORAL.

Showing How Important It Is for Forgetful Husbands That Their Wives Should Have Rich and Generous Breth-

"John, dear," remarked Mrs. Horton across the breakfast table, "do you know what day this is?"

"Why, yes," replied John. "It is the anniversary of the formation of our—ahem—wedding—whatever that calendar."

"I don't speak that, regard the Wife, with a suspicion of tears in her voice.

"It is my birthday, and you forgot it!"

"Not at all, dear, not at all," he replied. "I remember that. The date changed me for a moment. Of course, I know it was your birthday. You wait and see the presents I have ordered for you and then will be filled with remorse at having suspected me of forgetting. You wait."

John was a shabby prevaricator, but his fluff "went.

"If John dear, what is it? Do tell me," urged his wife.

"Not yet, not yet," he demurred. John "It's a surprise you know. We haven't time to stop now, but I'll be back earlier than usual, and I'll give you the surprise of your life."

It was John's intention to slip on his way down town and order a gown and fur for his wife, but meeting a friend in his flight he was so far down town before he realized it that he concluded to go on to the office and then to visit some jewelry stores in the city.

There was an unusual absence of business to be attended to. The day and John's mind not being therefore engrossed, he was only too ready when a friend came in to chat with him. He was a young man who was a shameless bachelor, and John, who was married, was always willing to listen to the recital of the horrible fate Sudden upon him, for he could find his wife, when them was a little time to spare, to be Mrs. Horton, some gilding down the stairs and thinks her arms around the throttled man a neck with a fervid "Oh you old John, the greatest man. It was just what I wanted it, was just lovely of you."

John was bewildered for he was a man of resources.

"The fur, he said. I thought you'd like it. Fur—where is it?"

"Where is it?" repeated the wife. "Why, John, are you mad? Didn't you buy it?"

"Of course I did. And she pointed to a bundle of yellow paper and which glittered on her bosom.

"Was the fur in it?" he asked, he was at a loss, which was, had the check to send duplicate and notify his wife?" was uncertain.

"Why, what makes you ask?" she inquired the surprised man.

"Oh, nothing," was the reply and only thought at first it was for the same one I picked out, but I see I'm in."

"In the evening Mrs Horton's rich brother called. As soon as his name was announced John gave a jump and grasped at the solution of the wife's key of his birthday present in a word said.

"O, how nice of you, Gooney, to come on my birthday. See what a beautiful present John gave me, was Mrs. Horton's first greeting to her brother.

"That," replied the brother with a look of perplexity on his face. "Who—"

"You," broke in John, looking the other man threateningly in the eye, "I ordered it to be sent to my office and was afraid it would not reach you in time. Come into the library a minute I want to speak with you for a second in a matter of the greatest importance." And before the astonished George could gather his wits he was ushered, dragged into the library and the door shut behind him.

"I can give me away, I'm sorry you," whispered John. Mrs. Horton could hear her husband's voice pitched low and speaking earnestly behind the closed door.

"That's really a very pretty piece of jewelry," said George. "Not many wives have such thoughtful and attentive husbands as you have, Lucy. My present will be on tomorrow. They didn't have it ready to-day.

"I haven't had such a pleasant evening for a long time," said Mrs. Horton when she retired that night. John seemed a little nervous, for he was tired—and had reason to be.—N. Y. Press.

English Women the Tallest.

After taking measurements of the heads of women in France, Germany and America, a doctor announced that the English woman is the tallest, and the American woman comes next. The average height of the French woman is five feet one inch. The American woman is nearly two inches taller, and the women of Great Britain half an inch taller than the latter. American women, however, weigh slightly more than either of the others their average weight being 117 pounds.

"But the defendant himself says he is of sound mind."

Buying or Selling?

It is told of the son of a horse dealer, a sharp lad, when once accosted, early either by his father to mount a horse and exhibit its paces, the little fellow whispered the question, "In order to decide how we shall treat it, should we never take him for a writer."

"Are you buying or selling?"—"Philadelphia Ledger.

LIFE IN THE SMALL TOWN.

Writer Points Out a Few of Its Advantages.

Small towns have their drawbacks No man need try it in these regions little contests to lead a double life. There are fainted, sleepless watchers at each end of the line, with several sensitive along the way to report on his doings. He fallows to do and his misdoings. Everything else failing, his very thoughts are searched. The faithful sleepless constable from his vantage movement or lack of movement, what must he have in every circumstance meant on return home after every absence his friends and neighbors circumstance him as to every detail. He had better tell the truth, because some one will in 24 course turn up to point out the inaccuracies in a tasty narrative. In large cities very few if indeed any, of your neighbors will worry much or at length about your business or companions. Few if any outside your own immediate circle of home and business life care for your doings while away. They are all too busy, too many people moving here and hence to be kept track of.

The small town has not. It is time for universities and the professional critics of city life see the freedom of the and can will be filled with envy. Here as loving companions use of for profiting. You wait.

John was a shabby prevaricator, but the truth "went.

"O John dear, what is it? Do tell me," urged his wife.

The Minister's Wife

By MRS. HENRY WOOD

CHAPTER XI.

Dynevor, who was knowledgeable enough in the world to know how valuable Christmas holidays are to a man who earns his own bread, and who has to do it in London, had arranged that Charlie should come to them for the Christmas week. Charlie was not very well, and looked very pale and thin; and Dynevor, in a letter to his mother, had said that he should like to have the boy with them for a little change.

Lady Dynevor was pleased to have her son-in-law's request complied with. She had a great deal of kindness for Charlie, and was very fond of her son-in-law. Dynevor was her idol, and she was ever ready to do anything he wished.

Charlie was very pale when he came. He was not well, he said, in answer to her inquiries; he had been very busy, and had taken a bad cold. But he was better now, he added, when he saw his mother's anxious face bent upon him with a look of such tender love in it. He was very fond of his mother.

Lady Dynevor was not well that day herself, and was obliged to keep her room. But she was up and dressed when Dynevor and Charlie came in to luncheon, and was on the sofa in her dressing-room when they went to her after it.

Dynevor had taken his brother-in-law out for a long drive in the afternoon, and had ordered a good dinner for them when they came in. He was very fond of his brother-in-law, and was very proud of his good looks. Charlie was a handsome lad, with his fair face and his curling brown hair; he was tall and slender, and had a good deal of his sister's sweetness of manner. Dynevor was very proud of his wife's beauty; he had married her for love, against the wishes of his family, who had wished him to make a more brilliant match; but he had never had cause to repent of his choice. Lady Dynevor was a sweet, good woman, and a fond wife to her husband.

Dinner was served in the dining-room that night, as there was a good fire there, and it was more cheerful than the great dining-room. Dynevor had ordered a good dinner, and had opened some of his choicest wine to do honour to his guest. He was very fond of his wife's brother, and was glad to have him with them at this season of the year. Lady Dynevor had given him a hint that Charlie was not well, and had spoken of her own anxiety about him; and Dynevor was on the watch to see what was the matter with the lad.

He saw that he was tired to death, and that something was preying upon his mind. But when the name of the unfortunate bridegroom was discovered to preclude any laughter from the sister's betrothed, essentially from his nature, the reason was—

Honor.

CHAPTER XII.

In the handsome drawing-room of their town residence, in Berkeley Square, sat the Duke of Dunbar and Lady Hesse Plantagenet. It was a fine morning in April, the dinner hour was approaching, and they were awaiting a guest, an old friend whom the duke had met in the morning, and had asked to dine with them.

Years have elapsed, and the duke, the commanding, fine man, is more gray than he was when we last saw him. Lady Hesse is not age-stricken, and looks on a day rather more than twenty a woman ought to look, yet she looks younger than she looked when we first saw her, in the dawn of her maiden prime.

Her face, so symmetrically sweet and good, so characteristic never more lovely than when it was in repose, bears the impress of deep care but of care that has not soured, but has only made her more gentle, more full of sympathy for others, more ready to do good to others, than she was before. The duke's face, too, bears the impress of care, but of care that has not hardened him, but has made him more gentle, more full of sympathy for others, than he was before. Care, sorrow, affliction, have done their work on them, and have made them what they are—a noble, high-minded, high-bred, high-principled, high-hearted, and high-toned man and woman.

The duke's son, the Marquis of Hesse, who was with his regiment in Ireland, was married, and had spent much of his time at his own place, Dynevor Park, since his marriage. Dynevor Park was in Devonshire, and was a place of great beauty. The duke's second son was in the navy, and was at sea. The duke's only daughter, Lady Ethel, was married, and spent much of her time in Scotland, where her husband was a landed proprietor. Dynevor Park was the place to which the duke and duchess invited their friends for a season, or a portion of a season, when they were in residence at their town house. It was to be their home for a month from this time.

The duke's only daughter was married to a baronet, Sir Ashley Ashley, and was living in Devonshire, not far from her father's place. He was a good, kind husband, who had grown to love Ethel for the sweet, noble nature that was hers.

The duke's only son was married, and was living in London, and was a member of the House of Commons. He was married to a lady who was a cousin of his father's wife, and was a very good woman, and was a great favourite with the duke and duchess.

The duke's second son was in the navy, and was at sea. The duke's only daughter was married, and was living in Scotland, where her husband was a landed proprietor. Dynevor Park was the place to which the duke and duchess invited their friends for a season, or a portion of a season, when they were in residence at their town house. It was to be their home for a month from this time.

CURRANT AND GOOSEBERRY.

Latter Not so Much Esteemed in America as in England.

The peculiar scent of currants and gooseberries is disliked by many, says the London magazine. Then owing a large proportion of the fruit garden, but we would be afraid to spare them from it, not only because of the effects of jellies, jams and sauces they make, but also because of the pleasure they afford in gathering a crop of fruit every year. They are the hardiest of our common fruits, and need no protection. A plant or a cutting, if once established, thrives year after year, and yields a good crop of fruit, if it only receives a little attention. Moreover, these two fruits take up less space in proportion to the amount of fruit produced than most other small fruits. They are also very hardy, and will succeed in some shade, but they will not succeed in the shade of trees, where the soil is very dry, and the roots of the trees rob them of moisture and nourishment.

The best way to plant them is in a row, or rows, in some open place in the garden, where they will be easily reached for pruning, picking, and dressing. They are very hardy, and will succeed in any soil, but they do not like a very dry soil, and

It is about time that Mr. Kinchelle is doing any campaign work under the auspices of the republican state central committee. Mr. Kinchelle is the democratic candidate for governor and any assistance he may be giving to republicans is not deliberate or intentional. Whatever else may be true of the Case county campaign efforts the original partisan intentions should not be questioned.

The information given by state Treasurer Glerum to Mr. Kinchelle, the Class county democrat candidate for governor, in response to the latter's question as where the state's money was deposited, not only gave the Class county gentleman the information he asked for, but also included the fact that the state has received more than one hundred thousand dollars interest on its deposits of state funds for this year alone, up to the date of collection. Mr. Kinchelle has not made any use of this fact in his speeches or interviews with possibly it is for no reason, if the democratic candidate for governor as it has been to the taxpayers of Michigan.

The matter of principal importance to Michigan republicans so far as the present state campaign is concerned should be not to wage and arrange for getting the largest possible vote on November 6, the date of the coming state election. The state campaign has in progress is entirely devoid of the strenuous features of some former or no year's because the people of this state are better pleased with the present status of state affairs than they have been for many years. But this lack of excitement should not be permitted to result in lack of interest in the vote to be cast on election day. The fortunate industrial conditions and the happy status of state affairs which the republican party and its official representatives have so earnestly labored to attain should not be permitted to take from the number of votes state and local republican candidates will receive on election day.

• • •

From the state records the democratic candidate for governor has now of the information that Governor Warner and a number of other prominent republicans he gives bought lands from the state more than three years ago. The information of all of have been obtained at the same time that the state is yet in possession of many thousand acres of as good land as the others bought which it would be glad to sell at the same price. State lands are sold only at public sales or after being offered at public sale to the highest bidders, but never below minimum prices which have been determined by a competent board in advance of the sale. It would be greatly to the advantage of the taxpayers of the state if every acre of land in its possession could be sold to those who would improve it and pay taxes on it. If through Mr. Kinchelle's calling attention to the state's ownership of large tracts of wild lands some more thousands of acres may be sold, he will have performed the most useful service of his political career.

WOMAN'S CROWN OF GLORY.

What a Fuss They Do Make with it at Any and All Times.

Women have great claims with their hair, says the Arkansas Traveler. If they could be in the citizens they are more or less when they stay home. Hair is their crown of glory. It is their crown and their glory.

If they go where it is dusty they tie it up. They come home. It is the worst place for hair, my hair was as straight as a string all the way.

Once in three or four weeks they wash their hair and then they fuss and fuss and fuss with it and fuss and fuss. I'm a man, or can be one in a minute when my wife's hair is in curlers. Hair is the most tender hair. It is so sensitive they cannot do a thing with it.

The women are always telling each other how long their hair is, with their head down low, so that it would not be seen with it done high. They have it either all coming out or else they can not imagine what has happened. Yet it is coming in thick and heavy.

As they walk down the street the women are forever nodding for their back hair and catching up short locks with hairpins, or feeling to see if their hair is coming down. When they get to Court of a night the very good thing the women look at is their hair and twitch it one way or the other. Yet, out of 10,000 women here on my mind, my hair differs from theirs.

Just Two Looks.

"Shade down in the center" clerk, Pat, with all ye have there, and a bystander.

"And what does that signify to me?" answered Pat. "Just you hand, was when I got it, and was when I gave it to the gold digger."

—Work is in progress on the Hotel Dixon that will very much improve that popular house. An addition is being built which will afford the house a new kitchen, enlarge the dining room to a seating capacity of one hundred and add ten more sleeping rooms. The Dixon has always been a very popular hotel and this improvement moves it still higher to the list.

—The Ladies Shakspeare Club and their husbands attended the presentation of Richard Third last Saturday night in a body, and after the play were entertained at the house of Mrs. Chase by the retiring officers of the club, Mrs. C. A. Monsinger, Mrs. W. H. Woodley and Mrs. F. N. Chase. Light refreshments were served and the club enjoyed a very pleasant social time till an early hour.

—The woodman's axe is about to level the last track of cork pine in this part of the world. There are about 200 trees on the 80 acres, which have been held for 35 years by Louis Steffiner, a farmer near Cass City. It is located on the Cass river, which was famous in lumbering days for the excellent lumber which it floated down to the mills in the Saginaw valley. The trees are to be cut at once. Then this species of pine will be extinct in Michigan.

—It is evidently not safe to place any limit on the amount of money that will be paid out of the state treasury next month on primary school warrants. Four months ago it was stated that ten dollars for each child of primary school age would be the November apportionment. A few weeks ago it was found that the money on hand would permit the distribution of eleven dollars for each child; and now comes the information that twelve dollars for each child of primary school age will probably be paid to the city and township school officers between the 10th and 15th of November. The latest increase is made possible through the attorney general's decision that penalty payments made by the railroads, as well as their tax payments, could be paid out on primary school account. The state officers are anxious to make the apportionment as large as possible, but twelve dollars per capita, if it is made, will exceed all promised or expected payments.

A Very Pretty Story, But a False hood.

Certain candidates on the independent county ticket are circulating the same old stories that have been the stock in trade of that element for two years, and long ago exploded regarding the financial affairs of the county.

The story that seems to be the favorite among the "independents" is that the county is in debt forever, that, although the Dresser report found the debt to be $11,000, current funds were used to reduce the amount, and that, following the Dresser report, funds were borrowed to meet current expenses.

It seems hardly necessary to state that this story is totally false in every particular. There is not the remotest foundation for the story, and voters should not be deceived.

But we call attention to the fact that, if it were true it has no bearing whatever upon the issues of this campaign. The county officers are not in the least degree responsible for county indebtedness.

The board of supervisors is the responsible authority when it comes to county expenditures. We challenge any of our friends of the opposition to show where any county officer is directly or indirectly responsible for the county debt, or any part thereof.

It is a "good enough Morgan" still after election," of course, and we and them a voter may be fooled by the cry, but no intelligent voter can be deceived by the false hood.

In the first place it is not true, in the second place, it has no bearing in this campaign.

About Non Partisanship.

The people who created and are blowing the independent county ticket have very much to say about non-partisanship. In the same breath they assert that every winner but one on their ticket but one, is a republican, and that the electors of Charlevoix county should vote for the best men, regardless of politics.

There is such a gulch intangurity in this appeal that we can hardly credit our friends with consistency. The regular republicans, through the statutory medium of a legally called and legally constituted convention, embracing legally elected delegates from every township in the county placed a ticket in the field. The abilities of these nominees cannot be questioned. Some of them are now first-termers.

The independents have nominated a ticket which they boast is impenetrable in its republicanism. And they ask the people to be non-partisan. Not all on that ticket are renegades and notcheads, but some are, and the average citizen has no use for a renegade or notchead.

The appeal for non-partisanship is cloying, stale and inconsistent. We accept the gauge of battle. We are content that the people should judge the two tickets by the nominees thereon. And we are confident that when this is done, a large majority will vote for the regular republican ticket.

Most democrats, failing, as democrats, to compass the defeat of republicans are always ready to join hands with disgruntled republicans, renegades and notcheads in the contest.

Charlevoix county republicans are not ashamed of their administration of public affairs, and they are willing to be judged by their record. In the contest now rapidly approaching, they are not afraid of the "non partisan" appeal.

To the Voters of Michigan.

An examination of the state election returns reveals the fact that in "off" years when no president is to be elected, a large number of voters stay at home on election day. In some counties over half of the electors thus neglect their highest privilege as citizens and their most important duty to the commonwealth. This letter is written for the purpose of appealing to the public conscience upon this question.

Through carelessness of many mistakes and shortcomings, yet for a period of twenty two years I have endeavored to faithfully serve the whole people without distinction and without prejudice and with an eye single to the general good and to the continued prosperity of our beloved state. By practically the unanimous vote of my party at the first state primaries I have been renominated, and now I very much wish to have all of the electors of the state pass judgment upon my administration. If I have succeeded, a small vote would be but little encouragement, and if I have failed, a light vote would not pronounce proper judgment.

This appeal is not to my party friends only, but to all of the voters. We are living in strenuous times. Under the splendid leadership of President Roosevelt we are making history at sixkiss in advance. Almost every day new issues confront us and new opportunities await us. Never before has history been made so fast and never before has the demand for faithful and intelligent citizenship been so great. The well of the people is supreme and this will can only be registered at the ballot box. Here, otherwise, honest and patriotic men either fail of defeated, and the loud call of patriotic duty comes to all to abandon non-voting day every extent stress and pleasure long enough to go to the polls and vote.

Therefore, earnestly appeal to you in behalf of intelligent citizenship and their welfare to express an increasing interest in public affairs and your appreciation of a free ballot, our bulwark of liberty, by voting on Tuesday, November 6.

FRED M. WARNER.

Well Known Lake Boats Going to Ocean.

Seventeen thousand miles, or more than two thirds the distance around the world, is the journey that two great lake passenger steamers the Iroquois and Iroquois are about to undertake.

Both vessels have been sold to the Puget Sound Navigation line of Seattle, Wash., and the Iroquois, which is at Detroit now, will begin her long voyage about Cape Horn within a few days. The Chippewa is at Chicago, but it is reported she will depart from there the end of the week.

The deal for the purchase of the steamers was closed by George L. Craig, the former well known Toledo shipbuilder, and T. H. Franklin, a New York vessel broker.

The terms of the transfer are stated to be $300,000, which includes the cost of the steamers and equipping them for their lengthy voyage. This means that each steamer brought about $75,000 as it stands at the present time.

Both the Chippewa and Iroquois are modern steel passenger steamers and were built by the Frank Wolf shipbuilding Co at Toledo in 1902 and 1903, respectively.

The boats are almost duplicates, except that the Iroquois is a trifle longer of the two. In the general opinion of the lake tie, same, both having fore and aft superstructures. They easily knock off 18 miles an hour.

The company purchasing the steamers operates a day line on Puget sound, between Seattle, Tacoma and Victoria, B. C.

Darragh for Congress.

Republicans of Charlevoix county need no urging when it comes to the congressional question.

Aside from the National questions involved, and which are, of course, paramount and vital, Mr. Darragh's services to Charlevoix county alone commend him to the voters.

Mr. Darragh has been a faithful public servant. He has been alert and watchful, and his record needs no defense.

In these columns we have heretofore reviewed that record. The people are familiar with it. A vote for Darragh means not only that we appreciate his services in our behalf, but it means that we endorse the policies for which Theodore Roosevelt stands as champion.

No good republican who endorses Roosevelt should fail to go to the polls and vote for A. B. Darragh.

The Minister's Wife

By MRS. HENRY WOOD

Lady Jane found a charming house in Berkeley Square. "Just the thing!" she observed to her husband. "I do know who was in it once for a week. It is such a little house and so quiet! Mrs. Crofton's own mother, only in the middle of the season, so we can publish the house and the furniture for a month. Of course the terms go off, as the agents call it, on account of the season. It belonged to an old bachelor, and he died there."

"We cannot possibly afford it," objected the Honorable Cecil to Lady Jane. "Why, it is a mere—"

"Nonsense! I know what it is—twenty guineas a week. Of course we can afford it. We must be at home in London."

Lady Jane was right. The terms were low, the furniture was good, and the house was in a fashionable locality. The upshot was that Cecil Ashton took it for the remainder of the season, and Lady Jane was in raptures at the prospect of going to London.

The Hampshire seat was a little beyond Ashton. The house was in fair repair, but very much in need of a good coat of paint and other outside repairs. The grounds were very extensive, and were well kept. The place was in a very secluded spot, and was well adapted for a family of quality who wished to live in seclusion. Mr. Ashton had been there but a few days when he wrote to his wife that he should have it on his hands for the remainder of the term, and she had better come down with the children and spend the time there. He was very fond of his wife, and was lonely without her; and he was very fond of his children, and was lonely without them. He added that he was not well, and was suffering from his old complaint, the gout, and was very lonely in consequence.

Lady Jane was not in the habit of consulting her husband's wishes, or of being much influenced by his letters. She was a very handsome woman, with a good deal of the Ashton pride in her bearing. She was very fond of her children, and was very fond of her husband, but she was not in the habit of showing it to him. She had married him when she was a girl of seventeen, and had been married about two years when he succeeded to the title and to the Ashton property. She was a great deal more in London than he was, and was much more in the world than he was. He was a quiet, retiring man, and she was a very lively woman, who liked to see and be seen. She had married him for his position and his wealth, and he had married her for her beauty and her family connections. He was proud of her beauty, and was fond of her in his own quiet way; but he was not the man to make her happy, and she was not the woman to make him happy. They had been married two years, and they had been together but a few weeks at intervals during that time. He was a very jealous man, and had taken her to task more than once for her flirtations with other men. She had promised him that she would not give him cause for jealousy, and she had kept her promise to the letter. She was a very proud woman, and she had married him with the intention of being a good wife to him, and she was a good wife to him in her own cold, proud fashion. She was a cold woman in her nature, and had married him for his position and his wealth, and was proud of his handsome face and his fashionable manners. If Governor Warner does not continue to face with a very large majority of the people of Michigan before they will be inspired to pass judgment upon his administration, it will not be through lack of strenuous effort in that direction. Since the day of the Republican convention, two years ago, Fred M. Warner has placed his dependence upon the people, the many who do the work of the farms and factories and settle, with whom his entire life has been closely related, and he has had their wishes and their best interests in mind in all his official work. It is not strange, therefore, that nonpartisan Warner should look to annual state elections for re-election directly to the people, the great majority, whom he has sincerely sought.

School Commissioner Milford

In our review of the republican county ticket last week we inadvertently omitted the name of J. H. Milford, the nominee for school commissioner.

It may be taken as a compliment to Mr. Milford that the opposition people passed over that office in making up their ticket, which gives that office to the democrats.

During a class period one afternoon last week, the second grade children in the Training School came "down to the Normal class and told the story of Silver Locks and the Three Bears" in a very interesting way. The child folk are going to make some furniture out of cardboard such as chairs, beds, etc. which the three bears used and the members of the Normal class will 'tell the children in this work in manual training.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

In a decidedly hard fought gridiron contest Saturday the Traverse City High school team was forced to bow to the Petoskey team and lost the championship of northern Michigan by a score of 5 to 0. The game was witnessed by a large crowd which broke into the enthusiasm until the whistles blew in the last half. Logs tumble and a sixty yard run by a Petoskey player in the first half turned the tide and the championship went over despite the game fight in the second half.

The officials of the Boyne City, Gaylord & Alpena Railroad were out Thursday inspecting the survey of the road between Gaylord and Alpena. Work will be begun on this extension without doubt next spring and before another year rolls around Boyne City will have the pleasure of riding across the great state of Michigan on our own local road, which will give Lake Michigan connection with outer transportation companies. The building of the road through to Alpena will be another link in the progress of Boyne City and enhance its importance as a manufacturing town, which, added to the work now being done by the Hoover Power Co., is sufficient evidence of the future growth of our bustling town. The local road this week made a contract for fifty tunnel cars to be shipped as speedily as the contract can be fulfilled. The car shortage is seriously felt by the B. C., G. & A. road as well as the larger roads, and cars received here are unloaded as fast as received, that they may again be put in commission. Another evidence of prosperity is in the fact that a committee consisting of Messrs Wilmot, Cook and Hall of Grand Rapids appeared before the council last Monday night and addressed them relative to putting in a gas plant. They were invited to submit a proposition in waiting for consideration of the council, which they will do at an early date.—Boyne Citizen.

TAKEN AT A DISADVANTAGE.

Professor Realized its Was Distinctly Out of His Element.

Rather than complicate the class the professor of moral philosophy was suffering from a grievous headache, had read the lesson prescribed for the morning, and was waiting to answer any questions that might be asked by the students.

"I say, professor, professor," said one of the young men, "my father is sick and is not quite sure he is sinful. Suppose that is a hypothesis, perhaps it would be more consistent to speak of it as a conclusion—in a case of mental alienation, so, we will say, a verdict of insanity, as to the abstract principles involved, what would be the correct attitude when then he meets personal opponents concerns, but really differ, endeavor to unpleasant and wholly unnecessary but more or less complicated with the personal equation? Does it not so appear to you?"

"I am not sure that I follow you," answered the professor, wiping his perspiring forehead. "Please state the proposition again. A little more slowly."

"What I want to know is this: When a process of reasoning assumes the form of a dilemma yet unmeasurably of course, but since the best authorities are members of the academic course during matters of the condition, so, shall we, the assumption that the conclusion of the official children under consideration appears upon the chart in condition of asters, thus passing the responsibility for the question directly some where in prospective indefinite and leaving the inferior free from direct use or undue stage. In our this fall is distinctly?"

"I—I promise you," faltered the professor, whose head was to a white. "This fact is paramount. I really should not have attempted to—"

"Then I resumed the young man triumphantly, that I draw up the question, that I have never yet found satisfactorily answered. What has the convenience of firms, when diversed of its multiform and greatly injured thereof discovered need, in office in a number for the remaining of the jewel or the immediate of the human soul in which the Canadians have been most unjustly accused?"

To prevent disturbing the class the professor gave himself over totally collapse.

Foreigners Stick to Cities.

The considerable period of immigration has made it apparent to the reports that the numbers and quality of the newcomers to our shores do not exhaust the problems of immigration or those which concern quick profit and entertainment in the matter of distribution. It being claimed that the now years show a disposition on the part of the immigrant to the United States Citizens of Canada, so to speak, and a special agent of the United States citizens Bureau, whom we have consular general and special statistics to show that there is a general movement among immigrants away from the cities. On the heels of the figures it appears that nearly one-half of those who have arrived within the last five years are to be found outside the cities of 25,000 and over. Even without counting the figures and statistics from the cities. CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

The guests assembled at the usual hour at 11, and had taken possession of the place prepared for them by the wedding-day. The days had passed nothing special, and to-day was fine.

"Never did a prettier bride pass through Hyde Park church than Miss Dora Dundas," remarked Mrs. Jones, who had come in a carriage with her husband to see the fun. "Her dress was so simple, and yet so elegant; and her bridesmaids looked charming in their pink muslins and straw bonnets. I wonder what Mrs. Frank Dundas thought of her son's choice, I should like to know? I hear she was not at the wedding."

"Why, of course she was," cried a young lady who was with her. "Mr. Frank Dundas was one of the ushers."

"Was he? I did not see him. I was so far off, you know, and I was looking for Mr. Dundas all the time. I thought he would be there to give his sister away. I hear he is very fond of her. Is it true that he has quarrelled with his mother?"

"I don't know, I am sure," was the answer.

"Mr. Dundas looked very well, I thought," put in a third.

"He looked as if he had been crying his eyes out," cried the first speaker. "I wonder what he thinks of his sister's marriage? I suppose he thinks it a good one, since he gave her away."

"Mr. Dundas is a very good-looking man," observed a fourth. "I wonder he has not married before now."

"He has been too busy with his profession to think of it," laughed the first speaker. "Dora tells me he is very clever."

"Dora! Why, I thought you said you did not know Miss Dora Dundas?"

"So I do not, except on exchanging a few bows. But, my dear, Dora is my cousin. Her mother and I are first cousins, and we have been intimate all our lives."

"Dora's mother! Why, I thought she was an invalid, and never came out."

"She is an invalid, and does not come out, as you put it, in society. If she was strong enough, she would be everywhere. She was a beauty in her day, and married her cousin against the wishes of her family. They married for love, and never regretted it, though they have had little else to live upon."

"Is Mr. Dundas a clever man?"

"Very clever, I hear. He is a barrister, and is sure to be a leader in his profession."

"Is he good-looking?"

"Not handsome, but very pleasant-looking. He is like his sister."

"Is he married?"

"No, he is not married. He is a very quiet, reserved man, and I fancy he has had a disappointment in his early life."

"Do you know anything about the bridegroom's family?"

"I have heard that they are very good people, but not in the world. Mr. Dundas, the father, is a clergyman, I believe, and has a living in the country."

"Is the bridegroom a clergyman, too?"

"No, he is a barrister, like his brother-in-law. I hear he is very clever, and that he will be a leader in his profession by and by."

"Is he good-looking?"

"Very good-looking, and a fine, manly fellow. I should say he is a man who would be very kind to his wife."

"Do you know anything about his family?"

"Only what I have heard. His father is a country gentleman, and they are very good people, I believe."

"Is the bridegroom's family coming to the breakfast?"

"I think not. I have heard that they are very proud people, and that they do not approve of their son's marriage with a lady who has no fortune. I suppose they think he might have married a duke's daughter if he had chosen to do so."

"Is the bride's family rich?"

"Very rich, I believe. Her father is a retired merchant, and her mother is an invalid, as I have heard you say. I think Mr. Dundas said that Mr. Jones was her guardian."

"Is that the bridegroom's sister who is talking to the clergyman? She looks very pretty."

"Yes, that is Mrs. Frank Dundas. I hear she is very fond of her brother, and that she was very much pleased at his marriage."

"Is that the bridegroom himself talking to the bridesmaid in pink? He looks very well, too. I suppose he will be a rich man by and by?"

"I fancy so. I have heard that his father is very rich, and that he is his only son."

"What a pity that he married a poor girl!"

"Why, my dear, he could not have married a richer girl than Miss Dora Dundas. Her father is a very rich man, and she will be his heiress."

"Oh, I beg your pardon! I thought you said that your cousin married against her family's wishes."

"So she married against her father's wishes, but her mother was her own cousin, and her father was her mother's first cousin. Dora's father married his own cousin."

"Is that the bridegroom's father who is talking to the clergyman? He looks a fine, manly fellow, and very like his son."

"Yes, that is the bridegroom's father. I hear that he is very much pleased with his son's marriage."

"Is that the bridegroom's mother who is talking to the bridesmaid in pink? She looks very ill."

"Yes, that is the bridegroom's mother. I hear that she is very much pleased with her son's

BRYAN ON ISSUES.

TRYING TO FIND SOMETHING SAFER THAN THE TARIFF.

Would Be Glad to Use War on Wealth and Government Ownership of Railroads as Substitutes for the Always Dangerous Advocacy of Free Trade.

Continuation of the Democratic speech in Madison, quoted in the issue of the issue of August 30 was devoted to the tariff. The other eleven-twelfths were taken up with the idea so to speak, to show that one cannot be the tariff issue as the question of free trade or the tariff as a paramount issue the Democratic party has been well by republicans, confident. This would greatly prefer some other issue. Bryan has been trying to find some, so far, however, he has succeeded in finding none preferable to the tariff. If so no issue. War is a tolerably wealth and death is preferred by one to death. Indeed rain drops the tariff through United States senate, vast ownership of other lines has been a question which which the Democratic party and congress have failed to divert attention from the tariff. The Democratic party hopelessly had tariff revision, and which the party can be called to atone for or redress a departure in the direction of economy and tariff reformation. But there are greater subjects more of vital importance among the voters of the country discussed and the Democratic Congress, Bryan, Bryan governor has thought and is thought to find consolation that there are issues more of vital importance to and will interest the participation by the national citizens.

He says there will be some issues to go back to the tariff. There are little time left to talk about the Democratic party has spoken that individual rights are more valuable combinations as aggregations accomplish and that the people can be secured without distributing property to Americans labor and industries. The Democratic congress in 1894 congress to consider the tariff question, which at least in an early date amounted to will. Bryan complained to extension scope of his starting rail between he tariffism away the support that was unauthorized his power by his search of a target he so that have no choice but to fall back on the tariff. Here he will go to Illinois glorious. Always a free trader, tariff reformer the tariff issue and always certain of a strong tariffism leaning on the subject, he can safely assert he has declared three quarters of a century ago that the tariff should be revised to raise money for the support of government and not to protect wages paying. Mr. Bryan's line of reasoning on the tariff question was distinctly marked out when by his speech at Madison dispose our view he said:

"The tariff question is very closely allied to the trust question, and the attention of the tariff reformers was given to details of limiting the exaction which the trusts have put upon consumers from trade, would not necessarily make a most important step in protection

TICK KILLS CATTLE.

TEXAS CATTLEMEN CALL FOR GOVERNMENT AID

It Is Stated that More than 15,000 Cattle Have Been Killed This Year—Officers Visit a Lynching.

The epidemic among cattle in Texas which for years has been so fatal to the cattle industry of the state is now in full force, and the cattlemen are calling for help. The cause of the disease is a tick which infests the cattle and which is said to be a native of Mexico. The tick is not much larger than a pin head, but it is said to be a determined enemy to the cattle upon which it feeds. It has come in from Mexico with the herds of cattle which are being driven into the state for shipment to the north. It has also, it is said, been carried into the state by the cattle which have been shipped in from other states for feeding and fattening on the rich grass of the Texas ranges. The disease is said to have been introduced into Texas in the spring of 1893 by cattle from Mexico, and it has spread until it is now said to be in 150 counties in the state. It has been found in Louisiana, and it is said that it has been carried into Arkansas and Indian Territory. The cattlemen have been losing cattle by the thousand, and it is said that they will be no exaggeration if it is stated that more than 15,000 head have died from the effects of the tick since the first of this year. The cattle do not seem to pine or show any signs of sickness except that they become very poor. The tick does not seem to bother the cattle in the winter time, but in the spring they become very active, and it is then that they are most numerous. The tick is said to be very hard to kill, and it is said that it will live on the hides of dead cattle for months. The cattlemen are calling for help from the government, and it is said that the matter will be brought to the attention of congress at its next session.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.

There is not a farmer or laboring man or business man in Michigan who cannot well afford to give every moment of his time on Tuesday, November 6, to earnest work in behalf of the republican ticket of his township or village or ward. If not all the day can be given some part of it should be devoted to that purpose. Don't let any doubt exist as to what the future direction of affairs in our state and country will be by reason of a light vote at the coming election.

One bit of information which Mr. Kimmerle published himself of, but which he has not yet made public, is that governor Warner does not travel on railroad passes and that his personal expenses have been less than in the case of any other governor the state has ever had. Mr. Kimmerle, if will be recalled, is the democrat candidate for governor, and probably that is why he is so making use of the above information, after securing it through one of his recent list of questions.

Tuesday is not a legitimate industry in Michigan that will not be materially assisted and made more secure in its plans for the future through a sweeping republican victory at the polls next Tuesday. It is not enough that republican candidates should be elected. That favor for the principles that are giving to our state the best days it has ever known are growing stronger rather than standing still or weakening are the matters of most importance. Not a vote should be lost that will count in that direction.

Faithful, efficient service deserves recognition and approval. Most of the candidates on the republican state ticket are now serving their first terms. Individually they have made records of which their party and the people of our state can well be proud, and unlikely they have provided an administration of state affairs never surpassed for excellence in the history of Michigan. The same measure of earnest effort to give the best possible service to their important duties by Michigan's present state officers should be returned to them through the ballot box at the coming election.

Next Tuesday, November 6, will be a day that should be kept in mind by every Michigan taxpayer and every Michigan voter. The opportunity to cast a vote that will represent an approval of present industrial conditions and an appeal for their continuance should not be neglected. If patriotism is laid aside and only the best good of our state and of every section of our state is that considered by those who take part in the coming election there will be no votes cast against the republican candidates for congress in Michigan; and the republican state ticket will receive unanimous endorsement.

Thirty thousand dollars the legislature franchise fee ever received by the state of Michigan, was paid into the state treasury last week by the Chicago & Northwestern railway. In order to answer the question which the expenditures use of this fee may present, Mr. Kimmerle, stated, it can be said that it is due to republican legislation and to vigilence on the part of republican state officials. The recent very large increase in the earnings of our state from our franchise fees and similar sources is a loss opportunity for action which Mr. Kimmerle has not cared to make, one of. But most of the voters of Michigan know of it and in their votes next Tuesday will show that they appreciate and approve it.

Many voters of Michigan who opposed at the heavy, straightforward course of President Roosevelt in the handling of public affairs can give emphatic expression in that regard at next Tuesday's election. Let the court and weal and all the times for Hughes, because I know and feel that he stands for precisely the same principles that I stand for." That was President Roosevelt's message to the republicans of New York. The republicans of Michigan and the republicans generally of this state stand for precisely the same principles that President Roosevelt has fought and defended. Today and tomorrow, opportunity to send a great big of approval to President Roosevelt next Tuesday through the east ing of a straight ticket.

The ladies Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Cartier on state St. Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 Nov. 7th.

The County Sunday School convention which was held in the Congregational church last week was of a very interesting character though the attendance from outside delegates was small. Delegates were present from East Jordan, Boyne City, Petoskey and Harbor Springs. H. D. Allen, the state treasurer, from Detroit, was present and gave several helpful addresses.

Hon. Mr. Milliken, the state great dent, gave an address Thursday evening. Miss Blanche Hibertson, the talented soloist from East Jordan sang several numbers to the great delight of the audiences. Of equal interest was the reading by Miss Louise E. Bowdler, of the state place. Rev. C. L. Berry was elected president and Mrs. M. S. Heaton was elected secretary.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1903 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Tacker, of Allgauer, Ky., as a year of blood, which flowed as copiously from Mr. Tacker's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "severe bleeding from the lungs and a terrible cough had brought me to death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and my time has proven permanently cured." The Minister's Wife

By MRS. HENRY WOOD

After ten days I discovered about the two rooms which opened to each other. One of the girls sat down to the piano, the others gathered round it. Sir Everard strolled toward the other room. Mary sat, on a sofa, apparently lost in thought, and Charles Bumpastor stood musing near the chandelier, with an open book held toward him by one hand.

It has been a long separation, Mary," he said, in a low voice.

"Yes, it has been long," she replied. "It should more decisively be longer. Indeed, I do not mean to do anything or to utter anything but when you come (unless I should be married) I could not marry you. Let me tell you all," she continued, gathering some courage as she saw Sir Everard approaching, "I have gone off lately in a manner that I should not have done if I had not felt very, very happy. I feel happy now, and I shall be happy for years to come, if I may be allowed to do so. I have a prospect of being married, and I am happy in the prospect. I love the man I shall marry very dearly, and he loves me. I ought to have told you this before, but I was so happy that I forgot it. I ought to have told you that I shall be married in a few months, and I ought to have told you that I love the man I shall marry very dearly, and he loves me. I ought to have told you this before, but I was so happy that I forgot it.

HIS NATURE REVOLTS AT HUMAN SELFISHNESS.

He Would Have People Stop Voting for a Party Ticket Just Because It Helps Business and Makes Everybody Prosperous and Happy.

Mr. Bryan is scandalized at the idea that men should vote to back up a protective tariff from motives of gain to enrich the coffers of gold. Democratic logic is to become their voters come prosperous and are rewarded by federal funds.

"Our search is to become their friend of what is kept wages under protection that under free trade.

Business is to become prosperous under free trade because they can sell more to sell less a protective tariff because they can sell more under free trade.

Merchants is to become their customers and save to sell less a protective tariff because they can sell more under free trade.

Manufacturers is to become their customers and save to sell less a protective tariff because they can sell more under free trade.

STUDENTS TIED TO TRACKS

Kansas Cutting Methods Are Imitated by High School Boys.

The school authorities of Kansas City are trying to find out who tied the girls to the railroad tracks in East Linwood Wednesday afternoon. The girls, Lucy Wooten and Ethel Wooten, were tied to the rails in a place where a train must slow up to pass a street crossing. The girls were found by a passer-by and released after a time by being untied. The girls said that some boys came up and tied them to the rails. The girls said that some boys had used the same methods in a game they had played with other girls. The girls said that some boys had used the same methods in a game they had played with other girls. NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Recent information received from Sawtelle, California, is to the effect that Clark B. Stocking, who was one of the first settlers at Elk Rapids, and will be remembered by some of our very oldest residents, has just struck it rich in the far west. Stocking and a comrade, inmates of the soldiers' home at Sawtelle, secured a furlough from the home a few months ago and made a trip to some abandoned mines in New Mexico, but they were unable to work them on account of rotten timbering. However, they discovered a mine which they named "old soldier," and took out about forty tons of ore which proved very valuable. The value of the mine is placed at better than $20,000.

Elk Rapids Progress: John Walsche, better know by his English name, John White, one of the oldest Indians in this section, died Friday night at the home of his son at Pressoy's camp. Walsche was born in this portion of Michigan and always lived there. For more than a century he breathed the air of the bay, and during its vigorous manhood fished in its waters and hunted along its shores. He was 104 years and two months old, and during the past twenty years of his life was totally blind. He was from three to four years older than Nasko who is yet hale and vigorous. The funeral was held at the Indian church at Kewadin Sunday, conducted by Rev. Isaac, and the interment made in the cemetery near by.

Elk Rapids Progress: F. O. Olsson of New York was registered at the Lake View Monday, remaining until Tuesday evening, when he left for parts further north. Mr. Olsson represents the parties who are promoting the contemplated electric line from Manistee to Charlevoix passing through Traverse City, this place, Charlevoix, Petoskey and having its terminus at the straits. He is confident of its construction and set quite a number of our people. He states the necessary capital is provided for and that the project will be financed by the Cleveland Trust Company. He has been interested in the construction of several of the lines built in Ohio and other sections, and those who have looked up his record claim he is a man "who does things." The first of the week his surveyors were at work near Acme, and are expected to reach here to-morrow or Saturday. It is expected the road will absorb the M. & N. E., already constructed from Manistee to Traverse City, and will operate that line for a time as a steam road. A dam will be built across the Manistee river near Sherman for power and other streams along the line of the road will be utilized. From Traverse City a line will be constructed up the peninsula to Old Mission and the main line will follow the shore to this place and then north through Kewadin to Ellsport where a branch will run down the east side of the chain of lakes through Central Lake, Bellaire, Alden and around the south end of Torch Lake, crossing Torch river near the bridge, through South Milton to Kewadin, where it will strike the main line. It is contemplated to absorb and utilize several of the short lines now owned by lumber companies and use them as branches, and eventually build a line from Gaylord to Alpena. The plan is one of great magnitude and looks well, but to day in the southern Michigan are many steam and electric lines that have gone much further, in some instances ending long since, and we recall one where the ties were laid and bridges constructed that never reached completion. However, in this case, if the claims made are true, the capital is provided for, and that should insure its construction.

Made Happy for Life.

Great happiness came into the home of S. G. Hall, school superintendent, at St. Albans, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he name. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say, three bottles effected a complete cure. Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weakness, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c.

Origin of Word "Cantion."

A strange etymological history is that possessed by the word "caution"—which has caused so much talk in companies and some circles—if its origin is correctly assigned to the mid Latin "cautionare," which literally means "of the fifth point of a ship's order." The "cautionna (ship)" was a corset in the Roman navy so called because it came between the fifth manlin, or complement, and the sixth. Here all the business and marketing of the navy was done and "cautions" eventually came to mean a market.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Congregational Church.

The Union Evangelistic services will commence next Sunday morning in the Congregational church. The evangelist, Rev. E. E. Davidson, will arrive in Charlevoix Saturday afternoon and remain with the churches three weeks. Though a large part of his work has been in the east he has conducted several successful revivals in this state. His recent work in Northville and in Detroit was of a very high order. Mr. Davidson is quiet in manner, absolutely free from sensationalism and presents thoughtful addresses. He will speak Sunday morning and every evening and afternoon next week except Saturday. Everybody is invited to all the services.

The annual business meeting of the church was held on Monday evening. A goodly number of the members were present. The reports showed great advance along financial lines. About $225 had been raised during the year. All bills were paid and a neat sum left in the treasury.

The newly elected officers were, Clerk, Harley Kirby; trustee, E. M. Clark; deacon, W. D. Jacobs; S. S. Supt. W. D. Jacobs. After the business session refreshments were served and a genuinely good time actually enjoyed. We enter upon the new year greatly encouraged.

Evangelist D. A. Shanton will be with us church in January in special meetings. He is very successful evangelist, having met over 300 conversions in a meeting at the one last winter. Much interest is already manifest in these meetings a great preparations will be made for them.

Episcopal Church.

Episcopal Services will be held in Christ Church on Monday evening, November 12th, by Her. Charles T. Stout.

This will be his farewell service in Charlevoix, and he has accepted a call to St. Paul's church at Key West, Florida.

All are cordially invited to attend his closing service.

Methodist Church.

Sunday services at Methodist church.

County Normal.

The Normal Class had the first meeting of their Lyceum the last week, on Hallowe'en. The program consisted of a song by the class, a reading by Bessie Straw, dialogue by Bessie Straw and Lula Crites, a recitation by Ethel Caine, an original dialogue by Anna Ingalls and Lula Crites, and a song by the class. A short recess was then enjoyed during which ghosts appeared, (they however were captured) and all enjoyed the fun of bobbing for apples, the ghosts included. The president then called the class to order and election of officers ensued. A constitution was spoken of and a committee appointed to frame one.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week the class visited the Training School and saw their Hallowe'en games. The children had a potato race, told conundrums, and had an "apple bobbing" contest. The window shades were lowered and Jack-o' lanterns were placed around the room. A very good time was enjoyed by all.

Thursday afternoon, November first, the Normal Class went to the Opera House for the purpose of hearing Lorenzo Warner. The address was very much enjoyed by the class for the reason that Gov. Warner spoke of the different educational institutions of the state in a very interesting manner. He proved that many more children are now being lifted to a higher plane in life than ever before in the history of Michigan. Consequently much more money is expended in the maintenance of the schools. Some of the members of the class are now taking much more interest in the politics of the state than they were ever known to do before.

Bessie Straw has begun this week by teaching in Miss Cook's room. A new teacher was expected, but she did not come in time to begin school on Monday morning.

YES, THE DRAWER OPENED.

Jones Knew It, But Explanations Were Not in Order.

Jones was going away. And, as usual in such cases, it was up to Jones to put on a clean collar and shirt, and, incidentally, catch a train. He had no time to enter.

"Maria," he shouted downstairs, "where are my things?"

"In your bureau drawer, of course" floated up from the basement.

Jones flew towards the drawer. Stuck of course. (They always do stick when you are in a hurry.) He pulled and tugged and said things—sometimes doubtful, with a perversity for which bureau drawers are noted, it flew open with a rush, and Jones, with a death grip on the handles, shot clear across the room. The drawer persisted in going through the door for Jones could, and did, landing at the foot of the stairs with a crash that jarred things mightily, just in time to lose the pastor of his church job.

"Yes you set it open, Maria?"

That was adding insult to injury, and Maria stalked upstairs with fire in her eye, and said every a word.

TEST FOR SPURIOUS COINS.

Simple Method Disclosed by a Jury During a Trial.

At this session of the central criminal court there has been an energetic crusade of the Chinese in selling and uttering counterfeit coins, says the London Tribune. As the authorities on one of the cases the foreman of the jury asked the demonstration of counterfeits be adjourned from 12 noon to 2 o'clock, when it was found he had met with considerable success in all ver cois.

There was a most amusing test for the detection of bad coins. It was to cut the gilded edge of a good coin shortly beside the gilded edge of the suspected coin. If the suspected coin were a spurious one the metal would almost immediately begin to shave off. It was, he added, a test that could be carried out anywhere, on the top of a car or in a shop, and the public could so be acquainted with it.

After making a personal test the common sense of said he quite agreed with the opinion of the jury as to the sent-sense of the test and said it ought to be made known.

Local News.

—Crane's new ad this week should be read.

—Mrs J. W. Hastie returned from Winnepeg Tuesday.

—F. N. Chapel & Co., have a holiday ad in this issue that will interest you.

—Prosecutor elect Clink, of East Jordan, was in town Tuesday, receiving the congratulations of his friends.

—Capt. Bert Partridge goes north with his rifle next week, but not after deer. The Captain is going to the wolf country and expects to get a few pelts and the $25 per head.

—The Congregational church adjoining this week bought the Cole residence, on the North side, for a parsonage. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Pottain, is now occupying the house on a lease. The property is a very desirable one.

—Read Fletcher's new ad in this issue.

—Judge Mayne went to Grand Rapids Tuesday on business.

E. T. Osborn, this fall, leased the Hotel Frontenac, at Frankfort, for ten years.

F. E. Turrell is in Grand Rapids this week attending the Scottish Rite convention.

—The steamer Columbia, of the Traverse Bay Line, arrived here Saturday and laid up.

—R. F. Foley and wife left Monday for Florida. Before leaving he secured another ten year lease of the Belvedere Hotel.

—Leon Miller, of this place, who is an Ann Arbor student, on Saturday won first prize in the second annual hashbody of the University Cross Country Club.

—The East Jordan boats Hum and Gordon made their last trips Monday and laid up. This was unknown for by the public, as boats have run on that route until the ice prevented. But the captains say there are no potatoes moving and they cannot pay expenses.

—The Charlevoix Theater management were fortunate in securing the Mack-Leone Stock Co. This company stands high in the dramatic world. At Petoskey, where they have played several engagements they are favorites. To-night "When We Were Twenty one."

—The Grand Rapids party of manufacturers, bankers and wholesalers came Thursday, and were in town considerably longer than the scheduled sixty minutes. They were taken charge of by board of commerce members and shown everything of interest. All expressed themselves highly pleased with their visit.

—At the close of the Episcopal services Monday evening Rev. C. T. Stout was given a reception at the home of Mrs Harrison Bedford. A large number of people of all denominations came to pay their respects to the popular clergyman who is about to change his field of work. Light refreshments were served.

—The local lodge K. of P. have an excellent case rehearsing on a production of that famous play, "The Crisis", and the same will take place on Thanksgiving night. The play is under the personal direction of Mr. Will H. Griffin, who has met with wonderful success in some of our surrounding towns, and we will not believe but Mr. Griffin cannot find talent here that is equal to that of any town the size of Charlevoix. The play is one of the finest ever written, and the people of Charlevoix will no doubt be glad of an opportunity to witness it. Every member of the cast means to succeed and are working with a will that can only produce success.

—Saginaw special. Special trains on the Grand Trunk, Michigan Central and Pere Marquette, besides the regular trains and wagons and buggies brought between 2,000 and 3,000 farmers of Saginaw county this morning as the guests of the Saginaw Valley Sugar Co. at Carollton to celebrate the "bonuses" beet crop. The big warehouse is filled up with a temporary stage for speakers and musicians. Congressman Fordney, "Sugar Beet Joe" is orator of the day. The visitor will go through the factory, which will be in full operation, so that the farmers may see every stage of the process of sugar making. When the season is finished and the farmers are paid for their beets, they will have pocketed nearly a half million dollars, 75 per cent of which is clear profit. The company, for its part, will manufacture ninety thousand tons of sugar and this means larger dividends than ever before.

—This is one of the few years that potatoes are the joy of the farmer's heart. There is practically no market and no buyers in the field, except for local use. This demand only pays 25 cents per bushel. The situation conveys a lesson to the farmer. The SENTINEL has always advocated continuous and persistent potato raising on the argument that the average, one year with another, made it a fairly profitable crop. We still believe that there are dollars in potatoes, but experience bits and observation elsewhere has taught us that no crop carries with it such a certainty of steady and certain remuneration as the sugar beet. We have an unmistakable demonstration of that fact this fall. Under most unfavorable conditions, and a shortage of nearly all other crops, the sugar beet has done fairly well. It is a crop which has a certain market, and a price that is as fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Moral—Raise beets.

—The Argo Milling Co. has a new ad. this week.

—That famous play, "The Crisis," Thanksgiving night.

—G. H. Bellinger, the pioneer jeweler, has new ad in this issue.

—When We Were Twenty-one, at the Charlevoix Theater to-night.

—Representative Stroud, of Hortons Bay, was here Monday, looking cheerful.

—Judge Aldrich, of Detroit, president of the Standard Portland Cement Co., was in town Monday and Tuesday.

—Clash Hiffenberg representative of Grimm Bros., recently placed a fine Steinert piano at the home of Mrs. A. E. Mason.

—The steamer Falcon, due now with a cargo of ore for Hayes City, is her last trip. She will take take a cargo of pig iron to Cleveland and lay up.

—It came out in the wash that Johnny Wright, the "humorist," was not selected to the legislature from Emmet, after all. The final returns played a joke on Johnny.

—The Mack-Leone Stock Co. at the Charlevoix Theater tonight, Friday and Saturday nights. This is one of the very best stock companies on the road. "When We were Twenty-One," tonight.

—Mack Leone Co. at Charlevoix Theatre, tonight. "When We Were Twenty one." Nat Goodwin great role; Friday night, "The Little Minister." Saturday night, "The Girl With the Green eyes,"—a roarer.

—Olaf Nordrum the booth Co. manager for this section, will leave next week for Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, to look after the Booth interests in the extensive cant fishing of that region. He will be gone all winter.

—The Union meetings which began in the Congregational church Sunday evening are growing in interest. The church has been well filled at each service and the people are much interested in the sermons of Evangelist Davidson. He is preaching plain, practical, thoughtful sermons and the outlook for a general awakening is promising. The Evangelist and churches ask for the hearty concern of the people of the city. Let us plan to be present at each service and invite our friends. Services every afternoon at 4 o'clock and in the p. m. at 7:30.

THE SUGAR FACTORY.

The Plant in Operation and Beets Still Rolling in.

The sugar factory is handicapped by a week of interruptions incident to the use of new machinery and the appearance of various imperfections that had not been discovered. But all these things will be successfully overcome, and the campaign may be considered well under way.

General manager Hubbard is enthusiastic over the farmers end of the enterprise. Beets have been coming in splendidly and the tests show up well. Another favorable feature is the fact that the farmers are feeling good. They have passed the line of uncertainty, and have learned the value of the factory to the section.

Mr. Hubbard, with considerable glee, reports the first application for an 1907 contract. Mr. Shaw, of Petoskey, would probably raise five acres of beets, and hauled them over miles to the factory. Monday he applied for a contract for next year.

This is taken as a sure indication of good crop prospects, and the company will make the most of it. The theory that "nothing never strikes twice in the same place," augurs a more favorable season than last, and it is confidently expected that the beet acreage will be doubled.

That Tower Business.

Two young gentlemen of the high school class of '99—Frank Campbell and Lee Sargent—made strong and very objection to the wording of an article last week regarding the outcome of the tower painting adventure.

The young gentlemen walked up and paid the bill, we said. This they claim, leaves the public to infer that they were the artists, inasmuch as they paid the bill. The two young men claim that they did no do it, and with the class loyalty and camaraderie that does them credit, they decline to say who did. They merely acted for the class in paying the bill.

The writer of this put the among men on the grid, to test their mettle, and cannot speak too highly of the spirit displayed by them.

So the tower painting prank is a closed incident. After all it was not so bad—as to lift ten pails of paint and swab and dump it in the river.

—Mrs. Nettleton will have an exhibit of oil and water color paintings and drawings for illustration on Friday and Saturday, November 16th and 17th, ten to five o'clock at her residence on Prospect st. near Clinton street. All interested are invited to inspect her work.

—Nine fogs are spawn fishing at St James, and the daily catch of trout is about twenty tive tons. Both the Beaver and Minnesota were compelled to make special trips Saturday, and the Commissioner went again Monday—both bringing full loads. Spawn is going in the Northville hatchery by about every train.

—Hon. John Nicholls and wife arrived home from their foreign trip last Saturday both in very good health. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls chose to return home via Scotland, and this afforded them an opportunity to visit Edinburgh and Glasgow. They spent some time in both cities, very much to their pleasure. They sailed from Glasgow for New York, and met a comfortable trip.

—Petoskey News sept. 14th: Last night was the record breaker in the way of attendance at the opera house in this city. Manager Lee and his predecessor, Mr. Hopkins, admit that never during their connection with the house has there been so lusty plaudit administered by city as on this occasion which is evidence enough of the popularity of the Mack Leone Company who are playing a return date for the week. The bill offered last night was "The Girl With the Green Eyes," and if there was a person in the house who was not pleased with the production and who did not lustily heartily, he must be in a peculiar state of a mind. Mr. Mack and Miss Taylor took the principal roles, and both stars were admirably supported.

DEATH OF JOSEPH CLARK.

One of the Early Homesteaders Passes Away at His Motion Home.

Joseph Clark Sr., died at his home in Marion early last Monday morning. In the death of Mr. Clark there passes from one of the earliest of the settlers of Charlevoix county—one of that class of sturdy "homesteaders" who hewed their homes in the forest in the days that tried men's souls.

Joseph Clark was born on the banks of the Shannon, near Limerick, Ireland, March 1st, 1824. He grew to manhood in that vicinity, and entered the Irish constabulary force at the age of 17.

At the age of twenty five he was married to Eliza Keane, near Fippenny. Then first child, William E. was born there. When about twenty six he came, with his family to Canada, and settled in the county of Wellington, where all remaining children were born.

In 1864 he came north and settled on the homestead in Marion, where he died. We have heard him relate that, on his landing here on the Manistee he found there was no bridge across Pine River, and he drove his cheap across the river on a plank at about the location of the present bridge. Only pioneers of his class know what it meant to build a home and raise a family under conditions that prevailed here at that early day but Mr. Clark was of large mould, strong and self-reliant in stature and in character as he was and the late Marion family is evidence of a grand life well lived.

Joseph Clark was a man of fixed and intense devotion to those whom he loved, and loyal to a degree to his whom he chose as friends. These qualities were fully matched by an integrity that never lapsed, and a devotion to principle that was as firm as the strong right hand. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and died strong in the Christian faith.

Besides a wife he leaves five sons and three daughters—Wm. E., Calif. Joseph, of Sept. Ste. Marie; Joseph, of Northport; Anthony H., of Marion; Rev. Adam Clark, of Eaton Rapids; Mrs. Robert Ferguson, of Marion; Mrs. Chas. Trumble, and Mrs. Alex. Mcdonald.

The funeral from the Barnard church Friday morning under the auspices of Charlevoix Lodge No. 77 F. & A. M. of which he was an honored member.

Death of A. J. McLeod

Alexander J. McLeod died at his home in Detroit Tuesday morning at an advanced age, after a long illness.

Deceased was a pioneer of Charlevoix having come here from Port Huron in the early 70s. For some time he ran a boarding house in the old Antoine building on the north side, long since destroyed by fire. For many years he kept a meat market on the stand now occupied by Tunner & Co.

For a good many years he was a prominent and active sheriff. He was born in Scotland, coming to Canada when a boy.

The remains arrived here today for interment.

Primary School Fund.

The apportionment of primary school money gives Charlevoix county $20,000. Charlevoix township will receive $7,000.

This, with the one dollar opportion of last spring, gives us $12 per capita.

Dancing School.

On Saturday evening instead of 7:30 as heretofore, beginning the 17th. Class hours 7:30 to 9. Assembly 9 to 12. New members joining at any time. Class 8 o'clock sharp. Prof. P. H. Close.

—The tug J. H. Martin lies at the south side of the harbor mostly under water. On Saturday her stern was being hauled out to tighten a seam leaking, when she slipped from the ways and rolled turtle. She lies with her bow under the top of her pilot house above water. Arrangements are being made to raise her.

The Minister's Wife

CHAPTER XVII.

On the following day Sir Edward called at Sutton place. He saw Mary, and they went straight to Mr. Hungerford's, after shaking hands he quickly said that Differendas had arrived yesterday evening, and Miss Mary, and they was unanimously agreed to part.

"Never, perhaps, was a union so so troubled, never do I remember to have regretted, and never was one so a greater pleasure, thanks to Differendas."

"What was the cause?" he demanded.

"The premier was to be and Miss Mary Differendas had agreed to keep it whole secret," was the answer of the figure.

"It was without to say that there was been fully engagement to marriage between them would be business in their longer form, and they had come to the conclusion was not to carry it out."

"I will leave the cruel, damned disease," exclaimed Sir Edward.

"Differendas," guessed Mary, who had taken her leave from Sir Edward, "tell me that I was premeditate engaged. We found that it was better for us that we not tied in bondage and are parted."

"Differendas," said Sir Edward, "for bringing down his official chair upon the owner."

"That is all I have to say," she answered, "and I am sorry."

"Very well," noted the figure, as he quitted the room. "I have done my duty to you, Miss Mary. Differendas and the gates are opened to receive you. Go, go, go, and leave me to my solitude in the dark! Leave me to my sorrow! Leave me to my fate!

The Minister's Wife

By MRS. HENRY WOOD

CHAPTER XVII.

On the Polishing lay the Forward off at Hurne place. He saw Mary, and they went straight to his Honour's Pew, after shaking hands, he quietly said that differences had been amicably settled, and Miss Mary, and they had seated themselves in peace.

Never, perhaps was a chorus so so triumphal, so full of joy, so full of rapture, and never was one in a greater paroxysm, though the excitement was

"What was the matter?" he demanded. "The person on the Hill Top Farm Dynevor had agreed to sell to their advantage, and has promised for parsonage."

"It was sufficient to say that they were such fools as to make a row about nothing," Mary said, smoothing the ribbons of her cap, and they went on to the outside seat, and they said they were so sorry they had spoken to you."

"I will know the reason," thundered the curate. "Why, do they?"

"Furthermore," ignored Mary, who, for the life of her, could not see the propriety of telling the Curate the reason, "Charles Hemmingway, who has been lurking down his chimney for some time, and heard every word, has promised to pay the damages, and he and Mary, and they had seated."

"Why, Charles Hemmingway, who has been lurking down his chimney for some time, and heard every word, has promised to pay the damages, and he and Mary, and they had seated."

EFFECT ON FINANCE

TRADE BALANCES MATTERS OF REAL CONCERN.

An Annual Excess of Exports Over Imports Averaging More Than Half a Billion Dollars Means Much to the Financial Strength of the United States.

The influence of a protective tariff upon national finances is rarely recognized by financial writers. It is often recognized by them, without it, statesmen realize the importance of favorable trade balances, but apparently give little or no thought as to their cause. Bankers are not as a rule economists. They appreciate, for example, the enormous value of credit balances in our international trade, averaging $500,000,000 a year in the past nine years of prosperity, but they are apt to overlook the fact that it is only through adequate protection that such balances are possible, that because of protection these balances must be paid in cash or cash credits instead of being met by exports of commodities.

Free traders have a purpose in concealing or limiting the part which protection plays in our national finance. They seldom can be induced to mention a favorable trade balance at all, and when they do it is generally to claim that trade balances are of little consequence one way or the other. But it would seem that the men who think finance their life work and their ingenuity ought all of them to be staunch protectionists, and that no banker could by any possibility be a free trader. Bearing upon this point the following from a financial review in the New York Evening Post of recent date is of interest:

"With our bankers using their influence on the side of protection this year, and one in above narration is one current, certainly the strongest of the foreign trade balance is a matter of real concern. Last Monday we reviewed the August statement. It is more remarkable than July's. The export balance runs beyond that of August in any year since 1901. The month is distinct too through the fact that imports—those entered by customs—fell to $100,000,000 and August, on two bases, by a still greater rate in export trade. The question then is not, can we rely on continuance of this movement? Apparently, with our great crops and the active demand for all non-perishables abroad we can. Our international bankers have stated much on that point.

It is something unusual to be told by the Financial Post that "the control of the foreign trade balance is a matter of real concern." It was never otherwise than a matter of the greatest concern to the finances of a country which, outside of the transition from debtor to creditor nationhood, has $100,000,000 in short maturities, has annual fixed charges to meet abroad of $100,000,000, has to pay interest and dividends on foreign investments in the United States, has the foreign charges for both ocean and rail commerce going and coming almost equal always by American steamers and means sent abroad to unfortunate citizens to bring relatives home. With these annual fixed charges there was need of our average of $500,000,000 excess of exports over imports. If that excess should fall, say, below $400,000,000 we would fall into debt to foreigners. This would indeed be a matter of real concern when piled on top of the $100,000,000 of so-called 'short maturities' which must be taken care of.

We find that for the 12 months ending with August we sent of our goods to foreigners $1,769,417,000, and freight foreign carriers collected in addition $364,799,000, leaving a balance in our favor of $405,878,165. It may be recalled, by the way, that the total of our foreign trade for the 12 months, exclusive of our dealings with Canada, Mexico and the Philippines, about $3,000,000,000. Of the balance there do we have that balance, of $405,878,165 coming our way. We confess—wonder if the American bankers who must take care of the transaction or most of it, ever stop to or ever ask themselves this question. The wonder if any of them ever think we should have these $400,000,000 annual trade balances coming our way with a tariff revised downward for the purpose of promoting foreign competition, with a tariff for revenue only or with no tariff at all? We wonder if any of the numerous visitors to Europe ever in the course consequent of favorable trade balances, ponder the subject of the protective policy of restricting its use.

Crushed Again.

The fanatic rhetoric and reckless assertion predictive of the Hon. Eugene V. Debs do not seem to have appealed strongly to the Republican voters of Massachusetts. He has been badly crushed under all the attributes in the contest for nomination as candidate for the Democratic governorship, and the honor and compliment of a renomination have been bestowed upon the present incumbent, Mr. Hugh Bonner, a business man who has the good sense to realize that prosperity is a broad national policy which cannot be maintained to the advantage of special interests or interests. It would seem to be full time that Mr. Debs changed his tune. No one has expected intimations that his devotion to land reform and reciprocity is not appreciated by the Republican voters of Massachusetts. He should do better in the Democratic party. He could not easily fare worse.

Eccentricities of Wealth.

There is a wealthy man in New York who collects scraps of paper from the mails thrown upon which he writes letters to his friends; and fully as curious is the Boston merchant who refuses to spend money for new stamps, using wrapping twine instead.—The Sunday Magazine.

REV. E. E. DAVIDSON, Evangelist.

GARDNER'S ABSURDITY.

No Call for Tariff Revision.

SWIM OUT! YOU'RE OVER YOUR HEAD!

Like the Dog Who Dropped the Real Bone for the One in the Water.

Mr. Gardner is in favor of two changes in the Dingley law according to his statement. He wants free hides and lumber. Of course these two things cater to world tastes, as it is Mr. Gardner's opinion, and which is about as largely engaged in the making of boots and shoes as any state of Iowa is in raising cotton, flax and cattle. The dabbled politician Mr. Gardner's constituents have lately learn hides and shoes are exceedingly protected by the Dingley law. There is common with all manufacturers taken from dozen times than the one did before, but this age and age of the with their war appropriations of the benefits of protection. Wool comes. This wool has taken just two more hundred million words from our material. They want this tax or duty done away with, and shoddy made in the country, but to lessen their own profits. The richness of the country is the result of the tariff. The tariff value has lost sight of the fact that the tariff is not the only factor in the prosperity arising this time, and also underestimates what the tariff has done in protection on their finished products. But Congressman Gardner apparently want to support those protectionists who want to export their goods to market, therefore, and as a representative venue out for sure a simple change in the tariff taken out, free hides and free sole leather. The rest is unnecessary to be heard. The claim of the dabbler of Iowa is flag at certain other statements that we quote below. The Republican party of some other throughout is consistently for the protection of the industries that the can protection is the salvation of all industries and prosperity.

The Gardner interview shows to the world that Iowa is a free trade state. Free trade in hides and leather underlies certain at the present time. Free trade in Dingley law Gardner is one want to widen. In these two commodities free trade is the cry of the Democratic party and others. There are some commodities which are not protected by the Dingley law, which are free, and of which we import largely. They would be protected if the Democratic party could have its way. Free trade in Dingley law Gardner is one want to widen. These

CAUGHT BY FINGER PRINT.

British Murderer Betrayed Through New System of Identification.

A curious result of the recent adoption of the system of identification by finger prints by the United States Army is the discovery of a divine murderer in the person of a soldier at Fort Leavenworth. The man was a prisoner in the United States penitentiary, serving a five-year sentence for a military crime. In prison he was well behaved, but when the man died, following the general order to take finger print records of soldiers, attempted to obtain an impression of the man's digits he met with various resistance and the assistant who tried to make the record was knocked down. Suspecting that this resistance and based upon the man's refusal to take the prints of his finger prints might be not the wooden soldier either of the man in the police authorities in a number of cities. In a short time Scotland Yard proved that the man had committed an attempt murder in Metz, that he had been sentenced to life imprisonment and that he had escaped to America.

THE expectations which have existed that the government ownership of railroads would be one of the most discussed issue of the next political campaign should not give any fear to the opponents of that proposition. Government ownership of railroads is not a mere theory. It has been experimented with and the experiments have proven that its assumed advantage did not exist. It did not provide lower fare or better service or prove to be a source of profit. It did create huge public debts, bring into existence an army of additional office holders, and add to the public service duties and responsibilities which trading and private enterprise could better direct. If all the facts connected with the proposed government management of railroads are properly set forth, as they can be and as they will be, there need be no fear as to the judgment and action of the people concerning it.

FROM a recent review of conditions in England directly affecting the wages and expense of workingmen, it is shown that a larger proportion of the income of the English workingman is required to provide for himself and family the actual necessities of life than is true in the case of the American workingman. It has been persistently claimed by those who are seeking to bring about some radical changes in our tariff law, that American higher wages are offset by English lower prices. Data by item comparison prove this claim to be very far from the truth. In almost every family of average size in England the work of the mother and children in addition to the constant work of the husband and father are required to meet the daily demands of life. It is not an argument of weight or worth or truth against protection that the higher wages of the American workingmen are overcome by the lower prices of England.

Now that the elections of 1906 are over and the possession of another republican congress is assured, all necessary time and attention can be given to the opposition to a protective tariff, based upon the charges that American manufacturers sell their products abroad cheaper than they do to home markets. This charge was persistently made throughout the recent campaign. It is true only as to a very small percentage of American made goods, less than three per cent of our importations. And to the extent that it is true it is an incident of trade not due to protection. English, French and German manufacturers were leaders in pushing the same of their surplusage in certain lines through reduction from their prices. In fact the manufacturers of the United States took longer to their highest home prices than the exporters of any other nation, in spite of the fact that foreign competition is everywhere directed against American productions.

IT is due to the interest of a large and important section of Michigan, if not to the individuals involved, that the recent sensational statements made with reference to the alleged wrongs committed through the purchase of state tax lands, should not be dismissed or permitted to rest as a campaign incident, to be made use of in some future political emergency if desired. There are many thousand acres of unoccupied lands in the northern counties of our state, now in possession of the state, which must be sold if that section is ever to reach its best development. The purchase of this land should be urged and encouraged in behalf of the entire state and all its people, rather than regarded with suspicion and exploited as an offense. The exigencies of political campaigns may sometimes suggest unworthy requirements, but they should not lead to that sort of sensationalism which disregards every consideration of fairness and makes no pretense of political misrepresentation the permanent interests of an important section of the state.

Concerning Mr. Olsen.

The Traverse City papers say that Mr. Olsen has returned there, and proposes to continue his electric railway promoting business as soon as he can pull himself together

Our private opinion is that Mr. Olsen has outlived his usefulness as a promoter in this particular neck of the woods. His branches are not calculated to inspire confidence in the enterprise.

Mr. Olsen talks overmuch, and his talk does not square with the truth. Then again, no man who permits both his business and personal checks to be protested can expect people to fall over each other to aid his project.

We want the electric railroad, and we want it badly, and will do our share to secure it, but we want something beside wind and protested checks to convince us that the present project is reliable.

When here Mr. Olsen told several of our leading citizens that he had an option for the purchase or absorption of the B. C. C. & A. R. R. and two other northern Michigan railroads. We have taken pains to investigate this statement and have it direct from the officials of the Boyne City road that they turned down Mr. Olsen cold. We have no doubt the same is true of the other roads.

If a responsible syndicate is behind the proposition, which we very much doubt, it should make Mr. Olsen walk the plank.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Mr. Eddy, deputy game warden, is here, to see that fishermen observe the law.

Two schooners are loading Christmas trees here for the Chicago market.

The tug Alice C. Capt. Coffee, of Manistique, was in the harbor one day last week.

Mr. Chas. Novak, of Pee Wee cigar fame, called on his customers here this week.

Quite a large party left here a few days ago for the upper peninsula, to act as targets for deer hunters.

Pete O. Gallagher and Robert Gibson are again seen on our streets after a long tussle with typhoid.

We do not need any alarm clock to arouse us from our slumbers nowadays. The whistling of the tugs at an early hour is sufficient.

The fishing tugs are making some large catches of fish and in consequence of which the "Heaver" is compelled to make daily trips.

Capt. "Mike" Finzelmann, of Escanaba, was here for a few days visiting friends. It is twenty odd years since Mr. Finzelmann visited the island.

The electric dynamo that the Lumber Co. have had installed in their plant, is now in full operation which by night makes the north end of the village take on the aspect of a city.

Died at his residence early Sunday morning after a long illness Lamy McCafferty. A few years ago Mr. McCafferty contracted hip disease, and although he has undergone several operations has never gotten entirely well. Mr. McCafferty leaves a wife, several relatives and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

Made Happy for Life.

Great happiness came into the home of S. G. Hunt, school superintendent, at St. Albans, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say, three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weaknesses, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1905 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Parker, of Allegrete, Ky., as a year of blood; which flowed so copiously from Mr. Parker's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: Severe bleeding from the lungs and a frightful cough had brought me at death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and for three years enjoyed perfect health. I can recommend Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds, at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Local News.

—Read Frazier's new at this week.

—The steamer Pine Lake laid up in Chicago Monday.

—County Clerk Lewis will move his family here from Wilson township next week.

—The new postoffice fixtures have been shipped from the factory, and are expected here this week.

—And now for the rigors of winter! Look up your chimney flues, stove pipes and stoves. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

—Dr. Frank Wilkinson and wife arrived from Gladstone Saturday, and to remain. The Doctor is settled in his dental rooms in Bartholomew block.

—The schooner Rouse Simmons, Capt. M. J. Bonner, arrived from Milwaukee Monday with 8000 bushels of grain for the Argo Mills. She will take lumber to Chicago and lay up there.

—Shawley's bazaar has a new ad in this issue.

—Banks township gets $5,120 per every school money, and Torch Lake $[illegible].

—Miss Carrie Gulken returned home Monday from a trip to Southern Michigan.

—Supt. Martindale has had about forty wagon loads of sand taken from the bottom of the water works well, very greatly increasing the volume of water.

—Petoskey News: William S. Chew, a 5-year old orphan boy formerly living near Bay Shore, has been adopted by Mrs. Chas. P. Wilson, who will give him a good chance to get an education here.

—Rev. Father Norbert, missionary pastor of the Charlevoix Catholic congregation, tells us that a parochial school will be opened in their school building next year, under the charge of three Dominican sisters. There are about 65 pupils in the parish who will attend the school.

—Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew, left yesterday for their regular winter trip. They will stop in Chicago to visit their son a few days, thence to Atlanta to visit their daughter, and then proceed to Florida for the winter. They have not yet decided at just what point in Florida they will stop.

—Dr. Levi Lewis, the pioneer Charlevoix physician, is still quite ill at his home on the north side, but is thought to be slowly gaining. There are very many families, not only in Charlevoix, but, throughout Charlevoix and Antrim counties, who will wish for the faithful old doctor a speedy recovery.

—Under the state law it is an offense subject to fine to do work on the highways after August 1, as it tends to make the road practically impassable in the late fall and spring, in districts where this work is done. It may be necessary to discontinue free rural delivery during the worst of the season.

—A howling northeaster blew yesterday, shifting to northwest last night. Several fish tugs were out including the gasoline boat run by Ed Weideman the engine of which broke down. The steam tug Van Ella found her anchored under the lee of Fishermen's Island and towed here here, arriving late last night.

—Frank Coltman, J. F. Hartridge and Archie Beauvais left Tuesday for the upper peninsula. They will go after deer for the few days that remains, and then spend two months trapping and shooting wolves and other "varmints." We are telling the story just as Frank Coltman told us. We will not be responsible for it.

—One week from today will be Thanksgiving. President and governor tells us we have much to be thankful for, but we know it without the telling. The blessings of life are ours in abundance. Punishments come to us if we heed not the warnings of God and Nature; but with our chastening comes blessing in disguise. We have good reason to praise God from whom all blessings flow.

—In Justice Collins' court yesterday John W. Clark was convicted of cruelty to animals, and fined $5, with $20 costs, or 60 days in jail. He is in jail where he will probably serve the 60 days part of the sentence. Clark, who claims to hail from Bay City, drove a horse from Petoskey, and sold it to Taylor, the baker, for $15. Taylor soon discovered that the animal was rotten internally with ulcerous of the bone, and he had the man arrested with the above result.

—Mr. Peavey H. Ross and Miss Thelma A. Smith were united in marriage at the home of Frank Smith, three miles south of Charlevoix, on the evening of the seventeenth, by C. L. Berry, pastor of the Baptist church. About fifty guests present, and feasted upon a bountiful supply of good things after the wedding ceremony. The popularity of the bride and groom was also manifest by the large number of useful presents presented. Mr. and Mrs. Ross will reside in Charlevoix.

—The SENTINEL still insists, and it does it from the bear of evidence, that the next railroad to reach Charlevoix will be the Michigan Central, which will absorb the D. & C. from Frederic, Time, and a short time at that, will vindicate our predictions. A ten mile "grab" between that road and Charlevoix will not long remain unconquered. It is the most promising railroad proposition in Michigan, today, and it is bound to come. Meantime, we regard a shore electric road as reasonably sure, if we can kill off the unreliable "promoters."

—Crane has a new ad. this week.

—There will be a Thanksgiving supper at the Epworth church Nov. 29th. Hill 25 cents.

—Mrs. John Cook, returned Thursday from a very pleasant visit with her daughter Ethel, who is teaching school at Frederic, Mich.

—The SENTINEL job office has just received a large and fine assortment of the latest styles of type and can fill all job orders in an up-to date style, as usual.

—John T. Kirkpatrick suffered another stroke of paralysis Tuesday afternoon, and is quite ill at his home. The attending physician, however, predicts his recovery.

The mines are in a very potent one, of the dull potato market, is the shortage of cars. Indeed, it is said that the Northern Michigan crop is tied up chiefly because of this condition —Word was received here lately that Dr. Brown, who was formerly a Charlevoix practitioner, died in Milwaukee recently. Dr. Brown was a brother in-law of the late W. H. McCartney.

Our Mesech correspondence from the Nash Woods this week, and reports that the only deer he secured was eaten up by wild cats before he could get it to camp. Of course we are expected to believe Mr. Mesech.

—Frank Cullinan, the restaurant man, gave a corn supper Sunday night to about forty of his friends. There were four roast coons on the table, besides the usual excellent accessories, and a most enjoyable time is reported.

—Levi Shea, the harness maker, is very seriously ill with typhoid fever and other complications. Dr. Oren, of Petoskey, was here Monday, in consultation with local physicians. Recovery seems doubtful, but he may pull through.

—Advices from the chief of the service at Washington, are to the effect that the Northern Michigan Trace Co. has paid the claim of the government for damages to the Beaver Island cable, caused by the stranding of the steamer Illinois.

—Mrs. C. H. Lettinger and daughter and Mrs. Hilton, who left here two weeks ago for Washington, returned Saturday. After stopping in Montana a few days to visit relatives, they proceeded west, but were stopped by the floods. Mrs. Lettinger's health has being improved by the change, the entire party returned home satisfied with Charlevoix.

OLSEN AGAIN.

Pardon Us for Again Referring to This Fragrant Promoter

Cheboygan Tribune. F. O. Olsen, promoter of the proposed Traverse City-Cheboygan electric railway, who had been in that city for some two weeks in the interest of the project, left here suddenly last Friday, leaving an unpaid board bill of $27 at the New Cheboygan House. He also cashed a number of his personal checks on a Traverse City bank and when they were forwarded for collection it was found that his account at the bank was overdrawn and payment was refused. Mr. St. Amour swore out a warrant for Olsen's arrest, and Sheriff Cadwarth notified the sheriff at Traverse City to hold him if he came there Monday word was received from the sheriff that Olsen was there and would square the account and costs. Later Mr. Olsen himself called up the hotel and said that he regretted the matter, but would send a draft for the bill. He had no intention of beating the hotel, but had to leave that afternoon and had no time to call at the hotel before reaching the train.

Bought Another Boat.

Last week the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. bought the steamer Argo, owned by a Chicago and west shore line, and will have season pocket on the Northern Michigan ports.

The Argo is a steel boat, built at Detroit in 1895. She is of 400 tons displacement, 192 feet long, and 32 feet beam, and is said to be a fine boat.

Don't Be Suicided!

It may as well be recognized that Charlevoix has passed the pioneer feather age of development. It has proven its public spirit by local improvement that cannot be excelled by any town of its size in Michigan, and it proposes to keep the pace.

But it does not propose to be humbugged by every grasping promoter who comes along seeking a handful of money. We propose to extinguish gas franchise promoters, electric railroad promoters as fast as they come, until we are furnished evidence that the proposition is financed by responsible parties, and even then, we fear, it will be hard work to chilled public enthusiasm, in view of recent experiences.

It is promoters of the Olsen variety who injure legitimate enterprises. "Once bitten, my dear, do feline them." A horse chiff shows the fire. Even a bull pup will hesitate before jumping on a skunk a second time.

Kill off the chaws and clear the road for honest enterprise.

The Charlevoix Theater.

The Mack-Lecoe Stock Co. closed its engagement here Saturday night with a packed house. This is the best stock repertoire company that has ever appeared here. They have signed to play ten weeks in Petoskey next summer and will come here monthly for three months, playing week engagements.

The Charlevoix Theater management and the public are to be congratulated on the high class attractions being brought here. Thus far no mistakes have been made. Manager Bridge has expressed the determination to keep the standard up.

He announces Charlotte Burnett, in "The Honeymoon," for December 7th, and Joseph DeGrasse, in "The Merchant of Venice," December 20th. Both are high grade.

Charlevoix has recently had a taste of Shakspeare, and will welcome Gilpin's "Mr. Tutfitt" if he is high commended as an actor of the legitimate.

Harbor Improvements.

The U. S. engineers estimates for harbors includes $30,000 for Charlevoix, $20,000 for Frankfort, and $20,000 for Northport.

The appropriation for Charlevoix will probably be $30,000, but may be cut to $15,000.

The Sugar Factory.

After a week of slow progress, the sugar factory is again sliding beets, and everything working smoothly, or comparatively so.

The weather has favored the farmers, and beets have valued in quality. It is certain that no beets will be left in the ground, and that the entire crop will come in at the factory.

The tests continue to be good and the farmers are complete in their expressions of satisfaction with results. Almost all of them are preparing for next beet raising, and very many acres of sod ground is being plowed.

The first sugar will come out of the hopper today, therefore you other folks, you can go into history as the day that the plant began to turn money for the stock holders.

The Robert Beutel Co.

The Robert Beutel Co., which is now a permanent commercial establishment in Charlevoix, is the largest independent wholesale fish concern on the great lakes.

The company has a warehouse and freezer on the south side of the harbor. They have this season bought and shipped to their various season houses 225 tons of fresh fish and have paid out $[illegible] here and Beaver Island. At this writing they have 75 tons of frozen fish which they will ship after the holidays.

The Beutel Company's main house is in Chicago. Besides Charlevoix they have branches in Toledo, Bay City, Menominee, Manistique and Superior. They also have a canning factory and cold storage establishment at Bay City.

The Charlevoix establishment is under the efficient management of Mr. Frank Berge who is also assisting in his office work by his wife.

A Crisis in the S. S. S.

Conditions are not favorable for the continued existence of the Shiffleus Shipmasters' Society. We regret, extremely that we are compelled to make the announcement, but the threatened difficulties may yet be overcome.

To begin with, the breach between Billy Finnegan and Pete Campbell has not been fully closed. It will be remembered that it was an argumentative point last Fall Pete referred to Billy as a fair weather sailor, and unbelievable statement with longtime and slaughter laden Billy. Billy will not forgive Capt. Pete, and, as Dooley would say, "There is war."

—Bay City Tribune: The country newspaper is the most useful of all agencies which stamp the impress of progress upon villages. Without the aid of the local newspaper towns as a rule are thriftless and dead. The country newspaper makes more good men out of less material, more bricks without straw, more hay when fodder is scarce, more thrift than other factors in politics, and it is the one builder on which non-citizens look for local distinction as the beginning of a wider fame. The advent of the local newspaper has always dated the measured thrift of the community, and it is the life of the locality in which it is published. And the measure of its support, as a rule, is the measure of the advancement of the people.

The Minister's Wife

By MRS. HENRY WOOD

The speaker appeared appalled. Her lately-Charlotte Bumpington felt not less like a man who would deny his sole responsibility, or even, in young lady-like phraseology, disclaim any knowledge of the transaction. "Why, you know, Mr. White, knew that he had come to and sought me out—yesterday."

It is astounding what a "small" one can do when it and the occasion are alike. Charlotte was thus suggesting was genius.

"What is it Mr. Charles Bumpington?" she exclaimed, as if his appearance startled a death. "Where the battle-standard of your mind, I did not be made aware." May I inquire the purport of your visit so early?"

Charles laughed. Miss Dropper was subject to changes of mood and manner; but he did not let them trouble him, any more than the boys and girls did. "I came to take an walk you for one thing, Miss Dropper. And Mary has come home! I hear" was the answer.

"You she has come home!" softly repeated Miss Dropper. "Her own sweet sister—she who is so fond of her—is in your way this morning."

Charles found it hard, there was some thing in her voice, her manner, that he could not quite fathom. He had parted yesterday with a sense of coming evil, and he was not free from it. He mentioned the fact, when had not taken a note, or asked Charlotte to do so.

"Why, what ever ails you, Mr. White? Have I done?"

"Nothing, Miss Dropper, nothing. Only I—I—I—

CLEAN MONEY HER HOBBY.

Young Woman Has Distinct Prejudice Against Soiled Bills.

She stopped in front of the paying teller's window and produced a wad of soiled bills.

"Would you kindly exchange these notes for clean ones?" she asked in response to his polite inquiry as to what he could do for her.

"Why, yes, madam, certainly. You are afraid of the disease germs, I suppose," he remarked as he counted out an armful of new greenbacks and added them over the little brown does "No, not exactly," she smiled. "I'm simply a case of habit, before I acquired I had experience in the black-eye business as a working woman, and in all in the work, I acquired a love of fresh bills. I positively refused to touch anything soiled or worn, or one of the few times I have had to regret it married life. The clerks will give one that kind of talked over in mine. Change, money, change anything but the rude look. Now I am a bride, and I'm afraid of the germs. I am satisfied with fumigating and to call in the Board of Health every time I get a dirty bill. Thank you, madam, good morning."

She Got a Job.

There is a real story of one young woman who had decided almost a year in reading news and using all possible influence to gain an interview with a certain theatrical manager. At last her hopes were realized, she got her appointment and she was finally ushered into the manager's private office. The manager her most courteous and offered her a chair. "Thank you," she said, graciously. "I think I will sit down. The audit just ten minutes getting here and I'm a little tired." And the manager, who is clearly a good man and knows the a game of better, promptly engaged her—The Bazar. In Verbig.

Newspaper Romance of Sanity.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, the British authority on insanity and nervous diseases, maintains that the newspapers is a bulwark of sanity. He says:

"It is the habit to consider that man, and glum a world wide barrier to the publication of anything fresh in real and earnest in its capacity and outlook, which is novel to such a major without. In whatever manner of life, sick, in the room, or prison. Time was when it was the lot of the man to be a Robinson Crusoe, or to be a Rip Van Winkle, or to be a Man in the Moon, whenever it was one, strange or new. New Things In Orange Work.

Among "new things" in grange work Darby recent months has added Cupid's chagrin, secrets into plain the college's history, a recital and a geographical topic, besides its farm talks. Pennsylvania grange leads New York and New Jersey in grange work, prefixes in agricultural colleges—Ohio, Iowa and Michigan in mining courses. These are by no means all, simply always which show the grange is a pretty strong grange what, say you not?

ELECTING DELEGATES.

What is Best Plan for Selecting Representatives to State Grange?

The manner for electing delegates to national state granges is the best from December to February is now on. According to the custom now prevailing, the Subordinate Granges from the Pomona groups in sometimes three times in December, and in some instances the most effective representatives feel their ability to the state grange. In the other case the will the best efficient. The custom which prevails in some counties of running the lowers around the state subordinate granges to the county does not always bring the best representatives to the front, yet it may be safe, as in the subordinate granges, that they about the best we with each other. But even if this is done the delegates to state should be instructed by the subordinate granges—and be one of the main items for consideration—the change of delegates has some of the disadvantages of the system of delegates from each subordinate grange. COSTLY TO FORTIFY.

UNITED STATES EXPENDS MILLIONS FOR DEFENSE.

Gen. Mordecai, Chief of Engineers, Presents Estimates of Expenditures for Fortifications—Lighthouses to Dig in Deep Water.

Gen. Alexander Mordecai, chief of engineers, has compiled a statement of War Department estimates for the expenditures proposed by the Board of Ordnance and Fortification for the fiscal year 1907. During the last six months of work in this bureau, he has been assisted by the officers of that branch and by the officers of the engineer corps, who have been detailed for duty in the office of the chief of engineers. The estimates for the work of the engineer department for the fiscal year aggregate $10,000,000, of which the sum of $2,000,000 is for the construction of gun emplacements, $1,000,000 for the purchase of sites for fortifications in many localities, $1,000,000 for the purchase of mortars and $2,000,000 for the purchase of rifles and ammunition for coast defense purposes. The estimates for the construction of gun emplacements include a number of new projects, which have not been before in the estimates, and also for additions to existing emplacements. The estimates for the purchase of sites for fortifications include a number of new projects, which have not been before in the estimates, and also for additions to existing sites. The estimates for the purchase of mortars and rifles and ammunition for the same are based upon the recommendations of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification.

The estimates for the work of the engineer department include $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River below Cairo, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Ohio River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Missouri River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Tennessee River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Cumberland River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Arkansas River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Red River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Ohio River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River above Cairo, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River below Cairo, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between the mouth of the Ohio River and the mouth of the Missouri River, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between the mouth of the Missouri River and Minneapolis, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between Minneapolis and the head of navigation, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between the head of navigation and Lake Pepin, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between Lake Pepin and Lake Superior, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between the mouth of the Ohio River and the head of the Southwest Pass, $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River between the head of the Southwest Pass

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Game warden estimates there are 10,000 so called hunters in woods in upper peninsula.

Dr. DeLacy a former resident of Boyne but who has been spending the past five years in British Columbia, has returned and has taken up his abode at Boyne again.

The schooner Margaret Hall is high and dry on the beach at South Manitou. She was in the harbor, but strong easterly winds drove her ashore. She will probably be a total loss. The crew walked ashore from the vessel.

The demand for help in the timber woods this fall is much greater than the supply. One camp foreman says that wherever he finds a man who can use an axe without chopping her out, he hires him at once at $30 a month, which includes board and bed. The good old "lumber jack" is fast becoming a thing of the past, and the few that are left in Northern Michigan can demand and receive almost any price of wages they have the face to ask.

Since the introduction of sewers in Traverse City, Boardman river has become so befouled with the city's drainage that the Daily Record characterizes it as "Traverse City's Bubbly creek." And with reason, for a bar across the river's mouth so impedes the current that a verritable cess pool is formed within a few rods of the business part of the corporation, and what sewage manages to get by that runs out into the bay to be pumped back into the city's supply of drinking water. Traverse City has had a fearful epidemic of typhoid fever this year. It is not the test, but it is by all odds the worst in the history of that town, and the newspapers are leading a crusade for a better and more sanitary order of things.

Traverse City Record: At the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Grace church Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. L. Bailey, the wife and Mrs. C. T. Stout were presented with a magnificent eight day clock as a token of the esteem in which they are held by the members of Grace church. The presentation speech was made by Mrs. C. L. Whitney and Mr. Stout. In behalf of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Stout was presented with a brooch in the shape of a pansy set with pearls, by Mrs. J. L. Bailey. Mrs. Stout, although almost overcome by the unexpectedness of the present, and the kind thoughts that had been conveyed by Mrs. Bailey, managed to warmly thank her friends.

Boyne Citizen: Last week a gentleman representing a Grand Rapids company was in this city looking over a proposed route for an electric railway connecting East Jordan, Boyne City, Walloon Lake, Charlevoix and Petoskey. We are not at liberty to disclose this gentleman's name or the name of the company he represents; but he informed the Journal man that he was well pleased with the prospect, and was well satisfied with the opportunities the topography of the country offered for railway construction over which the road would pass. The gentleman, while here, made note of our different manufacturing plants, number of different business houses, schools, churches, etc., and other as gleaned as much information as he could in regard to our city. He stated that the proposed line would extend from East Jordan to Boyne City, thence to Walloon Lake then back along the north shore of Pine Lake to Charlevoix and from there to Petoskey. The gentleman went to Grand Rapids to confer with his company and promised to return in a few weeks and make public further details in regard to the prospective system.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Bessie Gardner taught in the second and third grade of the Central building the past week. The new teacher, Miss Leonore Smith, from Lima, Ohio, began work Monday morning.

Thursday morning the Normal students and Miss Hines were invited to the Life Saving Station to see the drills given by the Life Saving crew. After the drills we all went to the Look Out, where captain Fountain explained the compass, barometer and the bells to us.

Mr. Ketchum, State Inspector of County Normal School, visited us Friday of last week. He gave the class a very interesting talk on how to conduct a rural school and what points a Commissioner would look at when he visited rural schools. Mr. Ketchum is also Commissioner of Barry county.

Closed Season and Winter Fishing.

The government trout spawn harvest at Beaver Island will probably be wound up this week. The Bureau of fisheries, will, however, have a short season of fishing for whitefish spawn.

During the three weeks of fishing at Beaver Island, the catch has been greater than at any previous season, proving the profit of artificial hatching. The tug lines have averaged two tons to a lift, making a daily lift of twenty tons of trout —excepting the few days that bad weather prevented tugs from going out.

The Wolverine Fish Co., of Detroit, which has had three tugs there, will, next week come here for winter fishing, having leased the Fagan dock and warehouse for that purpose.

It is expected that ten tugs will fish out of Charlevoix after December 15th, employing eighty men, and, judging by past seasons, fishing will continue to February first.

"My Mother-in-Law."

The ladies of White Rose Hive L. O. T. M. M. have just completed arrangements with Mr. Geo. H. Hoskyn of New York City to produce the funny farce comedy "My Mother-in-Law" at the Theatre Dec. 12 for their benefit. Charlevoix's best amateurs will be in the cast and there will be a fine chorus of ladies who will render some of the latest popular songs. The special musical feature is the Japanese song "Sweet Sana Ooo."

Mr. Hoskyn's former production in Midland cities of the same have been more than successful and the people of Charlevoix are assured of an excellent performance. Remember the date Dec. 12th.

Had a Close Call.

"A dangerous surgical operation, involving the removal of a malignant ulcer, as large as my hand, from my daughter's hip was prevented by the application of Bucklen's Arnica Salve," says A. C. Stickel, of Milton, W. Va. "Persistant use of the Salve completely cured it." Cures Cuts, Burns and Injuries. 25c at F. G. Hines Co. druggist.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Steamer Cummings made two trips to the Island last week for fish.

The storm of last week carried away part of the Wolverine Fish Co's dock.

Mrs. A. A. McPherson and Mrs. H. Gelfick spent a few days on the Island Capt. "Pete" McCarthy of Charlevoix and his sister Mrs. Joseph Nachkerian were here to attend the funeral of their brother.

The steam tuge B. C. Wenie was in with a cargo of hay and feed for the Lumber Co.

Capt. "Sam" Rose is acting as pilot on one of Wolverine Fish Co.'s tugs.

W. H. Nelson assistant keeper at Squaw Island spent a few days with his family in Northport.

While coupling cars a few days ago John Donlevey had the misfortune to crush his thumb, which necessitated amputation.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Malloy are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl at their home.

The card party given by the young ladies for the benefit of the church was a great success. Everyone reports a good time.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Mrs. Mary Cowen who has been sick the past two weeks is getting better, and others who have been on the sick list are all getting better.

Mrs. A. E. Cameron, left for Detroit Friday, she took with her Miss Hazel Richardson, whose eyes were in a very bad condition, caused by the prevailing distemper.

There was a pitched battle at the mill yard Friday, between P. O'Morrow and John Macey, with 2 or 3 others as backers. Mr. O'Morrow was knocked down by Macey with a club, but in the end succeeded in getting the better of Macey and gave him a good threshing. Macey went to Charlevoix and entered complaint for assault, though according to O'Morrow's account the assault was all on the other side. The trouble was over ownership of shingles. If we can't have a railroad we must have amusement of some kind.

P. O'Morrow and his two boys, were out about 2 miles in the bay on Sunday raising some fat nets. Their gasoline engine gave out and they had neither oars or sail, they drifted some ashore at dark about 2 miles north of here. It came near being a fatal accident.

The Davidson Meetings.

The evangelistic services which began so auspiciously continue to grow both in attendance and in interest. Services this week every afternoon and evening except Saturday at the Methodist church. The meetings are under the auspices of the Methodist, Baptist and Congregational churches. Sunday morning the storm reduced the attendance to some extent, but there was a good congregation, and every one who attended felt well repaid for facing the storm.

Mr. Davidson preached a powerful sermon from Romans 1:16. It was a scholarly presentation of the influence which Christ exerts in the world today. By the undeniable facts of history the speaker gave great force to his thought. In the evening the church was filled when Mr. Davidson showed in a masterly way the insignificance of this world's gain when compared with the value of the human soul. Monday evening he spoke to young men on "The Story of a Fast Young Man." Again the house was filled, a large number of young people being present. The Charlevoix Hog's Club attended in a body and occupied reserved seats. After the regular service there was an after meeting for young men and boys which was largely attended.

Mr. Davidson grows upon the people at every service. The interest is deepening and it is evident that great good will result.

Made Happy for Life.

Great happiness came into the home of N. T. Blair, school superintendent, at St. Atlanta, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he nauseas. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say, three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weaknesses, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c.

WIRELESS DID GOOD WORK.

Materially Aided Admiral Togo to Crush Rozhdestvensky.

Wireless telegraphy played a most important part in the great naval engagement between the Russian and Japanese ships in the late war. A Japanese writer says that at the time of the battle of the Sea of Japan the weather was foggy and hazy to such an extent that it was impossible to see for a distance greater than five miles. A Japanese scout cruiser, while searching for the Russian fleet, suddenly found himself within the fog and fifteen, unexpectedly for a moment, practically in the midst of the numerous vessels of the enemy. A wireless message was at once transmitted giving notice of the discovery, and this message was simultaneously received by all the vessels of the Japanese squadron, notwithstanding that they were some 150 miles distant.

Admiral Togo immediately dispatched a squadron of scouts, which kept in touch with the enemy, and informed him at five-minute intervals of the course, speed, position and location of the Russians, with such accuracy that Admiral Togo was able to direct his attacks with absolute precision upon sections of the enemy.

It was through wireless communication alone that it was possible for the Japanese commander to maneuver and to place his fleet to enable him to strike the enemy most advantageously. All of the Russian ships were equipped with the latest and most efficient wireless outfits, but they failed to interfere with the messages.

WAS A DISTINCT SHOCK.

Two Young Women in Maine Describe a Scarecrow Who Retaliated.

Two Auburn young ladies have sent you evidence of from the shock their natural nerves did receive, the other day. "On our way home we met a scarecrow," declared one to her friend, "and they rolls our eyes at us! I should think the crows would be scared the way he did them. That scarecrow he a-coming towards us in Goldman lining, too, OH! it is so bad and ugly, I should think the crows such outlandish clothes! They put in summer enough, I must say. I just wonder how quick we could get home, if we ran? We made and ran! Shaky did we look, too, we did! "Strange," interrupted her companion, "I was thinking about that scarecrow looks it as much as life—and, say, you know it's Thursday and Commodore Day! Just cannon if you had to run in a garden," shouted the other. "Scarecrow," to the great consternation of the Auburn young ladies, had to the so much concerned as to leave their fields and follow the girls home, for it was a live man, and so enjoyed seeing the girls run so rapidly over the ground.—Lewiston Journal.

DIDN'T STOP TO FIGURE.

Possibilities of Apparently Simple Bet Staggered Frenchman.

A cautious bet that partakes of the nature of a practical joke went to the courts in the town of Dole, France, in 1894. A citizen of the city bet offered to pay one of his countrymen 21 francs in advance if he would agree to furnish him with a number of grains of millet to suppose fine to the number of children born in the town within a year. One grain of millet was to be given for the first, two for the second, four for the third, eight for the fourth, and so on, doubling the number for each child.

Accepting the apparently generous offer, the unlucky Frenchman attempted to carry out the provisions; but 64 children were born within the specified time. He was astonished at the enormous quantities of grain required to fulfill the contract, and appealed to the courts for annulment of the wager, on the ground that it was founded on an impossible condition.

The judges granted his appeal, but ordered him to return the 25 francs he had received and pay 24 in addition.—The Sunday Magazine.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1905 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Tucker, of Alligator, Ky., as a year of blood, which flowed as copiously from Mr. Tucker's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "severe bleeding from the lungs and a tightful cough had brought me at death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and as time has proven permanently cured." Guaranteed for Sore, Lungs, Bronchitis and Colds, at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Our usual stock is mostly on the floor—more arriving daily. We aim to carry at all times a stock to meet the demands of our customers, and at prices to suit the pocket book. While furniture is somewhat higher in price than it was last year, it has not risen in comparision with the price of lumber, when it must is only a matter of time. A great deal of our stock was bought at prices lower than which prevail at present. This our customers get the advantage of. We can sell you a golden oak finish Dresser for $9.00 a solid oak Sideboard for $12.50 and other goods in proportion.

Please call and look over our stock.

—The Michigan railroads have decided to give a fare and a half round trip rate for the holidays. In recent years it has been the custom to give a single fare rate. It is contended on the part of the railroads that because of the reductions made the past year in regular rates that greater concessions cannot be made for the holidays.

—Miss Jennie Hunderman was pleasantly surprised at her home in Harbord last Saturday evening by a few of her young friends. The evening was spent in music, songs and games, after which a dainty lunch was served. The party broke up at a late hour, and we are told none of the boys did not get home till day light.

—Although under receivership, the Pere Marquette is not being allowed to run down, but instead Receiver Harmon and the officers are constantly building up the system. Sixty new cars are being received daily and hustled out to meet the incessant demands of shippers. The delivery of new cars will continue until January 15, when a total of 4,000 will have been added to the Pere Marquette equipment. The Pere Marquette also has an order with car companies for 4,000 new coal cars to be delivered in June.

—An attraction at the Charlevoix Theatre these days is the excellent Lyethson orchestra, in which Mrs. Austin Davidson is first violin. To say that the audiences have been charmed by Mrs. Davidson's execution in putting it mild too strong. The lady is a most accomplished performer on the King of all musical instruments, exhibiting technique and expression that marks her as an artist. Charlevoix is fortunate in many attractions of the sugar factory, but none is more keenly appreciated than the possession of Mrs. Davidson.

—A few weeks ago the Journal editorially remarked about the absence of telegraph communication that Boyne City had with the outside world and made the suggestion that an effort be made to have the Western Union stringa wire from Gaylord to this place along the D. U. G. & A. It was apparent that what was had in mind at the time is about to be realized. Supt. Moore of the D. U. G. & A. took the matter up and conferred with the Western Union officials and the result is that the telegraph company is about to extend to the wires of the people of Boyne City. Much credit is due Jas. Austell, Western Union operator at Gaylord, for his efforts in bringing this to the company's facts and figures in such a manner as to convince them that Boyne City was a suitable place for a telegraph office. —Boyne City Journal. Of course Charlevoix never gets credit for anything in that direction, but the manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co. at Charlevoix recommended a wire from Gaylord to Boyne City more than a year ago, and later renewed the recommendation. For proof of this statement, address C. Gorham, superintendent, Cleveland, Ohio, and then modify your opinion of the SENTINEL editor by just one horn and one cloven foot.

Circuit Court.

Circuit court begins in regular December term Monday next with a small docket.

In the criminal list is the Mattland murder case, but it is doubtful if it comes to trial, as the prisoner is said to be very ill with Bright's disease. The long continued Hackett forgery case is on again for trial, and the Wm. Petskey bastardy case. There is also the case against Russell Sipes, charged with assault with intent to commit the crime of rape.

In the civil case there are the perennial Wood Sawyer cases, and the damage case of Eaglston against the Charlevoix Lumber Co. growing out of the death of Art Eaglston in the mill yard.

In chancery there are two cases against the old Charlevoix Sugar Co and two divorce cases.

LOST ON GEORGIAN BAY.

J. T. Donaldson Numbered Among The Lost On An Owen Sound Steamer.

On Tuesday a telegram was received here conveying the startling intelligence that in the foundering of the steamer J. H. Jones, on Georgian Bay, Sunday, J. T. Donaldson was one of thirty passengers who went down with the boat.

Mr. Donaldson was well known here. At the time of his death he was the representative of the Wolverine Fish Co., at Owen Sound, on Georgian Bay. Several years ago the Wolverine Co. established a branch here, in the old water works building, and Mr. Donaldson was sent here as manager.

It was while here that he met and married Miss Laura Campbell, daughter of Mrs. Smith Campbell. The branch being discontinued after the first year, Mr. Donaldson represented his company several years in the lake of the Woods region, later being transferred to Georgian Bay. He stood high in the Wolverine Company's service, and was an upright, manly man.

Mrs. Donaldson's mother and her aunt, Mrs. Harrison Bedford, left here Tuesday morning for Owen Sound.

S. S. S. Perplexities.

Matters in the S. S. S. are getting too better fast. Notwithstanding the heroic and benevolent efforts of the founder, the Society seems to be on the verge of disruption.

The review of the situation, published in this paper last week, seems to have had an effect that was not intended by the writer. Capt. Pete Campbell comes into the meeting the heroic and benevolent efforts of the founder, the Society seems to be on the verge of disruption.

The review of the situation, published in this paper last week, seems to have had an effect that was not intended by the writer. Capt. Pete Campbell comes into the meeting with his vigorous rather language threatens a libel suit for what we said about his custody of Society funds. The popular captain on the Beaver Island run asserts that he has had no Society money since the fall of 1903, when an appropriation was made for "contingencies and incidentals," which, he avows was expended for necessary supplies. As he furnishes he vouchers for these expenditures, he thinks he has no other alternative than to ignore this veracity.

Wilkins still insists that the appropriation was intended to cover his claim for rent and money advanced for "Peerless" and other items which he, also fails to indentify, and the financial tangle is still on.

The last time the Missouri was in, Capt. Billy Finnegan was here, alleging that his name had been used in connection with Pete Campbell without his consent. Billy avows that as soon as the Missouri is laid up he will settle things up in the Secretary, and was heard to say that the editor of this paper is responsible for the present disorganized condition of the Society.

We resent this imputation! The editor of this paper, as the founder of the S. S. S., sought only to elevate the morals of that class of sailors who hold masters licenses, because we considered that Charlevoix was a good field for this class of work. Our purpose was purely benevolent and philanthropic.

But we want this distinctly understood; we do not care a rap for this degenerate bunch of skippers We have, by precept and example, sought to raise them to a higher moral standard, and they give us the dry mitt.

Very well, we have a clear conscience. We were proud to have established the S. S. S., but since it has developed into a gang of Mock Magistes, we shall, after giving it one more chance, wash our hands of it.

A special election will be held at Northport Dec. 4 for the purpose of voting on a bond issue of $10,000 for the purpose of building a water works system for the village. The backing over of the electric light plant and making it a municipal institution and turning it in connection with the water works also contemplated, is being believed that such a measure would be more profitable than if the village alone operated the water works and left the light plant in the hands of private owners.

Little Charlie Plump, the 4 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Plump of Petoskey, wandered away from home early Monday. After an all day search in which most of the people of the west side joined, he was found crushed to death under a lumber pile which had fallen upon him.

—Chocolate's famous play "The Crisis" at the opera house tonight.

MAKING SUGAR

Beautiful White Stuff Now a Charlevoix Product.

The activity that attaches to successful operation now, reveals at the sugar factory. Beets are rolling into the factory from the big beet sheds as one end, and fine granulated sugar is inserted into the barrels at the other end.

One hundred and fifty men, in two shifts, are working the twenty four hours of the day, and Mr. Hubbard and his staff are smiling. The factory has not quite struck its gait in production, but considerably more than a car load of sugar per day is being shipped. The output will be increased to two carloads soon.

Already Charlevoix sugar is in evidence. Yesterday we saw it delivered at several local stores, and, no doubt some of our readers sweetened their coffee with it this morning. The factory, of course, does not retail. The Cloverleaf Grocery Co. has contracted for a portion of the output, and is delivering to its customers here.

The factory, for so many years the subject of our hopes and fears, is an active, thinking industry, and it is safe to say, its value should be overestimated. If not only constitutes a local industry, but the entire region will be benefited by it.

Success Came Too Late.

John Tobin, and Englishman, who wrote "The Honeymoon" that Miss Barrowes is to present at Charlevoix Theatre Friday December 7th, never saw the play produced. He was taken ill one week before the first performance and died before his long desired event took place. For two years he had carried it from one Manager to another, but to receive the same refusal, for he was very young and had written but this one play. At last his dream was to come true, the play was to be produced. And it was to bring wealth and fame to all but the silent young author whose pen was forever stilled by the hand of death. The success of the play was instantaneous. It ran for two hundred nights, charming all with its mirth and romance.

It can easily be seen why the play came such a marked success in this country last year. The play itself has many strong points, full as it is of romance, ingenious comedy situations, delicious wit and bright repartee. The story centers around the efforts of an English Duke to marry an independent, high spirited, charming bride and win her heart for himself and not for his title and "many palaces." The American audiences applauded enthusiastically the sacrifice, wistful Juliana as she was played by Miss Barnett. She left no doubt as to her ability to portray the feelings, lively brier, heard to sighs that the editor of this American womanhood, all jealous of independence, fire and pride, yet with such irresistable shadows of laughter and such wondrous powers of love in her lovely dark eyes, her beaming beautiful woman-hood is revealed even in her naughtiest pastrome.

The working out of the plot is delightfully funny and the end refreshingly sweet and appealing. Juliana becomes to the last act the tenderest, most alluring suppliant for her handsome husband's love. The shy remorse in her sorry little heart and the wondrous deeds of self sacrifice building in her sweet fancy make an exquisite picture at the last curtain long to be remembered.

The committee is still hard at work on plans for the village waterworks at Stanton Bay, the establishment of which would mean not only great convenience to the village but adequate fire protection. At the last election the proposition to bond the village for $3000 for building a water works system carried by a large majority.

The Minister's Wife

By MRS. HENRY WOOD

(CHAPTER XIX.—Continued.)

She sweep away majestically, leaving Charlie to make an apologetic exit from the house. But Charlie was not in a hurry to do it. He seemed to enjoy a tête with whom! The sublime was so hot and pepper's, and so was the fire flash of an affair; and that an explanation with Charlie was a thing to be desired, too. Apart from that, what explanation had Charlie to give? Some, I know that would be believed. As he stood thus thinking, the large door was softly pushed open and Regina appeared.

"Have gone, Charlie, Charley? Was she very rude?"

"Very," replied Charley, shutting the door.

"When Aunt Ann has a grievance, no one can come near her and it's many a year since she had such a grievance as this one," went on Regina. "Oh, Charley, what time was how did you press up the courage? and who was it?"

"Did not see what you've heard, and he.

"That was once at the Hazelnuts. Charley, as to your being engaged, I'm heating a lady with painted cheeks. We go to a school in Paris to-morrow. You should have heard Aunt Ann in her rises but—girl, I'm Janet says, and if the means she called you."

"I know all, Regina." "We will be glad to Mary?"

"Trust Aunt Ann for that. Who was the lady, Charley?"

"I wonder, Regina, whether you'll be free to-day? I want to do something."

"Try me. Perhaps you are going to say it was Gertrude?"

"Gertrude is at home! Whether, you know, I am not with the Hazelnuts. Gertrude! I wanted to see Gertrude. Is she at home?"

"Gertrude isn't you know no better than I, Charley, and I'm sorry for it. Mary Ann Jones and Charlotte—her chaperone! Charley, I'm sorry."

"Gertrude don't you know no better than I? Gertrude! Gertrude! Gertrude! I'm asking you to be my wife, Gertrude—my wife, Gertrude, do you hear?"

"Oh, Charley, I'm sorry, I'm sorry! Mary Ann Jones and Charlotte—chaperone! Charley, I'm sorry."

"Gertrude! Gertrude! Gertrude!"

Women Must Live to Work.

The increase in the number of women in the trade and industry of America is startling. Out of 300 occupations enumerated by the census bureau, women are found in 295, are fully eight in which women do not appear. From ten out of those eight occupations women are employed in 1890, as against 6 in 1880. Of every five Americans over ten years of age, one was one who was going outside of her family duties and who was taking part in the gainful work of the working world. At that time there were 40 women civil engineers, 70 women in banking and mention, 60 women and three school teaching professors, nearly 1,000 physicians and surgeons.—Cincinnati World.

Ghost Is Considerate of Children.

A ghost which is fond of children takes possession of a house in the northeastern district of the Transcaucasian, according to Dagbladet from Tiflis. It throws about the furniture, kicks and pinches unpolite members of the family and visitors, but refrains from the animals, and it never molests the children.

RIFLING AN EAGLE NEST.

It Is a Pretty Hard and Very Dangerous Act.

An Alpine hunter named Hess, living at Brunnen, in the Unterwalden Canton, has had a dramatic adventure with eagles. A cair had built their nests in the cliffs about 800 yards above the valley, and it contained two eaglets, of which Hess determined to possess himself.

The climb was so difficult and dangerous that he had to leave his gun behind him, taking only a staff thrust with him. As he approached the nests the two parent eagles attacked him with great fury, and the hunter had a severe fight, with his staff as his only weapon, the task of his being hurled to the bottom of the cliffs being very great.

Hess received many cruel scars, but he so last succeeded in breaking the nearest bird and then driving off the mother, empty the eagles.

Spelling Reform in France.

It looks as though spelling reform were really striking. France proposes to make simple, consistent spelling in all its schools. Thus "e" is to be substituted for "a" in words like "chevaux" for "chevaux," the "ch" to be dropped in certain words, giving us "rebrique" and "teatre." And the French men will henceforth do its cooking over its "feu."

WILL TALK TARIFF.

DEMOCRATS COMPELLED TO ANTAGONIZE PROTECTION.

Vigorous Stand-Pat Policy of President Roosevelt and the Republican Leaders Leaves Their Opponents No Choice but to Repeat Their Usual Free Trade Blunders.

"Pray, how is a wayfaring voter going to distinguish a democrat from a Republican? Send a dollar to the Republican campaign committee and get the solution to this puzzle. Of course the Democrats must talk tariff, that is the only argument Mr. Roosevelt has left them."—Boston Herald.

Right you are. The Democrats must talk tariff whether they like to or not. They are compelled by good politics on the other side to antagonize the stand-pat position, and in doing this they are compelled to antagonize protection. It is an uncomfortable position, made so by the wise determination of the Republican management to force the fight on Dingley tariff, stand-pat lines.

More center it would have been for the Democrats if they could have faced a divided opposition, an opposition weakened and demoralized by the confusion that the Dingley tariff agitation has caught to be forthwith bickered and patched in the interest of large foreign competition, lower prices and lower wages.

But it was different when the national Republican congressional committee, headed by President Hanna and Speaker Cannon, decided upon a stand-pat campaign.

All of a sudden the Republican "progressives" found themselves called to be progressive. They readily consented to the adoption of a stand-pat platform, and are now failing over each other in insisting that the tariff is the issue, and that Republicans must be united and harmonious in fighting the common enemy.

They didn't talk that way prior to the Chicago stand-pat conference. Then they were shouting for the nomination of a tariff revision on a tariff-revising platform and swearing that they would bolt if any other candidate or platform were adopted. Now they sing small about tariff revising and are begging for stand pat votes.

How is it in Massachusetts that other storm center of tariff mugwumpery?

A month ago the Democrats were in high feather. Republican dissension in the tariff made the road to Democratic success look level and smooth. Free Trader Whitney had decided to be the Democratic nominee for governor. Free Trader Foss was hoping to capture a Republican nomination, and Mugwump Guild was declaring that he could not be the Republican candidate for governor unless allowed to stand on a tariff-revising platform.

But things have changed. The stand-pat programme of the congressional committee, the stand-pat speech of Speaker Cannon at Danville, and the stand-pat letter of President Roosevelt have knocked into splinters the campaign plans alike of the free trade democrats and the mugwump Republicans.

Free Trader Whitney has decided that he will not take the Democratic nomination for governor. Free-Trader Foss has discovered that he cannot get a Republican nomination for lieutenant governor or anything else. Mugwump Guild was at last accounts hoping that nobody would remember his silly break of a month ago as to refusing renomination on any save a tariff-revising platform.

The Republican stand-patters have won out, and the Massachusetts Republican tariff resolution is going to read, as written by Attorney General Moody, as per suggestions from Oyster Bay.

All this has come of the patient and forceful tactics of the stand-patters. There was the same and sensible side of the controversy; theirs the good business and the good politics side. They have fought long and hard.

Ever since Cummins, of Iowa, launched his scheme of destroying tariff-sheltered monopolies, and of slashing the tariff by a fake reciprocity that could only benefit a few favored interests, while greatly injuring the industrial interests of the country as a whole, ever since Foss forced to the front in Massachusetts with his programme of free trade in raw materials and more free trade by means of reciprocity dickers, with Guild promptly falling into the snare laid plainly in his sight by known free traders, all this time the stand-patters have stood pat for tariff stability, for business, for continued prosperity, for plenty of work and high wages.

Result: The Democrats have nothing but the tariff left to talk about. The more they talk tariff the worse for them. They never did and never can talk tariff without "putting their foot in it." For this gratifying situation and attitude the country is indebted to the stand-patters. If they had weakened or wabbled, the country would now be plunging down all lines of productive enterprise because of fear and uncertainty regarding tariff disturbances.

Even Mr. Shaw must stand upon the Cummins tariff plank, and reflect that he did not construct it for Cummins, but rather that Cummins constructed it for him. It is one thing to be whipped out of your boots, but quite another to be whipped into your opponent's boots and made to stand pat in them.—Rock Island Argus.

Sam's Mistake.

A Washington seer predicted not long ago that the earth would be destroyed during the present week. Now he has lost his reputation. The other seer always predicts the destruction of the earth at least a million years in the future.

Negative Advantage at Least.

WAGES AND COST OF LIVING.

Good-Times Incomes and Hard-Times Prices Never Come Together.

"The question is: Has the average man been better off in the last six or seven years than he was in the six or seven years preceding 1893-1897? Is he better able now to have the things he wants than he was 10 or 12 years ago?

He is beyond the shadow of a shade of doubt he is. We have but to look about us to see the proofs on every hand. We have but to think back to find these proofs in our own knowledge.

The average man is able to live in a better house, better furnished, and wear better clothes now than then. He has more money in the bank, he falls less frequently in business, he has fewer debts which he cannot pay when due. These are undeniable facts.

Then why this wild outcry from Iowa? It is true that prices are higher, but so are incomes. The average man has to pay out more, but he also gets in more and is able to save more of his earnings.

What these Iowa Democrats really call for is hard-times prices with good-times incomes. No Joy has ever been found of having these two things at once. We can have one or the other—hard times with low prices or prosperity with high prices—but not both.

We tried in 1892 the remedy for high prices which the Iowa Democrats now again propose. We let the Democratic party break down the tariff to get lower prices.

Well, we got low prices—and we also got low incomes. We got rid of high prices—and we also got rid of prosperity. We swore we would no longer be robbed under the shelter of the tariff—and we were soon lamentating in the pleasing sensation we were easily into from robbery, having nothing left to be robbed of.

Let any man who resents high prices now think back and remember how he paid, when prices were low, eight, ten and twelve years ago. Was he better off then than he is now? Would he like to go back to those times of low prices?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

WAITIN' AT THE CHURCH.

Brilliant Revisionists.

Our tariff revision friends have been revising their platform, as per announcement. They now "favor placing lumber, coal and nearly all trust controlled goods on the free list, including the duty on necessities of life and on American-made goods sold cheaper abroad than at home." After placing all trust controlled goods on the free list we see no necessity for retaining the duty on necessities of life or on goods sold cheaper abroad than at home, for there wouldn't be any duty left to revise. According to the statement made by the advocates for revision, all commodities are controlled by trusts, especially the goods that are sold cheaper abroad than at home. Then it follows that if all trust made goods are placed on the free list there will be little use for revision or for custom houses. We will not have even the Democratic "tariff for revenue only." We would like to have Mr. Huntington or Bert Miller explain what he proposes to do to raise a revenue with which to run the government, the state also left just what few trusts are going to be favored, the ones that do not come under the "nearly" class, and if these are to be exempt because of a bandout. These are some of the things on which an anxious public is awaiting enlightenment.—Slayton (Minn.) Gazette.

Lower Prices, Lower Incomes.

Let it be known to-morrow that there is to be a rip up on the tariff and the changeling process will begin immediately. Neither the manufacturer nor the wholesaler or the retailer will know what to expect. Many will lose their jobs. Their ability to buy will be decreased and prices will fall. The man who holds his job and keeps his salary may possibly be benefited temporarily, but scarcely one man in 10,000 will be able to do that. A general reduction in wages will be the order of the day. Hard times prices mean hard times incomes. The prices that prevail in good time are the natural sequence of the incomes that charm into such periods. The man who argues that you can have hard times prices and good times incomes is either an ignoramus or a demagogue, and whoever believes him is not wise. He might just as well expect a good grass crop during a drouth.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

INDIAN OCEAN IS UNKNOWN.

Buoy Canal and Steamers Leave Untraversed Wastes in This Sea.

Perchance of no area of our great oceans do we at the present day know less than of the Indian ocean within the tropics, says the Geographical Journal. Fifty years ago, the decade before the great China and Indian clippers. It was, save for a small area in the north, of Madagascar, alive with white wings anxious to take advantage of every slant of wind or the smallest current, its nearest characteristics were then the subject of anxious care, whereas now its greater part is to most navigators as unknown sea.

With the opening of the Suez canal there was a profound alteration of traffic, and the most important routes now start not from Mauritius or the cape but from the Red sea. Hundreds of steamers, laughing at winds and currents, pass annually from Aden to Bombay and Colombo on the one hand and East African ports, Madagascar, Mauritius and Seychelles on the other. From Colombo, again, there are regular lines to Calcutta, Singapore, West Australia, Mauritius and South Africa.

But except on the lines from the island sea to Colombo and from the latter to the far east and to Australia there is a relative absence of competition, a wasta of that necessity for accurate knowledge of the winds, currents and topography which is only called for by a keen desire for saving time or mileage. The routes across her surface are also wide apart and her islands are comparatively unimportant. Great areas are seldom or never crossed by ships. In our six months' cruise on his majesty's ship Egeria we saw never a sail and only single steamer, and only one solitary, lonely, a small trader from Mauritius to the Chagos.

His Enemy Fights Fair.

According to officials of the Carnegie hero fund, the most remarkable case that has been investigated by the commission was that of Judge E. Combs of Midway, Ky., who was granted a silver medal and $1,500 in cash. Two colored assassins from Combs saved the life of his latter enemy and successful opponent, Hon. Jackson, a lawyer and inventor.

Godson had entered a vault to test a gas making apparatus he had was over come by the fumes.

Friends and relatives were afraid to enter the vault. When he delivered his intention of going in Combs he pulled back and told that Godson was dead, and that he would surely lose his own life if he attempted to recover the body.

"There may be some life in him," declared Combs as he pulled away and entered the vault. He succeeded in easy to the door of the vault and then fell unconscious. Both men recovered and are now the staunchest friends.

Asked why he had risked his life for his most bitter enemy, Combs replied: "Because I love a fighter who fights fair, and Godson always did that."—Exchange.

Bees Imitated by Wasps.

The average countryman would laugh at you if you were to tell him that you had seen the wasps this summer playing the part of the excepliar, bee gathering honey from the flowers in the garden. But the countryman would be wrong and you would be right, for of late, for some mysterious reason, the wasps have been busy among the tall flaming spikes of the red hot pokers (Tritoma uvaria). What the bees think of it we cannot say, but they are not to be seen anywhere in the vicinity of the wasps when they feel inclined toward honey, usually make an attack upon the newcomerby for retaining the duty on sold second heat, unless they attack in force. It is now that the wasp has shown an inclination to gather honey first hand for themselves, surely the scientist can step in and teach it to store it for the needs of man in the hive, which it can already make as perfectly as the bee, although of a different pattern. If the chief difficulty, perhaps, would be to prevent the bees from robbing the wasps of honey bred, from eating all he gathers on the spot.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Baby Bantie Was Battle.

A baby rattler was bitten by a hungry and a mouse, which had no desire to be a victim fought it out yesterday in a cage in the window of a fish store at 1265 Pitkin street, Brooklyn, says the New York World. Mother Snake and eight little brothers and sisters witnessed the baby fight to find food for a meal.

Baby Bantie and women crowded about the window during the 15 minutes that the mouse held out. The baby rattler chased him from one corner of the box to another, striking, coiling and uncoiling, while Mother Snake looked on with pride.

Mr. Mouse had several bad falls in trying to get out of the box, and finally fell and lay still. Baby Rattlesnake surveyed its victim and prepared for a meal. But Mother Snake, being frugal, took the meal away from her son, deposited it in a corner and kept all the family satisfied for an hour. Then they fed.

TRICKS OF MEMORY

STRANGE PHENOMENA THAT PUZZLE SCIENTISTS.

Accounted for by Some on the Basis of Transmigration of Soule—Secondary Explanation Is a Physical One.

"Have we ever lived before?" is a question which is interesting many correspondents of British newspapers. Dr. Andrew Wilson analyzes the strange phenomena of memory and offers the contribution in part as follows: "The doctrine of metempsychosis or transmigration of souls represents a very ancient belief. Not merely did it exalt the possibility that the soul after death could be transferred from one human being to another, but it also held that the human soul might take up its abode in another form of life and be transferred from the purely human to the lower animal domain. The theory asserts that as each stage is ended and a new era begun the soul sheds most of the features it inherited in the life it left, retaining now and then, however, vague memories of some of its antecedent states. Such memories, forcibly projected into the foreground of our consciousness, it is said, should convince us that we have lived before.

"Everything we have heard or seen or otherwise appreciated through the agencies of our sense organs leaves impression, every sensation is really stored up within those brain cells which are concerned in the memory function. True, we may not be able to recall all of them at will, but there are doubtless beyond the reach of the power that revives and prints off for us positives from our storehouse mental negatives. But it is none the less significant that on occasion we can distinct memories of events whose date lies very far back in our mental consciousness. Perhaps, we have never realized after they happened, the facts, and yet, only waiting the requisite and proper stimulus to awaken them and to bring each to the surface of the mind.

"This expression, literally, what we mean by memory, is not metaphorical. It is that underlayer of stereotyp impressions and memories which is only revealed in certain rare brain states and of which, in our ordinary life, we only receive the faintest, and most occasional reminders of its existence. We do not remember one minute every bit of ancient news the skilled mental remembrancer may bring to light and so we treat the resurrections as if they were reflections from some far-removed and extensive but often the clue is supplied us and the apparent mysterious awakening of past life appears merely as a recollection, the origin of which we did not at first recognize.

"Given the idea that sometimes we then as on earlier occasions have hitherto unknown to us, that we have been there before, is capable of rational explanation. Our brain is built on the double principle, and acts in accordance with the principle of the simultaneous work of its two intellectual centers. If there exists a slight discrepancy in this situation some work, so that one half of one brain centre is a little behind the other, the average countryman would laugh at you if you were to tell him that you had seen the wasps this summer playing the part of the exceptiar, bee gathering honey from the flowers in the garden. But the countryman would be wrong and you would be right, for of late, for some mysterious reason, the wasps have been busy among the tall flaming spikes of the red hot pokers (Tritoma uvaria). What the bees think of it we cannot say, but they are not to be seen anywhere in the vicinity of the wasps when they feel inclined toward honey, usually make an attack upon the newcomerby for retaining the duty on sold second heat, unless they attack in force. It is now that the wasp has shown an inclination to gather honey first hand for themselves, surely the scientist can step in and teach it to store it for the needs of man in the hive, which it can already make as perfectly as the bee, although of a different pattern. WEATHER PROVERBS

MANY, BASED ON OBSERVATION, ARE RELIABLE.

Not All the Familiar Verses Dealing with Meteorological Subjects Are Absurdities—Some Notable Exceptions.

The agriculturist and the husbandman, and indeed all those whose conditions of life force them to rely upon old and for the means of subsistence, are so dependent upon the changes of temperature and the alternations of foul and fair, wet and dry, that it is not surprising that questions regarding the weather should from time immemorial have been made a subject for scientific situation. Long, therefore, before there was any noteworthy real impetus to enlighten the world with its scientific predilections, people had begun to study the face of the sky, the shifting of the wind, and the changes of the moon, and to embody the results of their observations in rough and ready rhymes and proverbs for the guidance of succeeding generations who should follow in their steps.

These rhymes are usually found expression verse. For instance, there was an old Latin stanza which was very popular, and of which the following lines form one of several English versions:

If St. Paul's Day be fair and clear,
It does then foretell a happy year;
If blustering, windy, it shall be adrift,
Many wars will trouble our realms but off;
And if it chanced to snow or rain,
Then will be dear all sorts of grain."

The value of such rhymes as the weather as-vice of the past was the 19th of July, a day which, as the feast of St. Swithin, is in London in no sense shorn of all its former reputation. In England, at least, it is said to be unusual to hear people of some pretense to education, frequently in jokes, perhaps, but sometimes even in all seriousness, remark that as St. Swithin's day is wet or dry, so the case may be, for 40 days thereafter there would be continuous rain or fair weather, as the weather. Thus the old rhyme runs:

"St Swithin's Day if thou dost rain
For forty days it will remain;
St Swithin's Day, if thou be fair
For forty days 'twill rain no more."

The commonly accepted explanation of this natural and widespread superstition is too obvious to be omitted. Though its value rests on tradition, has been authoritatively announced. St. Swithin was a bishop of Winchester, who after his death in 862, was canonized by the pope. It is said that he had expressed a desire that he should be in the open churchyard, and, as was usual in the case of bishops, in the chancel of the cathedral. Some time afterwards, however, the bishop of the establishment were asked, with a fit of pious indignation at the thought that a bishop's grave should sleep his last sleep in so humble, and, for a saint, so unseemly a place, and in defiance of his well-remembered desire, they determined to remove the body to a place in the cathedral and relinquished it there. But such as they were, it rained, and their operations a heavy rain burst forth, which continued without intermission for 40 succeeding days. The monks ever ready to turn every occurrence from the ordinary course of nature into a miraculous light, at once interpreted the tempest as a special warning from heaven, and relinquished their attempt to remove the bishop's sepulchre. They derived its prophetic character in relation to the condition of the weather for the ensuing 40 days.

But when our forefathers were contented themselves to a less extensive field of prognostication, and instead of undertaking to settle the weather for some months in advance, they simply attempted to provide against the changes foreshadowing, that they were a great deal more successful. Many of the sayings which they passed down by oral tradition are not to be laughed at in modern times, though they were, though they were, not upon scientific data or reasoning, but on simple observation and experience. Everybody, I suppose, is familiar with the curt little verse which runs:

"A rainbow in the morning
Is the shepherd's delight;
A rainbow in night,
Is the shepherd's delight."

But not everybody who repeats it is aware that a statement which it contains is capable of scientific verification. So, too, with such common adages as

"If red the sun begins his rise,
He sure the rain will fall apace."

And

"Evening red and morning gray
Are the twin brothers on his way
Evening gray and morning red
Bring down rain upon your head."

Are something more than old wives fables, for they embody at least a rough approximation to established truth. Both of these latter proverbs, indeed, seem to be fashioned directly upon words found in the gospel of St. Matthew, where we read (chapter xvi): "In the morning, ye say it will be foul weather today, for the sky is red and lowering." and again, "When it is evening, ye say it will be fair weather, for the sky is red."

An Exception.

"Well, there's this much about it," said the talkative man, "when a fellow starts to do anything he can always succeed if he only sticks to it."

"Yes" replied the quiet man. "How about when you start to remove a piece of stick by paper that you've sat down upon?"

SPIRIT GAVE HIM RHEUMATISM

Colored Pastor Blames Murderer's Ghost for His Affliction.

To being haunted by the spirit of Isaac Turner, the negro murderer, who was hanged at Towson last March, and whose unofficial subject he was at the time, Rev. J. H. Allen, pastor of St. Matthew's, Colored Baptist church, ascribes his failing health. The clergyman called on Mirabeau Parsons to offer him a period for a Sunday school parade. While in the marshal's office he asked permission to examine a number of photographs of criminals and the scenes of their crimes which adorned the walls. This was granted and as Allen caught sight of a picture of Victor Turner he fainted.

"Do, do leave dem things behind look at dem pure pictures" it is that the Whisker an he's de cause of mah rheumatiz. Dat yer lim Wonder done laying on me ever since dey hang him at Tow-sum. Lemme git outer hyah" and the pastor hobbled on his crutches to the other side of the room.

"Hah yer rheumatiz done caused by Wiskey," he explained "Its done come to me at night an' can ide out' hands over mah face an' I hears him breath yer. Yes, jes as he did dat day at Towsum. One night he come and run his hands over mah face. Then it was like dem spiders webs, only cooler an dey kept on and on and pull every stitch an' every coffee me. Dey did I guess. All Honor to the Apple.

The apple is a splendid fruit and deserves particular attention at this time. The different varieties have a too numerous individualities. The poet, Longfellow, in a poem, says the fair sex set between the Porter and the Baldwin, which combined a pomological star of the first magnitude as marked as the difference between a country blacksmith and a Kentucky colonel. The man who invented or discovered the Baldwin conferred on humanity as boon and he did more to tickle the palate than he was ever been called upon to do.

Of course, due to the apple experiment, whether it be eaten raw or converted into sauce or made the basic element of pie or sandwiched in cellos forms a perfect companion to the American housewife to serve a useful and important purpose.

History, I've never done adequate justice to the apple. Though it has subsequently colonized in some the virtues of the first. Political economy has been so far fully recognized, but just that the apple plays in the affairs of men. But apple day is here and we must.

Woodcock's Roast with Hens.

Francis Marks of 1221 East Thirty-seventh street, Flatbush, in visiting the Jamaica Friday night, observed what he supposed was a small chicken nestling on the fence between two large white hens near the Nick Nack World. Calling to his wife, he asked her if she had been adding to her Black Mac Marks said the bird out.

"Well, there is a strange w in the henery," Mr. Marks said. "Come out and see it."

Procuring a candle he and his wife went out to see the little invader. As soon as it closely it was found to be a large hen was similar to that of a hen. It was nestled on the wing, and about the size of a chunk.

The bird was taken into the house and placed in a cage. Food was forthcoming, of which it ate ravenously. Mr. Marks subsequently learned that the bird was a woodcock, for where it came from he knew it got into an hen house is a mystery. Yesterday morning when he went to feed his new pet he found it lying dead on the bottom of the cage.

Prison of the Tree Toad.

Mrs. Hobbs, the widow of a civil war veteran, keeps several large wire sheds as ornaments on the front panels of her home on Foster avenue, Chicago. The sheds are kept close at the foot of the old woman when she sits in her armchair on the porch and she does the greater part of each day.

"Prisoners" and a neighbor were chatting together on the piazza. Pointing to the adjacent cages she asked:

"Listen! That's a tree toad."

"No" said Mrs. Hobbs "I've heard that noise all summer, it is inside one of these sheds. It must be a cricket.

The caller turned to one of the big sheds which had been lying opening outward on the piazza all summer and on bended knee she peered. It was mere adobe and Sonoa, but silver. It evidently had been imprisoned in the shell of the three months the sheds had lain in one place on the piazza.

Sounds Well.

"I have joined your husband for some time, Mrs. Bagpetty," said the gallantmouple visitor to the sixty-year-old hostess, "and I have observed that the Erial magnimbodie as marked as the difference between a country blacksmith and a Kentucky colonel. Woodcock's Roast with Hens.

Francis Marks of 1221 East Thirty-seventh street, Flatbush, in visiting the Jamaica Friday night, observed what he supposed was a small chicken nestling on the fence between two large white hens near the Nick Nack World. Calling to his wife, he asked her if she had been adding to her Black Mac Marks said the bird out.

"Well, there is a strange w in the henery," Mr. Marks said. "Come out and see it."

Procuring a candle he and his wife went out to see the little invader. As soon as it closely it was found to be a large hen was similar to that of a hen. It was nestled on the wing, and about the size of a chunk.

The bird was taken into the house and placed in a cage. Food was forthcoming, of which it ate ravenously. Mr. Marks subsequently learned that the bird was a woodcock, for where it came from he knew it got into an hen house is a mystery. Yesterday morning when he went to feed his new pet he found it lying dead on the bottom of the cage.

LIVELY HOTEL FIRE.

HOSTELRY IN GOLDFIELD, NEV., BURNS TO GROUND.

Three Inmates Unable to Escape, Are Consumed in Building—Nine Big Skyscrapers Are Ready to Open Work.

A New fire swept a crowded hotel containing nearly 300 guests at Goldfield, Nev., and when the flames had subsided the destruction of the place resulted in the death of two persons, who must have succumbed over to Jerry J. M. Dilly, of Denver, a prominent member of the Masonic Fine Instrument Company in Denver, and Charles Hatcher, of Los Angeles. A H. Taylor of St. Louis, a guest, was badly broken. Walter Jarrett, a waiter, also had his face and hands so badly burned that he was confined to bed. The hotel was owned by Jim Ross, who was in charge when the fire started. Ross escaped in his night clothes. Many others escaped in the same way. Among those injured are Mrs. Ross, who was burned about the face and hands, and Mrs. Ross, who was burned about the face and hands. Mrs. Ross's mother, who was in the hotel, was also burned. The hotel was a frame structure, and it burned like tinder. The fire started in the rear of the building and spread with great rapidity. Nine big skyscrapers are ready to open for business in Goldfield, which is the greatest mining camp in Nevada. The Goldfield Hotel was the finest in the city. The loss is $150,000, with insurance of $50,000.

WORK FOR CONGRESS.

Long Schedule of Unfinished Business in Sight.

If Congress attempts to do all the work it has set before it it begins to do and will remain at the next session there will be little time left for the consideration of new measures. If the President of the members shall see fit to recommend. The list of matters which went over from the first session of the present Congress to be taken up at the second session is formidable. There it is:

The question of what may befall us in the future and every city and village in Michigan would do, last week, according to a sweeping republican majority, is, to a large extent, in every way to be proud. There is not a legitimate line of business that has not been made more certain and secure in its operations and which will not feel justified in larger and more far reaching plans for the future by reason of the results of the recent election. That it brings with it more of satisfaction and security and encouragement than were needed in even the most enthusiastic campaign speeches is the unique and valuable distinction of republican victories.

It is just as well, perhaps, that the attention of railroads and manufacturing concerns and express companies, recently announced, to increase the wages of their many thousands of employes, the most important and wise spread movement of the kind in the history of this country, should not have been made known until after the safe election of another republican congress. Some doubting and sweetening individuals might have feared that the action of the great employers of labor was intended to influence the election result. It is more probable, however, that the result of the election influenced the employers. That is a view of the matter which just as perfectly makes quite reasonable.

Prince Archbishop Ireland, who is now known as a true friend of the great mass of what is referred to in the term, our country's common people, comes so earnest warning against the introducing of socialism and the doctrine of general discontent, in the course of an address before the school of the Tabernacle, the week after archbishop pleaded for the evangelism of dangers which to his mind appeared lurking from increasing in our government by the people thus the dangers against which the Army of the Tennessee contended, almost half a century ago to find eight years, in a result of Archbishop Ireland's travel and observation, that he believed the government owed a duty of protection as a possible power against which the whole American people should be warned.

The fact that about half of the recently elected members of the state legislature are farmers, and that many other members not directly connected with the work of the line and the plow are yet from the smaller villages and communities wholly depend upon the farm would seem to insure to the farmers of Michigan a fair hearing and strong average representation upon every question that will be discussed and acted upon by the coming legislature. The farmers of Michigan have always been strong and true to the support of republican principles, national and state, and they in turn have usually wielded the influence and possessed the power which direct and controlled their party. It is therefore fortunate for state and party that the next session of our lawmakers will be made full of men in the life of the farm and the atmosphere of the farm.

Everard Wilmot repeated Clytie in surprise. He was in Wednesday, when I did sight the announcement. What's more, I was able to answer him a question, which I guess he was then put to this day.

"Why was it?"

"Don't you see, Charley, for I can't see you. If Gertrude has—which I do not—she has done so."

"Knows nothing certain about it, yet, you think. Clytie is not also adopted in our family? Gertrude knows she was not. Everard asked Clytie. He was you who made the discovery, you might be sure, he said. He was not, he added, when pressed for his reason, but Clytie was.

"Clytie is not, she replied the moment I put the question to her. Clytie is not, Charley, I know, as we know that we are alive. Clytie is not, I repeated to Everard, and I ought to know, seeing that I have lived with her from her infancy. Sea Trees.

Forms of life in the sea are far more wonderful than any that swim on land. Heaviest plants one may detect the origins of sea animals, there are probably far larger, but it is few than ever come out of it, nor is it that the 1 ft has been conclusively proved that sea trees have grown to height are quite common in the ocean. These number trees are a kind of bamboo covered the upper world branching and about a hundred feet in length in Chatham Islands, in the Pacific Ocean. Sands, and almost on the sea a boy can swim around the branches of the tree and swing from with ease. Long the sands and branches are filled with small fish. Many of these plants are fine gray of extreme delicacy of form, which makes now exceedingly rather unsuccessful specimen herbarium.

W. H. Graff, Chairman.

January 4th, A. D. 1906.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Roll called,—quorum present—minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

The following resolution was introduced by Geo. W. Bailey who moved its adoption which was seconded by by Ava Smith.

Resolution:

Whereas, at the October session of this Board of Supervisors a resolution was adopted providing for an audit of the books of the county officers and on the report and recommendation of the Ways and Means Committee, recommending the audit of the County books for the purpose of determining the exact amount of the indebtedness of the county, and said Committee having asked in the said report that the matter of the audit of said books be left to them with power to act and to employ an expert accountant, and said report having been by this Board adopted and the said Committee on Ways and Means empowered to hire an expert accountant and

Whereas, the original resolution offered for the employing of an expert provided that the expense should not exceed $500, which was on motion changed so that the amount to be paid for such service was not limited, for the reason that the Board footed the audit of the books to cover all the books of account in said office and not for the last five years only and

Whereas, it was then and is now the understanding of this Board that said service should be performed by an expert accountant, who lived outside of the county and whose acts and report would be uninfluenced by social, political or business preferences and

Whereas, said Committee have not carried out the instructions of this Board in the following:

1st They have employed two men instead of one and both residents of the City of said County.

2d Neither of the two men are men of established reputation as expert accountants, one being a bookkeeper and the other an attorney.

3rd No authority was given said committee to engage an attorney.

4th said attorney has already planted actions in the Circuit Court for said County at the instance of the Committee.

5th Said Committee have announced that the proposed examination shall cover only to the year 1899. Therefore,

Resolved by this Board of Supervisors that all motions and resolutions passed by this Board at its last October session and all proceedings and acts done thereunder providing for an audit of the books of this County be and are hereby rescinded and

Resolved, that the said Committee on Ways and Means be and are hereby discharged from any and all further consideration and action in relation to said audit of the county books and,

Resolved, that a special committee of this Board be appointed to consist of the Chairman of this Board be appointed to consist of the Chairman of this Board and two other members to be appointed by him, whose duties shall be to at once provide for an audit of all the account books of this county by or under the direction of a Trust Company or a skilled expert accountant and

Resolved that said Committee be appointed by the Chairman during this special session and that they at once enter upon their duties of securing such audit, and

Resolved that said committee be and are hereby authorized if deemed necessary or expedient to employ one book keeper to assist any such expert accountant engaged by them in the discharge of his duties if it shall meet with approval of such expert.

Moved by H. W. Paddock that the resolution be amended as follows: That Board elect committee instead of same being appointed by Chairman.

Mr. W. H. Miller called for a yea and nay vote on the amendment.

Yeas unanimous. Amendment carried.

On motion G. W. Bailey supported by Ava Smith. Board proceeded to ballot on original resolution. Yea and nay vote called for by Ava Smith.

Several petitions were read asking the supervisors to vote for the resolution.

Petitions were as follows:

Evangeline signed by Boyne City Lbr. Co. and sixty three others.

Boyne Valley signed by O. H. Marsh and twenty-seven others.

Wilson signed by Max Osterburg and forty others.

Eveline signed by Melvin Sheldon and sixty six others.

Charlevoix signed by W. A. Smith and twenty others.

By request of H. W. Paddock the following remarks made by him setting forth his reasons why he would support the resolution were spread upon the minutes.

If the tax payers of this county desire to bear this added cost, I take pleasure at this time in voting yea on this proposition. Committee's reason for employing local people was as they felt in the interest of the tax payers as the work could be done at a cost not to exceed $800, with outside experts would cost approximately $2,000.00 to $2,500.00? Yeas unanimous.

Resolution declared adopted.

The Board proceeded to elect Committee on audit of county books as per amendment to resolution. The Chair appointed H. Wagner and J. Hufford as tellers. The following supervisors were nominated as chairman, J. H. Graff, Henry Wagner, R. Lewis and J. Snyder. Ballot spread. Total number of votes cast which were as follows.

J. H. Graff, 10; H. Wagner, 6; R. Lewis, 1; W. H. Miller, 1.

J. H. Graff was by the clerk declared elected chairman of the committee.

First member of committee.

Nominations.—Henry Wagner and Ava Smith. Total number of votes cast 17, of which H. Wagner received 11, A. Smith received 6.

H. Wagner was declared elected as member of Committee.

Second member of committee.

Nominations.—John Karcher and R. Lewis. Total number of votes cast 18 of which John Karcher received 11, R. Lewis received 7.

John Karcher was declared elected as member of committee.

"It is absolutely impossible to stave off Russian revolution," is the conclusion, emphasized a little in the colors, to which I have come throughout the 1500 miles of my journey through the empire, the 10 days I have spent in Petrograd, and the 5 days in my hotel. Such will come the revolution, I believe, not as a result of any one event or combination of events, but as the result of a gradual disintegration of the Russian nation, which, I believe, has already begun," said Mr. Wallace Wing, the Chicago merchant and artist, who returned to his home here last night from Russia. Mr. Wing, who is a member of the Chicago Society of Sculptors, and of the Chicago Society of Artists, left Russia a month ago. He was in Petrograd when the Duma was dissolved, and was there when the Duma was reopened. He was in Moscow when the Duma was dissolved, and all these were held in $5,000 bail.

WHY DUAL TARIFFS.

IMPORTANCE OF STARTING RIGHT ON THAT QUESTION.

Whenever Foreign Discrimination Compels Us to Adopt Two Different Sets of Schedules a Minimum Tariff Should First Be Established as a Basis.

Efforts have been made from time to time to frame reciprocal or so-called reciprocal trade treaties, embodying a minimum and a maximum tariff, and a law authorizing the President to move the tariff schedules up or down, according as the action of other countries toward us may be friendly or unfriendly. Attempts of this character have been made in the past, and the Dingley tariff was framed with this idea in view. It is not probable that the power thus conferred will be used to any great extent, if at all, in the future. Our experience with the Dingley law has been such that it will be very difficult to get any one to agree to a dual tariff. Nobody knows what it means, and it has given rise to the most grievous complaints because of the uncertainty and the ease with which it has been used to the disadvantage of our own people. Our experience with the Dingley law has been such that we are not likely to have two sets of schedules in our tariff law, the maximum and the minimum, and not a maximum and minimum tariff.

The difficulty of our commerce with other countries—whether the persons from whom we buy or to whom we sell are friendly or not—is not caused by unfair treatment, but the inevitable application of the principle that all of our imports must be paid for by exports, and that the money we receive for our products must be used in the purchase of something else. Our trade with Germany, for example, has been very unfavorable to us for many years, because we have been buying more from Germany than we have been selling to her. We have had a balance of trade against us, and we have had to pay it in money, or in securities, or in credits. We have had to do it because we have been buying more than we have been selling. We have had to do it because we have been buying more than we could afford to buy, and we have had to do it because we could not sell our products in Germany in exchange for what we wanted to buy. We have had to do it because we could not have two sets of schedules in our tariff law, one for friendly countries and one for unfriendly countries, and not a maximum and minimum tariff.

Suppose we had a maximum tariff and a minimum tariff, and we should say to Germany, "Unless you will let our products in at the minimum rate we will put our products in at the maximum rate." Germany would say, "We will put our products in at the maximum rate." We would say, "We

IMPORTANCE OF STARTING RIGHT ON THAT QUESTION.

Wherever Foreign Discrimination Compels Us to Adopt Two Different Sets of Schedules a Minimum Tariff Should First Be Established as a Basis.

Editors have been made from time to time concerning the proper course of a national tariff, whether a schedule and domestic tariff should be made and enacted simultaneously. The question has complicated the discussion of American Approach in view of the fact that automatically all the duties and taxes contained in schedules which have been established by previous tariffs would be increased. Many people have been led to believe that it is to be the result if a tariff is enacted there is a schedule which would be the result if a tariff is enacted there is a schedule which would be the result if a tariff is enacted there is a schedule which would

President's Message

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

As a nation we still continue to enjoy a bounteous harvest, prosperity and peace. We are free from the fear of foreign interference. We are on good terms with all the nations of the earth. Our domestic affairs are in a satisfactory condition. Congress in its last session, and the previous Congress, have passed a number of laws of importance, most of which have been duly approved of by the Executive. Some of the most important of these laws I shall refer to hereafter in this message. Some of the most important recommendations made by the Executive to the Congress have been left by it for action at this session. Some of the most important recommendations made by the Executive during the last two years have been entirely ignored by the Congress. Some of the laws which have been passed have been framed in such a manner as to show that the Congress did not fully understand the purpose and scope of the recommendations of the Executive upon which they were based. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not understand the facts which were the occasion for the recommendation of legislation on the subject to which they refer. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not understand the nature of the evil to which they were addressed to remedy, or that it did not care to remedy the evil complained of. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not understand the nature of the remedy which it was seeking to apply to the evil which it was desirous of remedying. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not understand the nature of the remedy which it was seeking to apply to the evil which it was desirous of remedying. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not care whether it did or not remedy the evil which it was ostensibly seeking to remedy. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not care whether it did or not apply a remedy to the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not care whether it did or not create a new evil worse than the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not care whether it did or not create a new evil worse than the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying, provided it could secure the votes of those who were ostensibly desirous of remedying the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying. Some of the laws have been so framed as to show that the Congress did not care whether it did or not create a new evil worse than the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying, provided it could secure the votes of those who were ostensibly desirous of remedying the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying, and that it was willing to let the country suffer from the evil which it was ostensibly desirous of remedying if it could not

RECORD IS NOT CLEAN

FACTS CONCERNING COLORED REGIMENT RECENTLY FIRED.

It Is Proved That the 25th Did Shoot Up Town at Brownsville, Texas—President's Message Sends Two Fifth Infantrymen Home.

The attempt made by the Republican leaders in the senate to whitewash the action of President Roosevelt in dismissing three companies of the Twenty-fifth colored infantry without honor or a hearing, has been a failure. The record made by the senate committee, which was made public on the 10th, is not the record of a whitewash. It does show that the President was right in his contention that the three companies had participated in a raid upon the town of Brownsville, Texas, on the night of August 13, 1906, and that the men had fired their guns within the town and had killed one man and wounded others. The report of the committee, which was signed by all the Republicans and Senator Foraker, who represents the Democratic minority, was made public on the 10th. It was accompanied by a report from the War Department giving the entire record of the case, including the testimony taken by the military court of inquiry which was convened at Brownsville, Texas, to investigate the affair. The report of the committee is a document of 300 pages, and it will be a week or more before it can be digested. It was the intention of the Republican leaders to have the report made public at the opening of the present session of the House of Representatives, but the Democrats, who had a majority of the members of the committee, insisted that the report should be made public at once, and it was so ordered by the Republican majority of the committee. The report of the committee is in the form of a letter addressed to the President by Senator Foraker, the ranking Republican member of the committee, who was the author of the resolution under which the investigation was made

EXPORTED MANUFACTURES.

Why Wage Earners Will Vote for Protection.

It is curious to note the pathetic persistence of the New England tariff reform theory, of which the Boston Herald is chief. It admits that the tariff reform issue is honestly to be made a state issue this year in Massachusetts. This sentiment inspires admiration to hear more of the subject. Now and then the esteemed Herald, however. It aims on to present the orthodox argument of the protectionists, which is that we no longer need a tariff because we are exporting manufactures. It cites the export figures—$416,000,000 worth of iron and steel, $53,000,000 worth of wood and manufactures therefrom, $40,000,000 worth of cotton goods, $11,000,000 of leather and goods made therefrom, $25,000,000 worth of agricultural implements and "export prices"!! Its argument is every one startling and $1,000,000 of which the Herald quotes and so on.

The Herald does not believe the protectionist assertion that these exports represent actually entirely the surplus capacity of our mills and that if it could should of the mills now running would have not said cheap Chinese labor, which is the only reason why we can compete in export markets. Well, I think your answer would be 11 mills, and if so, it is correct, or in other words, what cost the old Farmers' Mutual, a 3 mill assessment to pay, would have cost this town, don't you see very cheap Chinese Insurance Co. It is safe to say, and there bowing sons of "Anglian" tell the unemployed farmers, now, don't you see our prosperity is increasing? Yes, cheap, provided a gold dollar is of less value than a copper penny.

Another instance of cheapness. During the year 1893 this same cheap Chinese Insurance Co. spread an assessment of 2 mills and paid the insurance of one mill back in for the losses, and were left at the close of that same year with an added indebtedness of $1,000,000 or some nearly twice greater than the total amount paid for losses.

Yes, there are no in any reason also doubt in the minds of all thinking men that the extreme cheapness of this so called cheap Chinese Insurance Co. spread assessing enough that will assume money to cover the unchallenged to pay some men of ordinary intelligence to wonder about the property, spending their memories and thinking "gals" (their only work in trade) to the people, keeping in a few newspaper, violins and singing everything else.

It is said there is a bird that sings a song that is so dazzling that the other birds are paralyzed so that the bird can take all the honey out of their mouths. Is it possible that the Chinese may be saving us?

But the matter now for you like the brains of the birds that do the sing, for to the one and only man or one class of men who are the cause of our prosperity, the manufacturer, the employer of labor, the producer of the wealth of the country, the Chinese Insurance Co. is a blight, a curse, a pestilence, a hell, and the only way to get rid of it is to vote the Democratic ticket—Protection Press.

PURCHASE MANY GEMS

AMERICAN PEOPLE BREAK REC-ORD FOR A YEAR.

$10,500,000 Purchase Jewels in United States in Year Now Continue—Dynamite Factory in Northern Illinois Blows Up.

Hoarding diamonds and putting back on the shelf has been unknown in America when it comes to purchasing gems, but the figures of the United States customs office show that more money was spent last year on precious stones than ever before in the history of the country. The million dollars in New York is added to the million in other ports, making a total of $10,500,000 in the United States. Diamonds were the most popular of all the gems, the customs officials say, the importations being 50 per cent more than last year. Pearls were the next most popular, the importations being 40 per cent more than last year. Rubies were the third most popular, the importations being 30 per cent more than last year. Sapphires were the fourth most popular, the importations being 20 per cent more than last year. Emeralds were the fifth most popular, the importations being 10 per cent more than last year. Opals were the sixth most popular, the importations being 5 per cent more than last year.

Dynamite Factory Blows Up.

Bombs Exploded at Aurora Brought Warning—No Injuries Reported.

A dynamite factory in Aurora, Illinois, blew up, the explosion of its magazine being felt for miles around and shaking the city as if by an earthquake. The factory is located in the south of the town proper, and is owned by the Illinois Dynamite company. It was not worked in Sunday, though we understand a number of men were in the factory at the time of the explosion. The building was completely demolished, not a piece of it remaining as big as a man's hand. The concussion was felt in Chicago, twenty miles to the east, and in other towns for miles around. Windows were broken in Aurora by the concussion, and it was felt by many persons in the city as a shock of an earthquake. The explosion was heard for miles in all directions. Some time before the explosion two bombs were exploded in the factory, and it is said that the night watchman had received some warning of the intended explosion. The factory was not in operation at the time of the explosion, which occurred at 2 o'clock in the morning. It is supposed that the explosion was caused by lightning.

BEATS A GIRL OPERATOR.

Robber Prefers Him with Wooden Spoke and Rubber Stirrup.

Four masked men held up the Wells-Fargo express office in El Paso, Texas, on the 8 o'clock train from the east Friday night and made their escape in the darkness. The robbers had a lookout who had warned them of the approach of the express messenger, who was a young woman, and when the train came in the robbers had taken up their positions in the office. The young woman had her hand on the door when the masked men ordered her to throw up her hands. She did so, and the men then ordered her to open the door. She refused, and they then tried to force her to do so, but she still refused. The men then ordered her to open the door or they would blow her brains out. She still refused, and one of the men fired his pistol through the door, the bullet passing through the woman's hat. The men then ordered her to open the door or they would shoot her through the head. She then opened the door, and the men ordered her to lie down on the floor and put her hands behind her. She did so, and the men then went through the office, but failed to find the money, which was in a safe. The men then ordered the woman to open the safe, but she said she could not, as she had left the combination at her home. The men then ordered her to open the door of the express car, and she did so. The men then ordered her to lie down on the floor of the car, and she did so. The men then went through the car, but could not

DOOMED.

By WILLARD MacKENZIE

CHAPTER II.

Far away from the city, far gone air, the bright blue sky, and glorious sunlight of Germany in the first September of the year, they leave that octagon of low London wrinkledness, on the solar day, as the moon lives, another child, a girl, sat in a small room, a window of the looking-glass, with dress half done.

She was alone, quite alone, for the last one of another kind to visit which functionary Miss Dorothea's pale face with a massive photographic tablet upon glass. It was a pretty, delicate face, and yet a hopeless one, a sensitive, half-frightened, half-resigned face, a half-contemptuous face, half-fearful, half-pitiful, half-hopeless, half-hopeful, half-indifferent, half-sensitive, half-insensitive, half-pleasant, half-unpleasant, half-pleasing, half-displeasing, half-attractive, half-repulsive, half-sensible, half-insensible.

Now that the photographer, before her, had gone, she was half glad, half sorry, half-indifferent, half-interested, half-pleased, half-displeased, half-hopeful, half-hopeless, half-fearful, half-fearless, half-pitiful, half-contemptuous.

"Dorothea, my child, come in, I want you," Mrs. Stewart, a stout, good-looking, well-dressed, middle-aged woman, called from the next room.

"Yes, mamma, I'm coming," the girl replied, in a quiet, pleasant voice, and, gathering up her sewing, she left the room.

"Dorothea, I want you to go to Mrs. Brown's with this parcel," the lady said, as her daughter entered the room.

"Yes, mamma," was the reply, as the girl took the parcel, and, putting on her hat, left the house.

Dorothea Stewart was a fair specimen of a well-to-do, well-educated, well-bred, well-cared-for, well-cared-about, well-cared-for-and-about, well-cared-for-and-about-and-yet-not-spoiled-by-it-all-and-yet-not-spoiled-by-it-all-and-yet-not-spoiled-by-it-all

Some Great Canals.

The Panama canal has been begun twice and twice given up, having cost 40 million. It was completed in 1889 and most recently 1894. The Suez canal is 87 miles long and over 31 ft. deep. The Kaiser Wilhelm canal, which is the Suez, between the North Baltic and Kiel, which is 98 miles long, has cost 100,000,000. —The Stanley Exchange.

Woes of the Writer.

If it was of the typewriter's capacities he would be the absent a thing of so as impossibly unhealthy as to say the "I could" answering. "Ah a typewriter" the reader cries exclaiming, "has it ever occurred to you that the typewriter is the author's friend?" Chronicled in characters of ebony. —Chronicle in Cincinnati Inquirer.

Mr. of Many Sovereignty.

Dick Dale of Lewiston, Idaho, is the proud possessor of a dog that will do anything he commands him to do. The dog is a cross between a Newfoundland and a collie, and Dale says he can do everything with the animal he can do with a human being. —Chronicle in Cincinnati Inquirer.

The "Jonahs."

The superstition prevailing among those who do not take to active interest in the game of bridge is that bridge players are a gloomy company and fearful lot. This is by no means the case. Taken as a body bridgeists are as friendly, sociable as any. —Boston Transcript.

WRITES ON TARIFF

IDA M. TARBELL BEGINS SERIES OF ARTICLES.

Worth That the Work Might Have Promises to Be Marred by Spirit of Hostility—Careless Handling of Facts.

We observe with interest the beginning of a series of articles in the American Magazine by Miss Ida M. Tarbell, entitled "The Tariff in Our Times." It is announced that the author will attempt to make this some difficult of subjects intelligible and entertaining to readers of thousands of readers who have noticed its mentioning without understanding the meaning. That there are make hundreds of them, made of men business is not to be doubted. Whether they will all or any very large portion of them be interested to read the first article we have referred to is perhaps an other question.

The name in this instance starts out with the advantage of being already associated a name public honor and of the strength of one standard of Company. Will she succeed in making interesting and convincing the tariff? We believe the people it is enough to say that the job seems to have started on an attack on the system of protection very much as she attacked the Standard Oil. Preferences aloud of lack of business preparation, of ignorance of economic handling of facts and conditions. The article would have been better for a more thorough and careful consideration, and as compared to magazine, for a more settled employment of the editorial blue pencil.

Does Not Affect Calico.

Whether through ignorance or intention we will not undertake to say, but Samuel Gompers, president of the Federal Labor Union, has allowed himself to be misled into the belief that imported calico must pay a double duty, and that an extra cent for a calico gown will be the result. The truth is the argument cited leaves the cost and that the price of calico will not be affected by such as a fraction of a cent. The decision relates exclusively to finer or figured weaves and not to print goods. It requires that fancy cotton selling at 25 cents a yard shall pay the tariff duties that plain cotton selling at 15 cents a yard.

Comparatively Moderate.

"Certain of our women frown and whine and whimper," says W. R. Hayward. Let us thank Mr. Hayward for the moderation of his language. He might have said they shrieked.

Got It Himself.

"Did lawyer Pettifogger remove to get hold of that property for me in the smartest way?" "He got it all right, did he?" "Yes—he got it."—Cleveland Leader.

CULLOM'S UTOPIAN

Story of Reciprocity Has Been Only Be Taken Out.

Senator Cullom and others in reciprocity, a fine romance in connection with the completion of a tariff bill. Senator Cullom's story is that the schedules of the tariff act were recommended to the Senate finance committee by the President. He says that a number of the schedules were taken from the committee's bill and the duties of the parts, a new tariff added, and the bill as so amended and thus made ready for the senate to act on a bill which contained principles of reciprocity. The man of romance.

Actually, it happened that the committee did not bring any reciprocity bill into the senate. The bill as it came from the committee was a complete measure, and was so treated by the senate. It was not amended in any material respect. The senate did not add a single reciprocity provision to it. The tariff bill as it came from the senate was the same bill that it was when it left the committee room

MURDERS HER LOVER

JEALOUS WOMAN THEN COMMITS SUICIDE.

Man's Trip Across Continent Ends in Double Tragedy in Boston Hotel—She Weds on License Made Out in Father.

Mrs. Margery Clark lured Algernon S. Atwood, a traveling man for a Chicago house, to Boston, where she had him committed to jail for two Sunday night in Boston, she then ran while he slept and then asked herself for four hours before a woman in Denver of whom she was jealous. Mrs. Clark asserted that she had been secretly married to Atwood two years ago, discovering her husband in another woman he followed her from a town in the west to St. Louis (name withheld), later entering the employ of a Chicago firm to the same company. He lived in Denver. Neither Atwood nor Miss Clark could at long intervals through they were in a correspondence. Mrs. Clark at once produced a ring, love for Atwood, and asked a hotel for a room. She retired to a Denver woman who telephoned her she was dying and she asked her to come to her. By the time she reached the woman's home Atwood had left.

WEDS ON FATHER'S LICENSE

Head of Family Secures Document and Son Takes Bride.

A wedding license issued to a father and the ceremony performed for a son by the minister of the family was recently issued in Dunkirk, N.Y. The license was issued to Frank M. Donnell, aged 57, and Thea Hanson, aged 21, both of Dunkirk, natives of a Manhattan church, performed the ceremony. The groom is the son of Mr. Donnell, by his first wife, and Miss Hanson is a ward of Mr. Donnell, who for three years has been attempting to strengthen the relationship between stepfather and stepdaughter which has existed since the death of the girl's mother. The license issued to Mr. Donnell says that the bride is his daughter, and the groom, who is a minor, is the son of the applicant.

WOLVES ATTACK A WOMAN

Animals Kill Stone Near Marshes of Northwest Texas.

John Hyrness, a farmer, and one of his sons, on their way home from a hunt killed a lynx and four timberwolves near Lubbock, Tex. The whole community is excited at the discovery that the animals in Kent County, Texas, are since with wolves. Two women were attacked by wolves. These are the first women seen in this locality in thirty years. Wolves have not been seen sheep, calves and pigs. A big hunt is on and to exterminate the park.

Senator Convicted of Bribery

The charge against Senator Lorimer of the senators of State Senator F. H. Hunt of the Illinois legislature, bribery, is the last indictment, and announced this in the newspapers for two years. Hunt was convicted of giving another Senator $100 to vote for the Senator Lorimer's election. Hunt's case is the first of the indictments which charged the Senators are alleged to have received money for their votes.

CANAL CRITICS HIT.

President in Special Message Calls Them Slanderers.

TELLS OF HIS TRIP.

Made Through Inspection of the Work Now in Progress.

Task that is an Epic and of World-Wide Importance—Health Conditions Excellent, Malaria and Yellow Fever Being Driven Out—Workmen Are Seen at Work and Their Quarters and Are Interviewed by the President.

President Roosevelt sent a special message on the Panama canal to Congress Monday. He tells at great length of his personal experiences on his recent trip to the canal zone, and scores the critics and slanderers of the canal construction.

Following is the President's message in part:

In the month of November I visited the Isthmus of Panama, going over the Canal Zone with considerable care and showing that the time of Panama and Colon, which are not in the Zone or under the control of the Canal, but are in which the United States government, through its agent, is doing the work for the Panama government. I spent three days going over the work on the Canal Zone, taking an exhaustive investigation of the conditions on the Isthmus, and I have formed very clear and decided opinions as to the work done and the way in which it is being done.

The work on the Canal Zone is now in a very satisfactory condition. The work is being pushed with the utmost vigor and in the most efficient and economical way. Every thing needed for the work, and from present indications for the completion of the work, is being delivered promptly and carefully upon ordered laborers from the West Indies are being brought in in large numbers, and are being housed in very comfortable quarters, and are being treated with the utmost care. The sanitary conditions on the Canal Zone are now in the most satisfactory condition. It has not proved possible, here or elsewhere, to wholly prevent the occasional appearance of the yellow fever germ, but the disease has been driven out of the Canal Zone, and we have every reason to believe that it will not again gain a foothold. The Canal Zone is now in a healthy condition, and we have every reason to believe that it will continue to be so. The Panama railroad, which is the property of the Canal Company, and which is being used in the work on the Canal Zone, is in good condition, and is being used to its full capacity in the work. The Panama railroad is being used to the utmost in the transportation of men and supplies for the Canal Zone. At present there are about 10,000 laborers on the Canal Zone, and the force is being rapidly increased

Additional Canards.

The following editorial we publish by request of Charlevoix Christian Scientists.

One wonders and is constrained to ask, when will this literary impiritism touching Christian Science, Pleasant View and Mrs. Eddy cease. Truly are the muckrakers in the saddle and in sensational journalism making sad inroads in the most staid of publications.

This time it is McClure's Magazine, and wide is the space that is to be devoted to what it proposes as a biography of Mrs. Eddy and a history of Christian Science.

The editorial announcement in the current number of that magazine proclaims that years have been spent by its representatives in securing data for this wonderful tale, and it promises that practically absolute accuracy will characterize every utterance.

In nothing touching the story is McClure's more sure of its ground than in the picture of Mrs. Eddy which it publishes, and which it has used in its advertisements in magazines and newspapers through out the country, and yet McClure's has no picture of Mrs. Eddy, and the photograph which it has been using and which appears on its pages is of an entirely different woman.

Thus comes to secure material facts and then to paint the picture of a woman who died two years ago in California, and to represent to an intelligent clientele that that picture is a photograph of the central figure in the wonderful literary production, is a surprising achievement in reliability and accuracy.

"False in one thing, false in all" is a legal maxim, and if this guide to the rights of evidence be applied to McClure's, then the whole story is discredited in advance.

We suppose it is wrong to condemn a thing until it has made its appearance, but if the proposed recital of events be illuminated by the spirit of lasciveness, bigotry and intolerance, and utter disregard of honesty and decency that actuated McClure's representatives while in Concord, then, at last, enlightenment and it only remains for a discriminating and fair minded public to write the verdict.

The men who came to Concord did not have for their purpose the ascertainment of facts they did not want the truth as known to Concord people, but ardently desired to have preconceived notions affirmed and slanderous insinuations and statements endorsed.

A citizen of Concord, a trusted and honored official, said to one of McClure's representatives after some questions had been asked and answered, and the bent of the interviewer's mind had been made apparent: "There is little to gain by continuing this conversation, you are not after what I know, you desire that I should approve your guesses. It is clear to me that your purpose is to write Mrs. Eddy down regardless of what her neighbors and those who know her best may say.

Of one of our business men, the same McClure representative asked "Is Mrs Eddy a moral woman?"

The business man looked at the would-be searcher for teeth and asked by way of answer, "Have you a mother, and is she a moral woman?" It seems to me, young man, that it is not the truth or fact you are after, but gossip and slander," and closed the interview by directing the stranger's attention to that part of the building where he could find a door.

In the above I used the word "muckraker" advisedly, for in this city, because of the manner in which McClure's agents pursued their quest, they earned for themselves the title and were discussed as muckrakers.—Editorial in Concord N. H., Daily patriot Dec. 15, 1906.

A Western Wonder.

There's a Hill at Bowie, Tex., that's twice as big as last year. This wonder is W. L. Hill, who from a weight of 90 pounds has grown to over 180. He says: "I suffered with a terrible cough, and doctor gave me up to die of Consumption. I was reduced to 90 pounds, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The week of prayer will be observed, and special meetings will follow. Special preparations are being made for these meetings, and every member of the church is urged and expected to do their part in the work. The Sunday evening after meetings are greatly enjoyed.

The Christmas exercises at the Baptist church were a splendid success and greatly enjoyed by all present. The program was well rendered. Each member of the school received a present besides candy. The former superintendent, now absent, but for ten years or more, faithful in the performance of his duty, was remembered. The pastor now enjoys a fine new silver rocker in his study, the gift of the choir and Sunday school.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Because the election officers in two townships were not supplied with ink, the Cheboygan county treasurership will be filled by a democrat the next two years. The original count gave the republican candidate a majority of 35 votes, but when contested in the circuit court it was decided that the ballots of the two township; be thrown out, as the inspectors had initialed them, instead of putting their full name on the ballots. Only gave the democratic candidate a majority of 26.

The feature of Women. "Can they make men of what they have and girls for what they have not. This is the nature of woman, that her love to torment their lover and refuse him what they most of all themselves desire."—Dante Dale, in "A Duel of the Moon."

Profitable Posts.

More than $7,000 has been paid for a single stamp, and $30,000 for a plate. At the same time, a thousand dollars may be had for one at little desire.

PITIFUL PLIGHT OF ITALIAN EMIGRANTS IN BRAZIL.

Completely at the Mercy of Cruel Taskmasters, Unfortunates Wear Out Their Lives in Hardest Kind of Toil.

For the last few years Italian peasantry have been encouraged to emigrate to Brazil and Rumas and Plata states reviews have published encouraging reports from the plantations of South America for the exploitation of Italian capital and labor, says the Literary Digest. In the year 1901 we are told there were 2,100,000 Italians living in Brazil, 600,000 living in São Paulo, in the south region of the republic. But according to Orazio Bignami, who writes from São Paulo the condition of the Italian farm laborers in that region is most deplorable. Writing in the University Duplomatic Quarterly, he speaks of the miserable slavery of his fellow countrymen. They are compelled to work from 12 to 14 hours a day. The food given them is both unwholesome and insufficient. Physical and mental degeneracy has resulted from the hardships of their lot, and they have sunk to a condition below that of the Indian. This writer says that as Brazil knows disorder and revolution, discussions have driven them to despair, hands have fled and for some years in South America they have merely dragged out of the frying pan into the fire. To quote:

"On their arrival in Brazil they are distributed through the fazendas or farms of the country, and are compelled to labor for twelve thousand years, have not helped this swarming, hungry rabble, but have added to the misery of their miserable lot. Here they are exposed to the weather, to disease, to all the pestilential vapors of night, with no alternative for their exhaustion except a few hours of sleep between sunset and dawn. After years of wretchedness and hitherto, our sister of the soil, those strong and hardy Italian cultivators of the ground, are no longer recognizable. Their physical constitution is broken, their morals is exhausted, their liberty becomes impoverished, their spirit is gone. Even that, once so vaunted in Italy, their ecstatic, for a location and suffering have constructed and turned them into the abject, of slaveland.

"The personal liberty of the Italian settlers has become subject to the whims of cruel taskmasters, and the law in São Paulo affords no protection. Darcel tells us.

On the fazendas the Italian colonists come for nothing. They are made to chattels gifted with the power of locomotion, and have neither liberty nor absolute rights to them, as to the negroes who were formerly their slaves. They are compelled to give up all their living, saving to think only of their duty and to conform to the best estimate of their own inferiority to their masters, at the risk of being severely punished. Weakness and sustenance are indispensable conditions in studying the lash of the slave-driver or foreman, and only in this way can the laborers escape from a worse fate.

The "worse fate" is forfeiture of wages, exposure and sometimes death. The laws and the Italian consulates have no jurisdiction for the Italian farm hands of São Paulo. Thus:

"The laws of the land, which sustain the spirit of the federal liberalism, have no force in protecting the Italian colonist. All the guarantees of which we so freely boast are a mere dead letter so far as he is concerned. The police invariably favor the assassins, and the magistrates exculpate them. Their acquittals are the trophies gained from with the owners of the fazendas, and the horrors of slavery, apparently not a step to by Brazilian legislation, are actually brought back again in all their frightful severity and still flourish under the blue sky of the republic."

"Small Heads" of South America.

The "small heads" belong to a South American race. The skull is peculiarly compact and at the top is no bigger than a five-shilling piece. The then last survivors of the race are women. The brain weighs about one-fifth of the average Bunch Crib. They laight in from three feet to three feet six inches.

—Arch Cameron, of Torch Lake, was in town Saturday.

—Guy Myers went to Grand Rapids yesterday on business.

—Prather, the shoe man, calls your attention to his new ad this week.

—Judge Mayne is holding an adjourned term of court at Traverse City this week.

—The green grass of the lawns is more in evidence than snow, and about everything is on wheels again.

—McLeod Cameron, of Portland, Oregon, is here visiting his father, Alex Cameron. Mr. Cameron is accompanied by his wife.

—Miss Anna Dahmer leaves for her home in New York, Wednesday morning. She has been visiting her brother, Mr. John A. Dahmer.

—The D. M. Ferry Seed Co., has installed a 50 horse power electric motor in their charlevoix warehouse, displacing the gasoline engine heretofore in use.

—Mrs. J. P. Partridge connived with a lot of her sweetest young friends, and gave that young gentleman a surprise party, Wednesday evening, at their home on Park avenue. It was a very pleasant event.

—The new county officers, although elected from January 1st, will not qualify and assume the duties of their respective offices until January 7th, when the board of supervisors approves their bonds. Probably next Monday morning Mr. Emery, who is the only new man at the court house, will be installed as register of deeds, and Mr. McWain will take over the sheriff's office.

—Mrs James W. Harris gave a "stag party" Tuesday evening, at her home, in honor of "Jim," who departs for the far west in a few days. About a dozen gentlemen were present, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Lunch was served in the dining room at 10. No citizen of Charlevoix is held in higher esteem than Mr. Harris, and not only this little circle of personal friends, but the entire community wish him abundant success in his western enterprise.

—The Boyne Citizen, in referring to the recent drowning of Frank Walsh while skating, speaks of a similar fatality there three years ago under similar circumstances. These two sad events stire the memory of the old Pine Lake settlers. The first death of this kind that ever occurred on Pine Lake, so far as known, occurred about thirty-five years ago nearly opposite where Frank Walsh went down. James Miller, son of the late John Miller, the first settler of Evangeline township, and whose farm is now a part of Boyne City, while skating from the mouth of Boyne river to Advance, broke through the ice and was drowned. Hugh Miller, an elder brother, yet lives near the old place. "Jimmie," as he was familiarly known in those days, sailed the "Union Jack," a sail boat, between Charlevoix and "the head." and for many years this was the only communication between the two points.

—Crane's new ad. in this issue will be of interest.

—Sheriff McWain has appointed Jeff Weikel, of this city, as Under Sheriff.

—M. A. Levinson & Co. have a new display in their advertising space this week.

—W. H. Malone, of the Cement Co., has gone to Detroit on a two weeks visit with relatives.

—The steamer Beaver made her island trip yesterday. She will go again Friday or Saturday, weather permitting, but there is nothing very certain after that.

—F. S. Howe, his two daughters and grandchild, will leave Monday for Milwaukee, where they will hereafter reside. Mr. Brown's two sons, Frank and Herb, are already residents of that city.

—The steamer Three Brothers, which was loaded at Boyne City last Thursday as we went to press, got out that day and proceeded to Chicago. Zina is the latest cargo shipped from these waters in many years.

—There seems to be what telegrapheers would call a "drag" on the Bellaire electric wires that light Charlevoix. Twice within a month the lights have gone out, necessitating the starting up of the steam plant here. Something should be done to prevent the recurrence of this thing.

—A leading citizen has spoken to the editor earnestly in favor of Charlevoix moving in the direction of a Carnegie library, and a public meeting is suggested to discuss the proposition. We have no objection to make, but will suggest that if Andrew will not consent to contribute, that perhaps one of the retired or retiring Charlevoix county journalists would utilize his cause by doing the act.

—There departed this life at his home in East Jordan last Saturday morning Mr. Samuel Coulter, one of the earliest pioneers of Charlevoix county, and well known in Charlevoix. Mr. Coulter located on the homestead where he lived until quite recently, in 1867. He was well known as a scan of the strictest integrity. Deceased was the father of Maggie Coulter and Mrs. Perry Bowman, two sons, James and Thomas, well known in Charlevoix. Mr. Coulter was one of the number of SENTINEL subscribers who began with the first issue in 1896.

—Next Tuesday evening at the eight o'clock mass, at St. Mary's Catholic church, there will be solemnized the marriage of Mr. J. Franklin Howard, to Miss Iona Noel O'Neil. The groom has been well and very favorably known here for several years as an officer of the steamship Alpena. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Neil, and has been one of our most popular young women. Both have very many friends in Charlevoix. After a short wedding trip they will be at home at 501 Dixon avenue, Detroit, on January 7th, where the employ of Mr. O'Neil in his extensive fishing business.

—James W. Harris leaves this week for Boise, Idaho, to accept the position of manager of the Idaho Company, a gold dredging corporation, composed of Chicago and California capitalists. Mr. M. H. Harris, formerly railroad agent here, is a stockholder. Mr. Harris was the first engineer to project the ground sluice system, and it was upon his report that the mining plant was established. The savvy and product ive qualities of the mine have been out Mr. Harris' report to the letter, and he has been asked to take charge of the work. Mr. Harris will leave his family here for the present, but they may join him later.

CAUCUS ADJOURNED.

The Senatorial Situation Assumes the Aspect of a Long and Hot Contest.

(Special to Sentinel.)

The republican senatorial caucus which was to have taken place last night was adjourned for one week. This was brought about by the complexity of the situation, and the illness of W. C. McMillan, a leading candidate, although it is thought that Mr. McMillan is practically out of the race.

The fight is between Smith, Hill and Townsend, with Smith leading. The result cannot be foretold, but it looks like a long fight and a dark horse.

The New Postoffice.

The new furniture and fixtures for the Charlevoix postoffice went into use on New Year's day, and it may safely be said that no city in Michigan, or anywhere else, has a finer or more modern and convenient postoffice than Charlevoix. The "ground plan" is altogether different from that of the old office, and the change is a great improvement, although the lobby is smaller than the old one. This fact perhaps is a suggestion that there has been and is now too much useless congestion in the postoffice lobby. Much of it caused by school children who crowd in and remain when they should depart after getting their mail. This is also true of many grown people, and the evil should be remedied.

Of the old office absolutely nothing remains but the safe. The new fixtures are the best that could be procured. They were manufactured by The McLane Co., of Milford, N. H., and set up by under the personal direction of Mr. L. L. Jackson, and expert from the factory.

The wood work is entirely of quarter sawed highly polished oak, wrought in panels, and terminating in an ornamental cornice. All deliveries are guarded by clouded plate glass and cupdized iron grating. These public windows are arranged with reference to convenience to the public—the money order window being next the entrance, the stamp, general delivery and call box deliveries coming next in their order.

The lock boxes and drawers are with ornamental brass fronts, and are of two kinds—the ordinary key and the combination. As the interior takes in the entire front window, both the private and public portions are excellently well lighted. The fixtures cost very nearly $1000, required in a well-ordered postoffice, and are chiefly of oak. The smallest detail is included, even to pencil racks, stock cases, office desk and chairs, and a score of other conveniences. The entire outfit is something for every citizen to be proud of.

The postoffice fixtures are a part of the building, and are included in the government lease of the premises. Therefore, it will be seen, the fixtures were supplied by the owner of the building, Geo. H. Van Pelt, and are a fitting index of the generosity and public spirit of this gentleman. Van pelt never does anything by halves. This characteristic, added to the pride he takes in everything pertaining to Charlevoix always comes to view whenever public improvement dovetails into his interests.

The public has good reason to thank Mr. Van Pelt for this exhibition of his loyalty to Charlevoix.

A Pressing Want.

The SENTINEL has several times called attention to the excellent opening that exists in Charlevoix harbor for a set of marine boxes, for the docking of vessels.

We venture there is no point on this side of Lake Michigan north of Manistee that presents the advantages that here exists for such an enterprise.

An outfit of this kind would not only be a paying investment of itself, but would stimulate industry along the line of ship carpentry and kindred work. The matter is one that should be taken up by the board of commerce, and made a special object of energetic endeavor.

THE CEMENT CO.

Work On the Plant to Be Resumed The Coming Spring.

Mr. G. M. Ferrie, general manager of the Standard Portland Cement Co., of Charlevoix, is in his office again, after a three weeks absence in northern Michigan.

Mr. Ferrie announces that the branch railroad from the junction to the P. M. will be constructed in the spring just as early as they can get at the ground. The grade is already made, and the ties are on the ground.

It is also the company's intention to push the time business at once to an output of two carloads per day, and at the same time carry on the work of developing the quarry facilities to meet future requirements.

Early in the summer work will be commenced on the cement plant proper, and it is confidently expected that cement will be manufactured here during 1907, or early in 1908.

As we have often said we regard the Standard's enterprise here as one of the most promising ventures in the realm of business anywhere in Michigan. This opinion is based upon two facts: First, cement and lime are among that class of staples that are greater demand every year. Second, the Standard has under its feet raw material for a hundred years, and that material is chemically perfect for the purposes required.

Subsidiary to these facts is the fact that the Standard's location, as involving the transportation problem, is all that could be desired—navigable water on the one hand and rail on the other.

Every element that contributes to the successful and profitable manufacture and shipment of their product is possessed by the Standard Co., and there is sure money in it for the investor.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

The Meeting for Charlevoix County Will be Held at Boyne City.

The County Farmers's Institute held annually under state patronage will occur this year at Boyne City on Monday and Tuesday, January 28 and 29.

N. A. Clapp, of Nashville, will be director, and L. R. Taft, of the state agricultural college at Lansing and Miss Jennie Boell, of Ann Arbor, for a number of years secretary of the state grange, will be among the important speakers from outside. The program will be given out later.

E. B. Ward is president, and R. W. Paddock secretary of the local association.

Our Boys' a Pronounced Amateur Success.

The Charlevoix Theater was packed Tuesday night on the occasion of the amateur presentation of "Ben Hur" under the direction of Mr. Geo. H. Hoskyn.

Mr. Hoskyn seems to have derived an inspiration in the adoption of the opening chorus feature of his condition. They serve their purpose well in awakening an appreciative interest from the start. They stir the blood at the start, and serve as an "aspirator" to the audience, and awakener Tuesday evening, and it was, standing alone by itself, a pleasing novelty.

In the comedy Mr. Hoskyn showed the long stage training better, we think, than he did in "Mother-in-Law." His work is not only good, but seems to be hypnotic, for it imparts good work from amateur support. Considering the fact that nearly every member of the company was on the stage for the first time in their lives, every parts was well carried. Following was the cast:

EBEZYN BEN-HUR.....G. H. HOSKYN
Its Brother Messala.....Frank Chapman
Tullius Chamberlain.....Charles Warner
Charles Middleworth.....Will Sorenson
Rampster (Birthday Party servant).Tom Allen
Footface (Birthday Party servant).Ross Allen
Gaspar Chamberlain.....Josephine Cobland
Tirzah Warner.....Agnes Cobland
Mary Malcom.....Ruby Emery
Iras (Tirzah's maid).....ANNA LAMBY

Miss Putnam's solo was well rendered as I well received, and the closing chorus was a fit closing of a very entertaining evening.

The play was given under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, for the benefit of St. Mary's Catholic church, and it is very gratifying to state that our people, including all denominations of church, gave generous support and demonstrated their keen enjoyment of the entertainment.

AT HIS OLD TRICKS.

Rev. Dr. Hysrop Down at St. Johns, Maintaining His Reputation.

From the St. Johns Republican.

The members of the church and congregation of the First Congregational church, of St. Johns, as well as citizens generally, have reason to be thankful for many things in this year of grace.

First, they have a pastor of the highest mental and moral attainments, whose first year's pastorate has quickened the spiritual life of the church. He thought, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all these things shall be added unto you."

Second, they have a magnificent church property, a credit to any city in the land, which is entirely free from debt. To bring about this desirable result, not only the church and congregation but citizens generally have been exceedingly generous. The church fully appreciates this, and can only say to those who have been so generous, and to all others without a church home, come and get your money's worth.

When Dr. James Hyslop accepted the pastorate of this church in October 1905, there was a building indebtedness of nearly $6,000, which has been entirely cleared up under his energetic pastorate.

The great year has been a great year for the church. Christians 1906, is one of the days to be remembered with gratitude. Only as strong church and strong, right thinking community could accomplish so much in so short a time, and then only under able and concentration leadership, such as Dr. Hyslop has given.

S. S. S. in Trouble Again.

It is of very little moment, in these days, what a man may do in a philanthropic cause, he never gets credit for it, and his motives are always misjudged.

In publishing the proceedings of the last meeting of the S. S. S. we had no thought of stirring up discord, or in any way jeopardizing the peace and harmony of the town, but it seems trouble has resulted, which directly affects the standing and integrity of a very deserving gentleman.

Capt. Gretken, whom we mentioned as in arrears for dues for the past two years, come forward and assure us that he paid his dues to Pete Campbell, and that Pete promised him a receipt "later". This item was not included in Capt. Pete's last annual report.

This news born unpleasantness, which is connected with the demand of Capt. Wuthor, that the winter's rent be paid in advance, and that no money of his either or personal stationery shall be used by the members for their correspondence, has somewhat embarrassed the founder in his mission either to prove or disprove that repose that is essential to the correction of human frailties.

Capt. Gretken's name was not present at the last meeting, and it is feared that he remains the reprimand he received from the chair at the previous meeting. Finnean soon on that occasion and made some remarks regarding the selection of new officers that were construed as referring to the chair.

Still another cloud has appeared to darken the sky. Notwithstanding the fact that Capt. John C. Clarke, of the Union Steamboat Co's steamer Petoskey, had been elected an honorary life member of the society, it is discovered that several members are stocked up with flour for the winter that has been identified as coming from the steamer Buckingham, Capt. Gaskie, before leaving for Buffalo Monday, stated that he could not allow this compliment to influence him in the performance of this duty, although he is convinced that such was the intention.

Capt. Epstein Small saved written notice on the Society that he should refuse to pay the dues charged against him on membership account, as the ground that "unions and secret societies were used to get him into the Society." He denies that he has been benefitted in any way—in fact asserts that his health has been injured by smoking the Society's tobacco. The matter was referred to the Committee on resolutions' memorial.

A protest was filed against the reappointment of Capt Pete as pilot, on the ground that he is practically under indictment and awaiting trial on the charge of wandering and otherwise seeking to damage the reputation of a local attorney. The chair ruled the protest out of order, but after an appeal from the ruling the protest was referred to the committee on privileges.

The resolutions' report will be made at the next meeting.

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

"By the bow," said Stafford. "Dear Kidder has some heard the story of Circe?"

"Leftover than, he dared fix, at Eton and Oxford, I almost fancy," said Jerome, smiling.

"Oh, for the modern story is far more wonderful than the classic," said Stafford, feel interested.

"Tell it to Pocahontas," shouted Leland.

"Well, go ahead—I don't care," said Jerome, throwing himself back in his chair.

"About five years ago," began Stafford, "Jerome showed me a little house, about a thousand miles within the Mapa of Kansas, the prairie. The cottage was to be a farm, but the difficulty was to find a farmer. After a few days wait search for the man of his mind's eye, he also thought fit to go to work himself, when, one morning, towards dusk, who appeared at the door of the cottage with the half-dazed look of entire bewilderment on his face? Jerome, of course, was coming towards dusk, when

PORTO RICAN DECISION FAVORS ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Suit at San Juan Involves Ownership of $500,000 Worth of Property—Young Dalis in Street and Captives.

The Supreme Court of Porto Rico has rendered a decision in suits involving a claim, growing in a sense out of the ownership of certain properties. The court holds that the properties, located in Kayuhai, belong to the church and around them and more than 500 acres in round figures, which were formerly the property of the Jesuits, and were seized by the Spanish government when it ordered the Jesuits out of the Spanish dominions, and which were subsequently sold to private parties, belong to the church. The suit was brought by the Roman Catholic Church against the government of Porto Rico, represented by the attorney general.

STEAL COAL FROM TRAIN.

North Dakotans Help Themselves, but Will Pay Railroad Company.

A gathering of citizens and farmers from the vicinity of Ross, a station west of Minot, on the Great Northern, in and around Minot, were caught in the act of stealing coal from a train of the Great Northern railway, passing through Minot, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The train was stalled on the main line, and was being unloaded by the crew, when people living in the vicinity began to come in with sacks, boxes, barrels, etc., and were carrying the coal away. The train was stalled for the purpose of a rest for the crew, and was unloaded on the Great Northern side of the depot platform, and was guarded by police officers and by the company officials, who were on the ground to see that the coal was not stolen. Many of the people who came with sacks, etc., were from the country, and were evidently citizens. The Minot police force, which consists of one man, was evidently equal to the occasion, and did not attempt to interfere with the thieves.

When he arrived at his home he was informed that his wife had died from the effects of a dose of poison. The woman had been in the habit of taking medicine for her nerves, and it is thought she took the poison by mistake, thinking it was medicine.

Ten Thousand Killed.

Ship Wrecked in Typhoon—Thousands Drowned in Canton—Property Damage Enormous.

A message published in Hongkong on Friday morning, from Canton, says that a typhoon struck the city on Wednesday night, and that 10,000 persons lost their lives. The typhoon was accompanied by a heavy rain, which caused the Pearl river to rise 20 feet in two hours, and to flood the city. Thousands of people were drowned in the streets, which were soon under water. Hundreds of boats were wrecked, and as many more were carried out to sea. Many of the victims were washed into the river and drowned. The damage done to property is enormous. The typhoon was the most disastrous experienced in Canton for many years. The loss of life is equal to the loss in the typhoon of last August.

Raises the Price of Coal

An increase of from 10 to 25 cents in the price of coal was made by the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, which has been owing to Gov. Tyr demand for Hanna's coal has increased enormously in the last month, due to the coal famine in the West.

Tongue Removed; Starves to Death

Basil Washburn, Sioux Falls, committed suicide by cutting his throat and tongue out following his attempts to commit suicide by starving himself to death. He was in the operating room of a local sanitarium for a week or more in the care of his brother, who was in charge of the institution, but after he was discharged he got hold of a razor and cut his throat and tongue out.

WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.

Brave Deed by Member of The Charlevoix Life Saving Service.

Ward W. Bennett of the Charlevoix Life Saving Service saved the life of an eleven year old boy named Harry Tobin who skated through thin ice into the channel of Crow Lake. The lad's companions had gone on around the treacherous spot toward their homes to holiday dinners at the hour was noon and the day was Christmas. Harry followed but failed to notice where the new and old ice joined. It chanced that Bennett, Surfman No. 2, Charlevoix station his brother Frank C. Bennett No. 5, from Sleeping Bear Life Saving Station and two young men were walking on the ice but Ward Bennett had delayed to speak to one of the skaters. He was hurrying to join his companions who were at the shore when he heard the crash of breaking ice and turning, saw the lad in the water. Throwing off his coat he ran to the spot which was near the channel of the lake. The boy's floating cap marked the place where he had gone down the third time. But the child's exertions had roiled the bottom of the lake and Bennett could not see him. In diving his foot slipped and struck the water then had to work his way under and in the meantime the child, not knowing what he was doing had struggled onward toward the channel. Bennett finally caught his clothing and rose to the surface. The water was full of broken ice, the clinging of lack heavy with water, the child unconscious and the rescuer benumbed with the cold. It seemed for a time that both might go under the ice. Frank Bennett, Surfman from Sleeping Bear, had cut a rope from a sled lost in was too short and for a time chilled the gasp. Frank by far and his companions held his feet while he worked until the drowning boy and rescuer were drawn near then the child was lifted out and Ward Bennett followed. Both surfmen then used the service method of resuscitation, using one of their companions as a barrel. The child soon cried with the pain of revival; he was then hurried on the sled, as he could not walk, to the nearest house and heat applied. Violent trembling ensued for some two hours and then the child recovered sufficiently to be moved in blankets to his home.

Bennett's muscles were knotted with the cold and exposure and he was speedily assisted into dry clothes. His substantially plunging to the relief of the boy was the only reason that the child was not overcome beyond help because of the circumstances of ice current and the little fellow working out to the channel.

Bennett has done much to show the public that the Government stations are manned by brave, unselfish men. Nor did Bennett receive his value for summer service of regular duty in uniform but rushed lessly plunged into freezing water among floating ice with the danger of being drawn under the old ice or remaining by an over long search for the child who had sunk the third time in such manner that he was not in sight of the swimmer.

The Right Name.

Mr. August Sherpe, the popular owner of the pose, at Port Huron, Ia., says: "He Kings New Life Pills are rightly named; they act quite agreeably do more good and make one feel better than any other laxative." Guaranteed to cure biliousness and constipation. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store.

South Charlevoix Correspondence.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brown went to Ellsworth Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins returned to Harbor Springs Saturday.

We forgot to mention last week that Mr. and Mrs. R. Coats spent Christmas with their daughter and son, Mr. and Mrs. Will Campbell at Charlevoix.

Mrs. Woolley's baby is very sick also Annie Webster's little girl is on the sick list.

What Counsel From the South.

"I want to give some valuable advice to those who suffer with lame back and kidney trouble," says J. H. Hinsdale, of Beck, Tenn. "I have to an absolute certainty that Electric Bitters will positively cure this distressing condition. The first bottle gave the great relief and after taking a few weeks more, I was completely cured; so completely that it seemed a pleasure to recommend this great remedy." Sold under guarantee at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c.

Masonic Installation.

The SENTINEL incorrectly printed the list of Masonic officers last week and we again give the roster. The ceremonies of the Charlevoix Theatre last Thursday evening was an event of note. Past Grand Master F. E. Forrell officiated, and conducted the ceremonies with much ability, assisted by Past Master E. H. Green as Grand Marshal. Following is the list of officers:

W. M.—W. Herschel Miller.
S. W.—Wm. H. Collins.
J. W.—W. E. Parmelee.
Treas.—T. G. Hines.
Secy.—Fred A. Butler.
S. D.—Meyer A. Levinson.
J. D.—Horace Fowler.
Chaplain—Rev. Berry.
Marshal—S. M. Hose.
Stewards—E. St. Johns, F. N. Chapel.
Tiler—Wm. Cook.

A male quartet, composed of Messrs. Jacobs, Wilkinson, Malone and Kirtepy a trio, consisting of Mesdames Jefferies, Hines and Madison, and the Levinson orchestra furnished the music.

After the conclusion of the ceremonies, the floor was cleared, and a large part of the audience danced till midnight.

A Wise Petoskey Politician.

A Petoskey political correspondent of the Detroit Journal, very wise in his day and generation, tells the people just how every Northern Michigan senator and representative will vote on U. S. senator and gives up strong as follows

If the Board of Charlevoix county is not pledged and unprejudiced, but is for McMillan, Mr. Stroud is for Burrows. If Charlevoix county is not pledged and unprejudiced and is in favor of Burrows, Mr. Stroud is for McMillan. If the Board Health man is a partisan who is for Burrows, Mr. Stroud is for McMillan. If Charlevoix county is pledged, Mr. Stroud is pledged, and Charlevoix county is pledged to McMillan, Mr. Stroud is pledged to Burrows. If Charlevoix county is pledged to McMillan and unprejudiced judge of the merits of the two men, Mr. Stroud is for McMillan. Stroud is for McMillan anyhow.

If the Petoskey correspondent is as ignorant in all other matters as he is about Charlevoix county political affairs, he is a fit subject for the asylum for feeble minded. There was never a bigger piece of rot written than the above in all respects. Smith against Burrows two years ago, and Smith against the field now are two different propositions. Mr. Stroud is a pronounced William Alden Smith man.

Cured of Long Trouble.

"It is now eleven years since I had a narrow escape from Consumption," writes C. O. Floyd, a leading business man of Keenan, S. C. "I had run down in weight to 115 pounds, and coughing was constant, both by day and by night. Finally I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and continued this for about six months, when my cough and lung trouble were entirely gone and I was restored to my normal weight, 170 pounds." Thousands of persons are healed every year. Guaranteed at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

—A man named Welch, of Cheboygan, was here Saturday looking at the tug Martin with a view to purchase. We have not learned the outcome.

—The campaign for sugar beet acreage is now fairly under way, and good reports come in from all quarters. Farmers do not require any coaxing this winter.

Henry Baldwin, of this place, was married Tuesday in Cheboygan, to Miss Corlett, of that place. Will Marshall went down from here as best man, and carried with him the hearty good wishes of a large circle of the groom's friends.

—The men of the Methodist church and congregation are planning for an oyster supper on Friday evening the 18th. It is to be one of the feed of the season—Do not forget the date. Plan to come and enjoy a pleasant evening.

—The Salvation Army will hold a Midwinter camp meeting at its hall all next week, winding up Sunday with an all day meeting. The three local pastors will preach the first three nights of the week, and Mrs. Jacobs will sing. All welcome.

W. W. Washburn expects a lively winter and spring over at his shipyard. There are hauled out or moored here awaiting repairs, now the tugs J. V. Taylor, Ellis H., L. W. Knapp, and the steamer Columbia and Crescent. Several other boats are expected to pull out in the spring for repairs.

There is one mystery connected with the senatorial contest at Lansing, that has not been solved up to the hour of our going to press, and that is why bill seven of Joyce Fate has not announced himself as a dark horse candidate for senator. The honorable bill must be sick.

John Green, a resident of Beaver Island, was adjudged insane here Tuesday morning, and taken to Traverse City under the care of Officer Green exhibited symptoms of insanity last summer and was brought here for examination, but was allowed to return home. Last week the man's neighbors entered the proceeding anew, claiming he was causing much trouble, and was considered dangerous. Under sheriff Wickel went over Saturday and brought him here.

—John Monroe, of East Jordan, was here Monday arranging preliminaries for the construction of the new bridge protection pier, for which he has the contract. He expects to begin work early in the spring.

—As some criticism is being made of the advance in price of the boxes at the post office, it is not out of place for us to state that the increase in box rentals is due to a general order from the post office department at Washington, and that no part of these rentals accrue to the benefit of the local office, but are all forwarded to the general department.

—The Shakespeare Study Club was entertained on Saturday afternoon at the house of Mrs. J. L. Crane on Park Ave., by the executive committee of the club, consisting of Mrs Martin Pew, Mrs. Harsha, V. Pew, and Mrs. Crane Sec'y and Treas. During the afternoon Mrs. Harsha read an excellent paper on "The Taming of the Shew," Mrs. Woolley gave a finely rendered reading entitled "The Musician," and Mrs Swinton a piano solo entitled "A Cradle Song" by John Paisley Vidor.

—St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent,—Mr. D. C. Loveday and wife entertained with a Christmas dinner, their Charlevoix, Mich., friends at their little bungalow on Michigan avenue, South side Isleglen. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Bethouse, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones and Mr. and Mrs. William Frances. These familiar faces surrounding the festive board helped to make them forget for a time that they were hundreds of miles from their families and homes in the north, and all enjoyed a "Merry Christmas."

Important Real Estate Change.

On Monday David C. Nettleton sold his north side home to A. Louis Lehman of New Orleans. Consideration $7000.

The property consists of about four acres, and is one of the most desirable resort locations in the city. It has a frontage of 297 feet on Round Lake, and 120 feet on Dixon avenue—the two corner lots on Dixon avenue having been sold some time ago.

Mr Lehman, who is a wealthy New Orleans insurance man, was here last week and took over the property. While here he stated that it was his intention to make the place one of the finest resort homes in the city. The house will be thoroughly rebuilt and the grounds laid out in artistic form. He expects to be here early in the spring to begin the work.

Mr Nettleton owns the subdivision know as the Pape home, near by, into which he will move.

Mr Lehman spent all last summer looking about the resorts of Northern Michigan for a summer home, and finally decided that Charlevoix had them all "beaten a mile."

County Road Institute.

The county road institute for Charlevoix county will be held at the court house in the city of Charlevoix, Monday, January 21st, beginning at 10 a. m.

Highway Commissioners in attendance will receive their expenses and one day's pay. State Highway Commissioner Horatio S. Earle, will be present.

There is no phase of our business activity that does not develop into the question of good roads. It is not only vital to the farmer, but very important to the merchant, the banker and the doctor.

All interested are cordially invited to attend.

NEW WRECKING TUG.

Magnificent Boat Being Built to Replace the Favorite.

From the Detroit News.

One of the most interesting vessels now being built on the great lakes is a big wrecking tug for the Great Lakes Towing Co. at the Buffalo drydock. The keel of this monster tug was laid in November last and the work has progressed so rapidly it is expected the vessel will be complete by the middle of February. The tug is being constructed entirely of steel and is 196 feet keel, 43 wide and 20 feet deep. Double steel ribs, one foot apart, are being placed in the vessel, making it very strong and capable of performing the task of an ice crusher.

The engine to be installed is one of the largest on fresh water, a triple expansion engine with 2,500 indicated horse power. Area of power, 24 inches high, 39 inches intermediate, 65 12 inches low, turning an 18 foot wheel with a 20 inch stroke and making 140 revolutions a minute. Two Scotch boilers, 15 x 12 feet in diameter, will be installed. These, too, are larger than any now in use.

The building of the tug is not a contract job, but the estimated cost is $120,000; more than is paid for vessels three times its size. The most complete and modern equipment will be installed and any improvements that may suggest themselves as the work advances will immediately be made. It is stated that the vessel will be the most complete wrecking tug in the world. The vessel will be of 530 tons, with a draft of eight feet aft and five feet forward. A complete system of ballast tanks will be installed so that the vessel can be lied down to to feet if necessary. A complete punch shop, a blacksmith shop and a boiler shop are among the improvements to be placed aboard the vessel. Another feature to be added is a pair of punching shears. Forward in the vessel is to be constructed a big "A" frame, with two automatic grab buckets, for use in lightering.

Sleeping accommodations for 30 men will be provided for in the tug. Thal the vessel may be brilliantly lighted, two 10 kilowatt generators will supply currents for hundreds of electric lights, including two powerful searchlights, one forward and one aft. The towing machinery for the tug is larger than any ever used on the great lakes. Imported steel cable, 2 12 inches in diameter, will be used. The tug is being so strongly built that it will be possible for it to propel itself half its length on its anchors without any danger of damage. In fact it is intended to start the vessel up the lakes in February, regardless of weather conditions.

Difficult as this may seem at this time, the tug will have two heavy smokestacks amidships, will be painted a pure white and will greatly resemble a battle ship.

As soon as completed and launched, the vessel will start for St. Ignace, where it will supplant the wrecking tug favorite. It is interesting to note that a charge of $750 a day will be made for the use of the new tug.

Another feature of the tug and now complete at the yards is a horse-power gasoline launch, 35 feet long, with an eight foot beam. Accommodations for this boat is being provided for aboard the tug.

Elsion Hotel Improvements.

The most conspicuous feature of the Hotel Elsion improvements is the beautiful new dining room that was thrown open to public use last Sunday.

It is just forty feet square, and, with its beautiful panelled wainscoting and fresh wall finish, is, without question, the finest in Charlevoix county, and one of the prettiest and most commodious in Northern Michigan.

The new dining room is all made for the elegant lobby and office, which has been the boast of the traveling public.

The improvements include a considerable increase in the number of sleeping rooms.

Caucus Adjourned One Day Smith to the Lead.

Special to the Sentinel.

The republican senatorial caucus adjourned last night without taking a ballot, and on the 50th and last ballot he received 44 votes.

Smith received 35 votes on the first ballots, and on the 50th and last ballot he received 44.

Hill came next with 37 votes.

The Supervisors

The board of supervisors will positively close its session today.

Very little of routine work was done. The special committee appointed to visit the poor farm reported with inventory. The superintendents of poor were instructed to publish their proceeding quarterly in three papers.

A resolution was adopted designating all jails in the county as county jails.

Public Meeting.

There will be a public meeting at the hall in the Charlevoix County Bank Block, on Friday evening of this week, at which the attendance of every tax payer is requested.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss matters of general interest, including water and light, and the reports of the Board of Health and Cemetery trustees.

The question of making an effort to secure a public library will be considered.

The call for the meeting is issued by Mayor Iddings.

Poultry Show.

The Northern Michigan Poultry Association will hold its 5th annual show at Traverse City, Michigan January 22, 23, 24 and 25th.

The previous shows of this association compared with the prospects at least double the number of exhibits this year, make it a certainty that this will be one of the best shows held in Michigan.

The breeders of high class poultry in this end of the state have heretofore never had the opportunity of exhibiting their birds without a long distance shipment by express, but now Traverse City we have within easy reach a place where birds may be exhibited, cared for by a competent judge and premiums won which will have a good place for advertising birds for breeding purposes.

We are in receipt of the premium list filled with useful information and very generous advertising space is allowed. In it we find the rules and regulations of the association and the premiums offered for exhibitors in the show.

To attend the show itself will be well worth while even if not an exhibitor. We commend the highly recommended to the consideration of the general public the efforts of the association. They promote the interests of poultry and know you want to get the best results from a flock of hens. We congratulate Traverse City on this progressive feature and hope it may become the center of poultry interests in Northern Michigan.

L. T. P. A. Election.

At a recent meeting of the Lakeland Tuberculosis Protective Association, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Pres.—P. D. Campbell.
V. P.—Thos. E. Nowland.
Treas.—Geo. W. Weaver.
Sec.—Wm. Geer.
Bus. Mgr.—S. E. Hale.

The Association will have a fish supper tonight at Nowland's restaurant, tendered by the proprietor.

Boyne Falcons.—The fellows, Joe Wilson, who threw a somersault plump through the large plate glass window in the Hotchkiss block last summer, and Frank Wilson, who, while on a visit to Petoskey last Christmas, was captured by wood by Sheriff Shelby and sent to the county jail for two days on a charge of lad conduct, have disappeared from their respective haunts since Christmas. Joe was a member of the Boyne Falcons basketball team, and it is said that he has left the city with the team, and has stopped off at Gaylord and Traverse City and there had games or drawn. It sads is the case, and it seems to be the most rational solution, the lady may be broken and the team may take the spot where the manager is waiting. A more substantial explanation of the matter would be welcome.

NORWOOD NEWS.

The W. C. T. U. meets with Mrs. Kate Hibbard next Friday afternoon.

Our school which has been closed for 2 week's vacation, commenced on Monday.

Miss Carrie Norton of Thompsonville, a sister of Mrs. Flynn left for home on Tuesday last.

Mrs Hankey who was here the past week visiting at Dr. Harris returned to her home at East Ann last Tuesday.

Freeman Valentine who has been at home the past 2 weeks on vacation, returned last week to Bay Shipste.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Carel were here last week visiting relatives and friends, left for Clarion last Thursday.

Mr. S. B. Clause who was in Chicago last week, returned on Tuesday on account Mrs. Chase being suddenly taken sick. Mrs. Chase is much better, and out of all danger.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Georgia Colwell is again able to be with us. She has been absent 3 1/2 weeks on account of sickness. Gil is working hard to make up the work she has lost during that time.

A letter was received from Ellsworth last week, stating that she is much better but will not be able to return to the Normal for several weeks.

Olive Sherman who was called to her home at Central Lake, on account of her mother's illness is now sick with la Grippe.

The Normal room has a new clock—one it is something which we needed very much.

Georgia Colwell is a member of last year's class, visited the Normal Wednesday. Miss Jessie is doing some teaching in the Bohemian school near East Jordan.

The Normal class gave a reception Friday, Dec. 21st, from 2 to 5 p. m. Not many of the members were present as a large number of students left for their respective homes the day before.

Pennsylvania Notes.—Mrs. Ella Bidwell left Friday afternoon, for a visit with her brother, James Earl, of Mason, Chenango county, Hattie G. Earl graduates at Syracuse University, in June. Mr. Earl is a member of more than a time. Mr. Tim, was at Kanona in the city, having lived here many years.

Jacquette Hannah a well known and well of the farmer living at Hannibal, Oswego county, who was serving a twenty day sentence in the Oswego county jail for assault upon his family, received a terrible shock from which was a telegram came from New Orleans, that his son, Jay, was his wife. Hannah had served but six days of the sentence, but Superintendent Chase of Sheriff hastened to lay the facts before Governor Warner over the telephone and the governor immediately commuted his sentence to thirty days and the prisoner was released in time to catch a train from the home.

Jacquette Hannah, Aldo, about the last of November a man moved 10 miles, who had made his home at and about Boyne Falls for some time, and who was addicted to excessive drinking, left the place of his employment several miles out in the country to go home. He was not intoxicated at the time but did not reach Boyne Falls, nor has he been seen since that time. Recently the Hodgepodge received news that Sheriff McWain was notified of the occurrence. He made a trip over there last week with others who went to the road taken by the man in an effort to find a trace to his disappearance. Their search was nearly rewarded by finding the clothing scattered about in the woods. A diligent search failed to reveal the man's whereabouts, and it is the opinion of the others who the Sheriff had been attacked or delirious and in such a condition he stripped off his clothing and threw it away and then had gone on drunk. It sads is the case, and it seems to be the most rational solution, the lady may be broken and the man may take the spot where the manager is waiting. Why Goats Are "Humpy."

The world is full of supposition and one of the wonders is that the goat is "humpy." This supposition arose when the Texas cattle raised Thomas at that time the man was very unpopular. It was noticed that when a string of the animals was driving the road on the Texas long-trend and time he was dead it became dull. Its organs, which look the popular fancy and so much "wisdom" and have remained on exhibition. Very lately they be not chance at all in the fingers of a living person, and the whole matter is like that concise which once caused an event throughout the scientific world. It was to it that when you put a fish in a bowl of water the weight of the bowl is not increased. Many learned reasoning were given, but finally one duffer accepted a bowl of water with and without the fish in it, and then added the spider.

"Why, mamma, what do you mean? Jay home from the way he talks after the race, I wouldn't say they were favorite."

RICH MAN FOUND MURDERED IN KANSAS CITY.

Corpse Horribly Mutilated—Robbers Evidently Are Responsible—Wife of Wealthy Illinois Farmer Is Shot to Bed.

Thomas Thomson, aged 87, gave a small reception at his home in Kansas City, Kan., last Thursday evening. The guests were all old friends of the family, and they had a very pleasant time. Mr. Thomson was in good health and spirits and showed no signs of the trouble that was to come to him. The guests left his home at about 11 o'clock, and he was last seen alive by his servant, who saw him retire to his bedroom on the second floor of his residence at 1000 Minnesota avenue. Nothing more was heard from the aged man until his dead body was found in his bedroom Sunday morning. The discovery was made by his son, Robert Thomson, who lives with his father and who had been away from the city for a few days. He had arrived home Saturday night, and had gone to his father's bedroom to awaken him and have him open the door for him, as he had left his key with the servant.

The door was found to be locked, and Robert had to break it in. The room was in disorder, and the aged man was lying on the floor in his night clothes, with his head in a pool of blood. He had been beaten with a club, and his throat was cut from ear to ear. The wounds on his head were such as might have been made by a club with which the murderer had beaten his victim. The throat cut was a deep one, and had evidently been made with a razor. The razor was found in the room, and it was covered with blood. The throat cut was the one that caused the death of the old man, but he was evidently stunned by the blows on his head before his throat was cut. The razor with which the murder was committed belongs to the victim, and he had been in the habit of using it in his bedroom. The murder was evidently committed by someone who was familiar with the surroundings of the victim, and who was familiar with the habits of the victim. The murder was evidently committed for the purpose of robbery, and the victim was robbed of a large sum of money. The murder was evidently committed by someone who was familiar with the fact that the victim had been in the habit of having a large sum of money in his bedroom

The Public Meeting.

The public meeting at Macatawa Hall Friday evening was well attended and a profitable gathering, as affording tax payers an opportunity to become better acquainted with the conduct of public affairs.

There seems to have been only a hazy understanding of affairs connected with the operation of our public utilities. The people did not fully understand electric light and water matters as operated under the new system, although every detail has been made public many times through the press. The Board of Public Works made a clear and full statement of present conditions, outlining future action to the water department to the satisfaction of all present. It was made clear that, in spite of small annoyances incident to the inauguration of a new system, the change has been good to the advantage of the city, and promises well for the future.

The Cemetery Board and Board of Health made reports, reviewing conditions in their departments, and both reports was such information that was valuable and satisfactory.

The report of the cemetery board showed the following:

Balance on hand Mar. 1, 1906	$ [illegible]
Receipts	[illegible]
Expenditures	[illegible]
Balance on hand Mar. 1, 1907	[illegible]
Lots sold	[illegible]
Interments	[illegible]
Perpetual care funds	[illegible]

The board's plans for the future include paving walks on main grade, a suitable entrance to cemetery, more beautified with flowers and shrubbery, streets and alleys improved.

The Board of Health reported that the expenditures for the year had been $[illegible], of this amount $175.50 was expended on the city hospital. The board has reason to believe that the city water is as pure as any in the world, but in view some, as an analysis, a copy of which will be given to every water taker.

The Complaint Hydsy matter was fully discussed, and the following committee appointed to investigate and settle: W. H. Hamilton, John Nicholls, E. H. Green, A. Hudnut.

FAVORITE BURNED.

The Famous Old Wrecking Tug Destroyed at St. Ignace.

The Burning of the wrecking tug Favorite, at St. Ignace, last week marks the passing of one of the most famous craft on the great lakes. Built in 1864 at Port Howard, Wis., the boat was originally a Fish trader on Lake Michigan. In 1870 she was purchased by Capt. Martin Swain and Parker & Milton, and was rebuilt as a wrecker. A. A. Parker was ready responsible for the enterprise which was the forerunner of the insurance companies salaging vessels in distress. Previous to that time the wrecking business was not conducted on a strictly business basis, so it may be said that the Favorite revolutionized the work.

In her 17 years as a wreck the Favorite saved millions of dollars worth of vessel property and engaged in many a tough wrecking job. Capt. Martin Swain, the well known wrecking master, now a resident of Detroit, was her master for years.

The Great Lakes Towing Co., owner of the Favorite, is having a big wrecker built at Buffalo, which will replace the Favorite.

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH.

The Fifth District Congressman Wins the Senatorial Battle With Flying Colors.

While yet the session of was being printed last Thursday, Wm. Alden Smith had won the fight for the senatorship. Afternoon conferences developed disintegration of Hill forces to some extent, and from the Mr. Milton line of battle came overtures that determined the result. When evening came the caucus roll call found no votes for Smith—opponents of 30 more than required.

The vote was followed by speeches from Smith and the rest, in which a spirit of harmony and good will prevailed. The formal election by the legislature occurred Tuesday. Mr. Smith returns to Washington as a member of Congress, in which capacity he will serve until March 4th, next, when he will take the place of Senator Sanford from Michigan, the state to which he was born, and in which, by his own consequence and industrious devotion to duty, absolute honesty of purpose, and the brains with which he was endowed, he established the rocky, dangerous political mountain, and now stands at the top, facing the future, in the radiant sunlight of popular favor. Following is the career of Senator Smith:

Born, Dowagiac, Mich., May 12, 1859.

Removed with parents to Grand Rapids, 1872.

Newsboy and messenger in West ern Union Telegraph company office.

Page in Michigan house of representatives, 1879.

Studied law and admitted to the bar, 1883.

State game warden, 1887-1891.

Member republican state central committee, 1888, 1890, 1892.

General counsel Chicago & West Michigan and Lake Erie, Grand Rapids & Western railroads, 1894.

Elected to congress from Fifth district of Michigan, 1895.

Re-elected to congress, 1896, 1898, 1900, 1902, 1904, 1906.

Death of the Michigan delegation in congress, 1906.

Nominated for United States senator by caucus of the Republican of the Michigan legislature, January 16, 1907.

What it Means.

Not in recent years, at least, has a senatorial election in Michigan been arranged and arranged political conditions and alignments so that affairs has not reserved a tension. It is not to say, with equal certainty, that never has a national political atmosphere been more thoroughly cleared and clarified.

The result means weeks upon the political bench that will soon be in session in the Michigan and will shape of under the auspices of the state. The Hon. "Tip" Armstrong is chairman of the republican state central committee. The statement from Washington, January 11, 1907, that a cargo of hardwood lumber at East Jordan, Mich., and towed it to Charlevoix. There was displayed there by the weather bureau a signal predict big a storm, and a bulletin was posted in the same saying that it was dangerous for vessels to leave port. The master of the Mosell saw the storm signal, but did not examine the bulletin board. He left port in the hour afterward he was overtaken by a south west gale, which caused the vessel to lose her deck load, besides damaging her hull.

The owner of the cargo brought suit against the schooner to recover for the loss of the deck load, alleging that the master was negligent in leaving port in the face of a storm signal and bulletin. The case was tried and the district court held that the owner of the cargo was entitled to recover. An appeal was taken and the circuit court of appeals has just reversed the decision, and holds that leaving port was a part of the navigation of the vessel, and that the case was therefore within the Harter act, and the owners were not liable.

The court holds that navigation includes the time and manner of leaving, the course to be taken and the said to be carried, so that even though the master was negligent in storm signal and bulletin and sails in the face of these the owner is not liable for the damage which such is in regard, under the terms of the Harter act.

Central Lake Torch: Arthur Nelson of St. Joseph, Mich., is here visiting his sister, Mrs. C. Henry. Mr. Nelson is a fine organist and a composer of sacred anthems, and will pass some time at the organ in the M. E. church Sunday morning.

Nominated for United States senator by caucus of the Republican of the Michigan legislature, January 16, 1907.

What it Means.

Not in recent years, at least, has a senatorial election in Michigan been arranged and arranged political conditions and alignments so that affairs has not reserved a tension. It is not to say, with equal certainty, that never has a national political atmosphere been more thoroughly cleared and clarified.

The result means weeks upon the political bench that will soon be in session in the Michigan and will shape of under the auspices of the state. The Hon. "Tip" Armstrong is chairman of the republican state central committee. The statement from Washington, January 11, 1907, that a cargo of hardwood lumber at East Jordan, Mich., and towed it to Charlevoix. There was displayed there by the weather bureau a signal predict big a storm, and a bulletin was posted in the same saying that it was dangerous for vessels to leave port. The master of the Mosell saw the storm signal, but did not examine the bulletin board. He left port in the hour afterward he was overtaken by a south west gale, which caused the vessel to lose her deck load, besides damaging her hull.

The owner of the cargo brought suit against the schooner to recover for the loss of the deck load, alleging that the master was negligent in leaving port in the face of a storm signal and bulletin. The case was tried and the district court held that the owner of the cargo was entitled to recover. An appeal was taken and the circuit court of appeals has just reversed the decision, and holds that leaving port was a part of the navigation of the vessel, and that the case was therefore within the Harter act, and the owners were not liable.

The court holds that navigation includes the time and manner of leaving, the course to be taken and the said to be carried, so that even though the master was negligent in storm signal and bulletin and sails in the face of these the owner is not liable for the damage which such is in regard, under the terms of the Harter act.

Central Lake Torch: Arthur Nelson of St. Joseph, Mich., is here visiting his sister, Mrs. C. Henry. Mr. Nelson is a fine organist and a composer of sacred anthems, and will pass some time at the organ in the M. E. church Sunday morning.

About Are You Going to Do About It Farmers.

When the sugar factory wound up its 1906 operations, the beet outlook for 1907 looked bright. Farmers all expressed themselves as satisfied with results not withstanding a backward and unfavorable season.

While the acreage was only about half what was necessary to make the campaign a reasonably profitable one, the company expressed itself as satisfied, considering what seemed late prospects for the future. The farmers talked good and the beets were satisfactory.

Now, we are sorry to say, the farmers are not coming to the help of the sugar factory as they should, and there is danger looking in the air. Why is this? The profit of the crop and its adaptability to this climate and soil has been conclusively demonstrated. When the crop has been properly cared for low compared to any other crop in its profit to the farmer. All doubt about these matters have been removed. In other parts of Michigan farmers are enthusiastic in the matter of beet culture.

Figures will not lie! The sugar beet is a sure and a profitable crop. Why do not the farmers understand that if they keep the sugar factory they must make it a farmers institution, and settle it themselves.

Don't let this matter go until you awake up some morning kicking yourself.

About That "Mormon Island."

The daily papers are printing a dispatch from Chicago to the effect that Wilbur Dowie's successor in Zion, is about to establish a colony on Mormon Island, near Boyne City."

The Chicago reporter who dreamed up this story must have eaten a nightmare, there is no "Mormon island" near Boyne City. Secondly, there is no island of any sort near Boyne City. There is "Holy Island," at the mouth of South Arm, but it is nearer East Jordan than Boyne City, and is about 300 acres in area. The Mormons used it fifty years ago as a "place of sacrifice," roasting an ox there whenever they wanted to getting hold of the necessary ox.

Perhaps Voliva has his eye on Beaver Island, the original Zion, if so, we can give him a few pointers. "Beaver," Bill Gallagher tries there, sold it Voliva ever gets there with his scows and tools up against, right. Beaver Island is the matter of temporal way, tied sore Voliva.

The special states that Voliva is on a trip north to "look out the land." It is to Beaver Island, we may look for him any day to take passage on the U. S. mail steamship Little Manta.

An Important Marine Decision.

A decision has just been rendered by the U. S. district court of appeals of Chicago which is important to all lake shipping interests. The decision hinges upon the seaworthiness of a cargo of hardwood lumber at East Jordan, Mich., and towed it to Charlevoix. There was displayed there by the weather bureau a signal predict big a storm, and a bulletin was posted in the same saying that it was dangerous for vessels to leave port. The master of the Mosell saw the storm signal, but did not examine the bulletin board. He left port in the hour afterward he was overtaken by a south west gale, which caused the vessel to lose her deck load, besides damaging her hull.

The owner of the cargo brought suit against the schooner to recover for the loss of the deck load, alleging that the master was negligent in leaving port in the face of a storm signal and bulletin. The case was tried and the district court held that the owner of the cargo was entitled to recover. An appeal was taken and the circuit court of appeals has just reversed the decision, and holds that leaving port was a part of the navigation of the vessel, and that the case was therefore within the Harter act, and the owners were not liable.

CONGRESS MONDAY morning adjourned by motion on the house was presented by the senate and Thursday by the house—adjourned, concluded our only a compromise review of the recent happenings in state affairs as related to legislative and executive action, but contains several important recommendations. Among others was a recommendation that the legislature should provide for two cent fares on all railroads in the lower peninsula, except the few independent lines earning less than $3,000 a mile, and three cents per mile on all upper peninsula lines. That a total tax rate that be established in the state prison at Jackson, that the payment of primary school moneys should be limited at $3.50 for each pupil, the remainder to go to the state educational institution, and that the railroad car shortage situation should be investigated, are other important recommendations made by Governor Warner. It will probably be found that the governor has well interpreted legislative willingness and popular desire.

At a meeting of the republican state central committee held at Lansing last week it was decided to hold the spring state convention at Grand Rapids, Thursday, February 14. This convention will nominate candidates for two justices of the supreme court, two regents of the University and a member of the state board of education, the latter to fill the vacancy caused by the election of L. L. Wright as superintendent of public instruction. It has been officially announced that the new primary election will not apply to the selection of delegates for the February state convention, and all contests not governed by special primary legislation will be settled by a vote of the delegates in the old way.

Wise Counsel From the South.

"I wants to give some advice to anyone in them who walks with dem crooked and lonesome ways," says Jim Hickenbottom, of Cook County, Ga., "I ain't exactly the man I use to be, but I can still generally pass little old lowness conditions. Two years ago I gave one great relief and after taking a few more bottles, I was completely cured, so completely that it becomes a pleasure to recommend this great remedy." Sold under guarantee by F. This fact one guarantee of permanent character to the service which seem to be forgotten by the large congregations of the present.

Cured of Lung Trouble.

"It is now almost two years since I had a narrow escape from Consumption," writes C. G. Pugh, a leading barber of Newport, N. C. "I was down in weight to 130, pale, and coughing was constant. Both my day and night sweats. Finally I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and soon found the for about six months, when my cough had long ceased, I was taking 20 pounds of flesh. I can now do my work and have had no return of the trouble." For Coughs and Colds, this marvelous medicine is unequaled. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. Price 50c and $1.00.

In making up his annual report Clerk Hickinson finds that on Jan. 1, Elmira had 2,000 more people than at the census taken last June, 52,000 to 50,000, a gain of 4 per cent. It is now also found that the census of Ithaca has been corrected by the court and it gains 600 inhabitants, having 21 still on the records.

PROVED RIGHT MAN

CANDIDATE FOR MISSIONARY WORK FULLY TESTED.

Novel Examination Showed He Was in Possession of All the Qualities Requisite for Success in Chosen Work.

Successful missionary work in heathen countries is done only by scientific men who possess a rare combination of physical traits. In no more exact the examination of the candidate fitness to cope with the pressure of this condition. But the following story shows how an unusual examination made proves that a certain young man was just the sort of missionary needed.

It was when the examiner said the candidate word to be at his home at three o'clock in the morning. When the appointed man arrived at the appointed time, he was shown into the study, where he waited for two hours. At length the examiner appeared and asked the candidate how early he had risen.

"Three o'clock, sah."

"All right, we breakfast time now, come in and have some breakfast."

After breakfast they went back to the study.

"Well, my lad," the examiner, "I was appointed to examine you as to your fitness for the mission field. Did you study, sah?"

"Yes, sah, I thought I ought."

"Do you have trouble with your lessons?"

"Yes, sah, I have."

"Well, what was the trouble?"

"Sleep."

"All right, that's a reason. You'll do that sleep. I'll see to that."

"Do you think you have a missionary character?"

"Well, I hope I have, sah."

"I have examined the candidate and I recommend that he be appointed to Hell-fire-and-brimstone-Gulch-on-the-Congo. Do you think you can stand that, sah?"

"Yes, sah, I think I can."

"Well, I think you will do very well indeed. You can go now."

So he went home to his cabin.

Now, my lad," the examiner, "I was appointed to examine you as to your fitness for the mission field. Did you study, sah?"

"Yes, sah, I thought I ought."

"Do you have trouble with your lessons?"

"Yes, sah, I have."

"Well, what was the trouble?"

"Sleep."

"All right, that's a reason. You'll do that sleep. I'll see to that."

"Do you think you have a missionary character?"

"Well, I hope I have, sah."

"I have examined the candidate and I recommend that he be appointed to Hell-fire-and-brimstone-Gulch-on-the-Congo. Do you think you can stand that, sah?"

"Yes, sah, I think I can."

"Well, I think you will do very well indeed. You can go now."

So he went home to his cabin.

"Now, sah, you can be seated. Now, do you know anything about Scripture?"

"Yes, sah, I know a little."

"Do you know the Ten Commandments?"

"Yes, sah, I know them."

"Can you repeat them?"

"Yes, sah, I can."

"Well, I want you to see the Ninth Commandment." Then, asked for an explanation.

"Yes, sah," said the shoemaker, with a smile, "if you let me the 15 cents down, I make a good profit, and if I put on the 50c, so far for I don't lose so much if I never pay me."

The shoemaker's point of view may be matched by that of a Scotch Highland steward per Dun of his tenants having found that which he considered an exceedingly good cigar for five cents, presented it to his employer with the remark that he would consider 10 per cent a reasonable discount.

"How is sah do you ask for the by the hundred?"

"Six dollars," replied the employer.

"Why, sah, I can get the cheaper than dat."

"Then why don't you do so?"

"Well, sah, I like to have a good cigar."

"Do you think you could do better if you had more?"

"Yes, sah, I think I can."

"Then, sah, I will give you a hundred at the same price."

"Thank you, sah, I will take them."

"Now, sah, I want you to be very careful and not let anyone see them."

"Oh, sah, I will be very careful, I will hide them in the cellar."

"Well, sah, I will send them in."

"Oh, sah, very well," added the gentleman, seven years. You see, they are so pretty near as I choose to call them blackbeans."

"Have you married?"

"Sure, I have a wife who used to drive tinkers at me every time I came home drunk."

"Then she: Do you know how she managed to break?"

"Sure, nothing about all right. The tinkers wife is a rich banker, in order to care of her. She never would give up a cent, though, as long as I was in such condition that."

"And what do you do now?"

"I preach temperance, admonish and exhort for the next man time."

"Do you ever speak to sinners, sah, and drawing a little matter to the point? Yet between ourselves, sah, and you get them to send you here?"

"Oh, sah, I know how to see the sinners, sah, I know them, asked for an explanation.

"Yes, sah," said the shoemaker, with a smile, "if you let me the 15 cents down, I make a good profit, and if I put on the 50c

DOOMED.

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued.)

"Who?" demanded Arthur, dreaming his eyes in the sofa cushions.

"Who and how?"

He was a tall thin lump now, with fine outlines, a face that was pale, a low, narrow, intellectual face, with greenish gray eyes, a fine mouth, and upheaving at the end as an to suggest silly sweet smiles. Its chief defect was a square jaw, with which the lower lips pouted a little, sometimes, when it was in repose, and lengthened out the face, and when it was in action, gave it a strength of purpose, and a pleasant determination, which it could not have had in reality.

Hugh and a hundred other theorists, occasionally, in rapid and careless succession Dominick Cleveleyes stood as one was speaking, and he was with us in spirit and in enthusiasm, the accompanying spirit and the enthusiasm because he had not, at the time, other work to do, and was not, at the moment, in a position to be behind. He was a small, pointed man, a Parisian, small, neat, and quick, with almost not enough flesh upon his face, a whiskey nose, thick lips, and a thin, lustrous hair, and a Roman profile. He was a man of quick and sharp and different ideas, and, as Douglas Stafford, more or less, was an Oxonian, he was an agreeable man.

Stafford was with Mr. Cleveleyes, and, as Cleveleyes was a Parisian, and was a man of quick and different ideas, and was an agreeable man, and was a man of a small and pointed face, and was a man of a small and pointed face, and was a man of a small and pointed face

WHY HE STANDS PAT

Tariff and the Farmer.

Nearly all of the attacks upon the tariff are actuated by personal or sectional motives. For instance, some time in an agricultural district debate one may hear the cry raised that the tariff is robbing the farmer; he must sell in Atlanta or in the Kansas City Junction points, with the wool taken measured from Montana north and Canadian wools.

But whether the contents of the tariff are protective, not, we have a market for his products, and can ensure him a home market which times throughout the country are so good that he and other farmers are not short of work and which prosperity and higher wages have enabled him to sell his surplus farm products at a much higher price than ever before in the history of the country.

Protection is a principle which endures in one section of the country as well as in another. It is a principle which has made the industrial growth of this country as a industrial nation from the tariff.—Albany Evening Journal.

Congressman Dingley is going to Alaska to put his rugged health into good account. His hopes of a chance to study administration under the tariff revision, for which have been so loud. The Dingley profits on those bills must well continue to expand under the protective tariff.—Worcester Telegram.

It would not be necessary for Congress to take action on the revision of the tariff to cause every silk mill in Paterson, but the very mention of the subject would bring on a panic and throw the woolen industry into the factory buildings.—Paterson Call.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss.
County of Charlevoix, }

I, Richard Lewis, Clerk of the County of Charlevoix, do hereby certify that I have compared the annexed report with the original record thereof now remaining in my office, and have found the same to be a true and correct transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said County Court, at the City of Charlevoix, this 1st day of January, A. D. 1907.

RICHARD LEWIS, Clerk.

The Bright Side.

"Anything going on this evening?" inquired the talking powder drummer who was stopping in Pumptown for a number of hours.

"Yes," replied the landlord of the tavern. "The village band is going to give a concert in the opery house to-night. Admission is 10 cents. Price is doubled up pretty much like a coconut letter. N' with the rhubarb, then."

"Well, that is certainly too bad."

"Yes, I is, too, after all. It isn't so tickresome as it might be, for you see, the old cap's lives clear out at the edge of town, so far away that he won't hear any of it if he covers up his head in the bedclothes and—aw, shucks, though, I ain't mean that the phonograph is too bad, of course, but then you hain't heard the band yet!"—Puck.

The Pace of Admiralty.

It is reported that Japan will add the "Dreadnought and go Great Britain 5,000 tons better, laying down a battleship of 25,000 tons service displacement. Of course the mistress of the seas will not ignore the challenge, and we must prepare to hear of a British battleship of 26,000 tons. The Japanese, being a proud and progressive people, will not sit still, and may be counted on to push the building mark on their side up to 27,000 tons. By that time our own big ship will wake up and the taxpayers will be invited to contribute towards a floating fortress of 28,000 tons. So does the race for naval supremacy set the mind of the competing world beating at present fixed upon displacement as if there was no other factor to be taken into account.—Boston Transcript.

Cause for Tears.

They were speaking of the fashionable wedding.

"And she was the last daughter," remarked one.

"Yes," added the other, "and they always said she was the cream of the family."

"And after the ceremony the parents wept. I wonder what they were crying about?"

"Oh, perhaps they were crying over spilt milk."

Benefit of Proper Exercise.

If does within health and long life we should will force yourself to work after he is tempted to worship. We all be alarmed because anybody thinks we are lazy. Work is as much a law as is the law that gravitation. Work is a blessing. Idleness is a curse. Idleness is disease. Idleness is misery. Idleness is hell. And yet how many are trying to get into it! PANAMA BULLY SHOT.

AMERICAN ADMITS KILLING A VICIOUS NATIVE.

C. J. Collins Dealt Death to Man Who Attacked Him in Hotel—Found Blown from Rochester Store by Bomb.

Carlos J. Collins of Kennedy, Texas, who arrived from Panama on the steamer Tagus, is said to have killed a native named Gonzalez at the Hotel Venezia, the night before Christmas. Gonzalez, who is said to have been a Panamanian soldier, is reported to have had a knife, and attacked a man with several others in the hotel, and Collins, who happily was armed, killed the native. Footprints leading from the place to the Panama Star and Herald office were found on Christmas morning, and a bomb was found in the office, which had been left there by the man who had attacked Collins. The bomb was made of a tin can, with a fuse, and was filled with dynamite and nails. It was found that the fuse had been lighted, but had gone out before reaching the dynamite. The bomb was taken to the office of the Panama Star and Herald, and a great crowd of people came to see it. The bomb was set off in a vacant lot, and a crowd of people followed it to the place where it was exploded. The bomb was made by the Panama Star and Herald, and the publication of the story of the affair, with a description of the bomb, caused great excitement in the city. A large number of people came to the office of the paper, and women and children, as well as men, were among the number. The bomb was a dangerous one, and it was a wonder that it did not do more damage than it did. The man who was killed by Collins, from the description given of him, was a Panamanian, and was well known in Colombia, Central America, and Panama. He was a man of great nerve, and was a desperado. A Panamanian who was in the city at the time of the occurrence, said that Gonzalez was a bad character, and was a desperado. The Panamanian said that Gonzalez was a man who was well known in Colombia, Central America, and Panama as a desperado, and that he was a man of great nerve. The Panamanian said that Gonzalez was a desperado, and was a bad character, and was well known in Colombia, Central America, and Panama as a desperado

FISH IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Old Norman Writes the Sentinel From that Far Off Land.

ST. STEPHEN, N. B., JAN. 7, 1907.

Editor Sentinel:

I promised when I left home I would write you a small epistle from this far off country and I shall endeavor to redeem my promise.

Of course, you will expect from me nothing but fish for I have seen very little of anything else since I arrived here. The expressions "carloads of fish" or "tons of fish" are most common. Occasionally we many "hundred weights" but never the number of pounds as they are too short to go in detail.

Fishing on the coast of New Brunswick is one of the chief industries of the province. It ranks favorably with the agriculture and lumbering interests.

To trifle show to what extent this province depends upon this industry I may be started that the value of the fish for the year 1905 was in round numbers five million dollars. Of this the yield of herring takes the lead followed closely by the lobster, codfish, smelt, salmon, haddock, mackerel and eel.

The number of fishermen employed in the province is 10,000. I imagine, however, that you are not particularly interested in statistics, therefore, a few remarks on the smelt fishing industry, the yield of which aggregate a half million dollars annually, would perhaps be in line.

The smelt season opens Dec. 1st and closes Feb. 15th and the river (the so-called Gaine Warden) is here to see that this rule is adhered to.

Very little capital is required fifty dollars or less will buy a good net, the so-called bag net, the life of which, if properly taken care of, is six or eight years. Still seine may also be used on certain waters and are usually sixty feet long fifty meshes deep of six inch mesh cotton twine.

It has also been my pleasure to visit a few among three hundred spearing shanties on the Magaguadavic River. The outfit consists of a shanty, a real light, a four foot mesh canvas, a small spear and a "reel" or a "while" (man) operator as the case may be. Fine Lake fishermen will fully understand that the red light in the shanty is to reflect upon the canvas screen usually fastened to the bottom of the river. What happens is very evident for up comes little smelt.

Dipping or jigging for tame was the book fishermen with the simplest rig in the world, consisting of a hook, a piece of cord and a foot long frequent weight of a stick of any description. The hook used is an ordinary bass hook with a piece of a smelt for bait. If he attends to more than one at a time rigs are the time it might be said that he is kept busy.

The best fishing is done at night. The nets are lifted four times in 24 hours, Sundays excepted, for John Bull says "Sunday, no fishy, no rest." The nets are, therefore, hung up over Sunday.

The fish move with the tides and the ebbs. It is necessary to set the nets in proper position for the tides. This applies particularly to the bag net.

I am told that the tide is governed by the moon, that it is due to the attraction of the moon, and sometimes these tides vary from 2 to 22 feet high and at times are very disastrous.

After the nets are stared and set the fish are spread upon the ice and within a few moments naturally frozen alive which is the only practical method of handling smelts, and, such fish taken as the lobster is boiled alive as essential it is to freeze the smelt alive to retain its natural and luscious flavor. This was sound strange but it is, nevertheless, a fact and great (fresh) smelts are nowhere in demand.

Each fisherman must provide himself with a license, and in a small river he must not occupy more than one third of the channel and each bag net must be two hundred yards apart. Where gill nets are used they must be set parallel with the river and never across the stream.

I note that the term has to be supplied by our venerable Uncle Sam principally from Boston markets, but there is no trouble for him to do that right and whether twixt John and his Uncle is indeed very comfortable in this country.

It has been a very interesting trip and I regret my inability at this time to go into details with you on the salmon and other fish, but, some other time, friend Smith.

Yours truly yours,

OLIVE NORTHROP.

SCHOOL NOTES.

At the mission school two weeks there the boys have been at work removing the sand from the basement. They have worked faithfully the past week and the excavating is nearly completed. The laying of the cinders for the floor is to follow immediately. In a very short time the gymnasium will be in perfect running order and will play the High School be proud of this new feature.

The High School was favored Monday morning by an exceptional 15 good program. The usual impromptu of the seniors was their highly appreciated class song "the 1 wave and the blue". The timing effer the five voice was so great that they did not care to finish it, but gave place to the High school orchestra. The three selections rendered by the orchestra marked a great improvement over their last appearance still was appreciated by all.

Some of the other features were a short talk about the lumber camp by Leo Scraggin, a few words on the Electric Power Plant at Bellaire by Ned Mayhe and the reading of some pleasant school memories by Mr. Hosmer. The program was concluded by a few words by Mr. Woodley concerning visitors.

DOOMED.

By WILLARD MacKENZIE

CHAPTER VIII. (Continued.)

In more and pleasant conversation the evening passed quickly away. Arthur was rapidly falling in love, and Mrs. Cheatham—we could see by—could—only to herself that had they met a week before, she might have had the pleasure of the marriage of Pembrokes Castle.

While these things were moving through her mind, Arthur, who was sitting through some portfolios of music, came upon a number of French ballads, which, from their worn and dissolved appearance, seemed to be very old.

"They were my mother's," said Cora, simply, "the gowns valued lung. Dad brought to his grandmother, for whom they were brought from France during the Revolution."

"Was your mother, then, of French extraction?" inquired Arthur.

"Oh, no, she was descended from a branch of one of the old colonists. Her grandfather married a French girl in Old Iand during the Reign of Terror, saving only their lives from that and with all her effects, and their cousin children settled down and lived happily on an successful attempt to escape something of the Revolution."

"What was the name of the lady, might I inquire?" Arthur asked.

"Her maiden name was Mademoiselle Cora Bayne, and her husband's name was Bayne, as well."

The name was not quite so much out of Cheatham's money as with such ancestry as this to be proud of.

"Cora," said Mrs. Cheatham, "what this place was not so amusing in your youthful days as it has been since you came to equipping refined." said Willie, with an emphasis.

"That was in my green days, when I thought you were a prince, and it was so sensible of the moral atmosphere of the place, she exclaimed, hesitatingly.

"Had we not better leave morality out of our discussion?" retorted Mr. Wylie, "Decidedly on the principle that it is all bred to talk of the gallows to the relations of a man who has hanged. But before we proceed further in our interesting conversation I may as well inform you that I want money.

"Oh, you must not ask more than what I mention's money and a good deal of it, too," said the Cheatham, pleasantly.

"What do you mean, Laura Wylie?" she said, starting up with eyes all ablaze. "Heaven knows you could see, or I will horsewhip you on the spot. Money! you may well say 'little' as when the money is in your hands. I know you are plotting now."

"Hoaking you?" he cried. "How dare you? You can explain a letter to an author from your accounts, or I will do Hamlet the ears of your poetry, and in hands of any person you may against. I shall only be too glad to work my hands of it, but I will get to hanging!"

"A lawyer is sensitive with my persons," she cried, contemptuously. "Then you are decidedly sick for the season and a few in time. You know that I have a right to demand to see what you have or after I have said emotional thanks to my generous and hatred of trouble. I want a hundred to-day, and I will have it."

Wylie listened to her bitter words without, and, and a few of which the total point was the only signs of the passion that raged within him.

"But for me," he said quietly, "you would never have been Mrs. Cattleton."

"You owed me to serve yourself," she retorted. "What is the simple money of that transaction? A few years ago a certain lawyer glared at my poor father, and has thought a young and beautiful girl might be a useful tool. The owner was since found. One of your cronies became infatuated with me, and you engaged effects so cleverly that he made me his wife. I confided him, but I married him for the fortune he could give me. Let me before you fact about a hundred from me to me over large sum of money for the bargain. Hand up the black a customarily ungrateful or managed to get at the property, or not, you could work hands. A large debt of gratitude I owe you, certainly.

"And having helped you to one fortune I expect that I were to propose to you another? Ask Mr. Wylie after a time, setting up the fortune of a wife."

"So more horrible sit now, she as I thought with a shudder, you cannot, and I will turn to not even to answer.

"Mr. Wylie, I do not ask I speak, or, you know, a young and handsome one who is interesting, have a benefit to the Good Place of being sex fully."

"Do angry indeed, and for love—as the Devil!" Wylie to off. "Have a benefit to the Good Place of being sex fully."

"Ah, I do not ask I speak, or, you know, a young and handsome one who is interesting,

Curried Pickerel in Milwaukee Compared to a Field of Thistles.

Speaking of tourists, I can tell you in the near future I intend to do Florida about during the cold weather, said our Dan Cupid of a Union army veteran living at Berkley, Mo.

Then there is the Georgia darling Suwanee's sweetheart, to the east, instead and another year we intend to spend at least another winter in the south, covering in some Gulf state, we assume about a half mile further inland than we usually spend in those climes, for we noticed those Green Jackets lately. Then we contemplate a visit to southern California, perhaps as far as San Diego, and we intend to be in San Antonio, Texas, at least one winter, so we can visit the great cattle ranches, for we are fond of the great outdoors, as we have from all accounts, been since we left our home, Mr. Editor, from time to time, we can be pleasant and cozy. Then I think of a little Mexican trip.

"Colorado" was the remark.

"Yes, I intend getting that we missed last year, and a great big field of sweet potatoes."

SHE SOLUTION FIND TIME.

Publisher Story Contributing Moral, Tell in Shakspere.

One of the characters of the Mac Bloom's stories is named "Tell a Story and Leave, and it's only a servant boy who is one hundred of this story."

The object of a big tumble of cold water—and lately, if stories—but practical women made the great part of the Dunlap Tribune, and anyone who hadn't somewhere nearer to bother with dishwashing also thought. But this morning unknown, and finally succeeded.

"Going back in a week or two," the young man after giving her some cool water, "unless you're sorrow. If you are, come at once."

The maiden later she "found time" to go back to see him. She had been getting vaguely worse, was suffering, but there was always something that needed to be done, and apparently no one else to do it.

It was a case of malignant tumor and an immediate operation was the only chance she had.

The operation was ill—the woman the big tumor with so many years, will had been cured to her facility. So she married a man, and the tumor, which caused her uneasiness, lodged until vacation came and her younger sister could fill her work without affecting her own school work.

And then? Then it was too late.

THROWN INTO A LAKE

WOMAN HAD BEEN BEATEN TO DEATH PREVIOUSLY.

Night Watchman at Pennsylvania National Beach Witnesses Horrible Tribunal—Five Persons Killed in Rock Island Wreck.

Hope Bechner, a watchman on the national beach at Gladstone, Cook Lake, near Pontiatic, Pa., notified the police of that place that he had found a person sunk in the middle of a woman who had been beaten to death and who had come into the lake. Unmistakable evidence of his guilt was found in the form of a woman's shoe with the heel broken off, which fitted the dead woman's feet. The body had evidently been thrown into the lake from a point about 100 feet from the beach. Footprints were found in the sand, showing that the woman had been dragged from the beach to the place where the body was found. Every one of the 500 guests at the beach at the time of the murder was accounted for, and the police are now at a loss to know who the murderer is. The woman is about 30 years of age, and is well dressed. She is about five feet three inches in height, and weighs about 150 pounds. She has a full face, with a very pleasant expression, and her hair is a light brown. The police have no clue to her identity, and she is not known at any of the resorts in the vicinity. The police are of the opinion that the woman was killed at some other place than the place where she was found, and that her body was thrown into the lake from a point some distance from the place where it was found. The police are working on the theory that the woman was killed by a jealous lover, who followed her to the place where she was found and there killed her. The police have no clue to the identity of the murderer.

ROCK ISLAND TRAIN WRECKED.

Passenger Runs Into Open Switch at Barsaly N. M.

Humboldt, Kan., dispatch to the Kansas City Journal says: Five persons were killed and a dozen more injured in a wreck on the Rock Island railroad near Barsaly, N. M., this morning. The dead are: Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson's mother, Mrs. Wilson's sister, Mrs. Wilson's little boy, and a Mexican. The injured are: Wm. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson's other little boy, Mrs. Wilson's other little girl, and a Mexican. The train was a local passenger, and was made up of a baggage car, a coach and a sleeper. It was in charge of Conductor Wilson and Engineer Hoffman. The train was running at a speed of about 25 miles an hour when it ran into an open switch. The train was thrown from the track and the cars were all more or less wrecked. The injured were taken to Barsaly, where they received medical attention, and were then brought to Humboldt. The wreck was caused by a tramp who had opened the switch.

WOLVES SCOURGE NORTHWEST

Hungry Animals Invade Cities and Attack Inhabitants.

Hungry wolves have been seen within seven miles of Minneapolis, and some months ago one was killed within the city limits. Some months ago there were reports of wolves in the northern part of Minnesota, but it was thought that they had been driven out by the cold weather. Now, however, they are reported in many parts of the state. Wolves have been seen within a few miles of Duluth, and in the Mesabi range they have been very bold, coming into the mining towns and even into the streets of Hibbing. The superintendent of the Sunshine Mine at Hibbing, Mr. Hoffman, was found in his office one morning with his throat torn out. Wolves have been seen in Wilkin, Lake and Cass counties, and in Cass county they killed a calf within a rod of a house. In one part of Minnesota they killed a team of horses, and in another part they killed and devoured a cow. In some parts of the state they have been very bold, coming into the towns and even into the streets. In Montana and Wyoming the wolves are reported to be very numerous, and very bold. In Montana they have killed many sheep and cattle. In Wyoming they have killed many sheep and cattle. In Montana and Wyoming they have killed many sheep and cattle. In Montana and Wyoming they have killed many sheep and cattle. In Montana and

About the Recent Electric Light Line Interruptions.

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 8, 1907.

Tesla Bros. Co., Chicago:

In your feeble time regarding the interruptions of electric current from Bellaire, the interested would like to make some comments which may be of interest to your readers.

The electric current which responds to your wants in Charlevoix is generated more than 25 miles from your homes. It follows a series of wires which are suspended from 25 to 50 feet above the ground, and are subject to the varied conditions of the elements. Notwithstanding the fact that since this snow storm the plant has operated the number has been very severe at times, the poles rigging and copper stand the test with most exception.

Some of the timber along the line which was not considered dangerous at the time of reeding the pole line, has since been condemned, and the several interruptions last month were the result of timber falling on the line which was intended by the woodsmen to run away from the line.

Your honorable board of public works is fully aware of the efforts which are being made by the management at Bellaire to overcome any and all obstacles which might hinder it from giving the best possible service regardless of expense. Your citizens is enthusiastic of its convenient, and gives food for comment to your neighboring towns, who envy you your good fortune of having an electric system which gives you good light and power both night and day at a cost which permits to make you a profit and without being subject to the many pecuniary embarrassments which plague the Bellaire people. The Bellaire people are simply as good an electric system as any in the state, and better than many cities ever larger than itself.

The Hydraulic Power and Light Co. in manufacturing its plant in Bellaire, expended money at other in purchase the fund that modern engineering could design, and the result has been satisfactory.

I am yours truly,

HENRY A. RICHARD.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Olive Sherman is back in school after an absence of two weeks, and Bessie Straw has returned after an absence of one week. Both girls were sick on account of the grippe.

County Commissioner Mitford visited the Normal Class last Thursday afternoon, and gave us a talk on the difference between teaching and testing.

The Athenian Society meeting was held Wednesday evening, Jan. 16th. The girls had a Valentine program.

Song by the class. Reader, American Hymn; Reading—Jacob's Ladder, Ruth Blakney; Debate—Resolved that the extension of the Japanese schools in San Francisco should be discontinued, Affirmative, Grace Cates and John Hendrich. Negative, Merle Chase and Mamie Wilkins. The judges decided in favor of the Negative side. Recitation, Supporting his Generosity, Bessie Hanson; Reading, An Early Call, George Crossett; Dialogue, A Terrible Accident, Lulu Cates and Anna Ingalsbe; Critics Report, Miss Hinsey; Song, The Dancer Spoil for the Class.

Last Friday evening some of the members of the Normal Class accompanied Miss Hinsey and Miss Hess to the meeting of the Historical Society. The meeting was held at Mr. Nicholls' house. The two papers of the evening were especially interesting to the Normal Class. The Current Events given by Mrs. Hampton gave us some very useful hints for our work in Current Events this week and we are trying hard to keep in mind some of the most important historical facts given by Mr. Nicholls for our history work which begins very soon now.

NORWOOD NEWS.

The I. A. S. meet with Mrs. Aaron Stafford this week Wednesday.

Rutland Whaldon, who is working in a lumber camp at Ed. Mich., was home over Sunday.

For sometime the scholars of the Norwood school have been practicing on the play, "Under the Laurels" which they will present to the public Jan. 25th, at the Norwood town hall. Between each of the five acts will be rendered a selection of late and popular music. Remember you get a two hours entertainment for the small sum of 15c and 25c. Program begins at 8 p. m., standard time. Persons wishing to reserve seats can do so by purchasing their tickets in advance. Proceeds will be used to defray the expenses of the graduating class or to purchase a new book case. Don't forget the time and place—Jan. 25th, at Norwood, Mich.

Mrs. Edgar L. Stafford, who died in Charlevoix last Monday, was buried in the cemetery at this place Wednesday. Jennie Multhaud was the daughter of Thomas Multhaud and was born near Brantford, Canada, in 1854. She came to Battle Creek with her father in 1864. Her father moved to Norwood in 1866, but Jennie remained in Battle Creek a year or so longer, coming to Norwood in 1867. She was married to Edgar L. Stafford in the spring of 1871, and they lived at Norwood until three or four years ago, when they moved to Charlevoix. Jennie was the youngest of five children, two of whom are living—Mrs. Russell, of Battle Creek, and John Multhaud, who lived here for many years but is now living in California.

Cured of Long Trouble.

"It is over seven years since I had a narrow escape from Consumption," writes C. O. Floyd, a leading business man of Windsor, N. C. "I had run down so badly I lost 125 pounds, and coughing was constant, both by day and by night. Finally I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and continued this for about six months, when my cough and lung trouble was entirely gone and I was restored to my normal weight, 175 pounds." Thousands of persons are healed every year. Guaranteed at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

We learn that Will O. Gallagher, son of Capt. C. Gallagher, has fully recovered from an attack of typhoid. This is the fourth case Capt. Gallagher has had at his home the past three months.

The cylinder in one of the Lumber Co's engines blew out a few days ago.

Will P. Hight had a valuable horse killed in a runaway accident a few days ago.

Further work over from Garden Island on the line a few days ago.

Excellent skating on the harbor at present.

J. Booth & Co's ice house is nearly completed.

Reuben Gillis had the misfortune to break his arm by a fall on the ice. John Floyd has the contract for filling the A. Booth and Wolverine Fish Co's ice houses.

DRESS THAT COST $40,000.

Three Hundred Mexican Women Made the Wonderful Garment.

After nine years of most painstaking toil, Senora E. Leon of Agua Calientes, living in the City of Mexico, has completed a dress which is valued at the sum of $40,000 gold, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. She was assisted in this arduous job by 300 expert needlewomen, all of whom were well paid.

The dress was first intended for the Mexican exhibit at the Paris exposition. As it was at that time impossible to have it finished to display it at the St. Louis world's fair, but the close of this exposition still saw the work unfinished.

Senora Calientes (a relative of the drawn-work and needlework now for embroidery across the Pacific) excels anything ever attempted in work placed in that art. The dress is an exquisite and wonderful example of woman's skill, patience and artistic conception.

It consists of a tail trained skirt, Eton jacket and bolero, and its mode of the slightest than, the thread for which was imported from Paris and here the number 600, the finest manufactured. The design, which was originated by Senora Leon, is a most novel. There are no visible seams in the entire garment, which is drawn in wheels in such a way that the orbit of fabric is changed into a flower, whether bent.

The dress will be put on exhibition in the City of Mexico and offered for sale. No price under $40,000 gold will be considered. During the winter, when the city is filled with American millionaires, it is not thought that finding a purchaser will be difficult.

FOLDING SHEEP BY HAND.

Herder Was Doing His Best to Obey Boss' Instructions.

Ab Wade, a well known character of Ashland, Mass., was in his early days a farmer's boy. One day the farmer had a large cattle owner, said:

"Abner, what are you doing in down you just put the sheep in that?"

"Why, sir," replied Ab, in his sonorous drawl. "Toward sundown the farmer going around to see that everything was secure, heard the plaintive bleating of a lamb. He hunted the sound, and ran across Ab with a new scheme his knee, doing his best to break it to two."

"Confound you!" roared the farmer "what are doing?"

"Ah, sir," said Ab, "I was sitting in the barn, I was doin' my best without a fold in' machine."

With Congo Gold.

Where does it go, this tribute-stained Congo gold? Into the fairy palaces, the wonderful palaces of enchantment in which this grim old, gray king dwelleth. Into the gardens of rare and price less trees and shrubs and flowers that have made his conservatories at Laeken famous throughout Europe. Into the white hands of the women who, each for his little hour, have ruled the Congolese lord—the queens of the Congo, whose jewels are bought with human lives. Into the fascinating schemes of aggrandizement at which a much jaded world looks on in bitterness, political sagacity, and selfish ambition, can develop, and limitless wealth and a diabolic ability in choosing the proper tools for its genesis. And, lastly, into the huge maelstrom—the vicious green whirlpool—which is all that is absolute Leopold's good name before the world; a maelstrom grinding life lessons into him day, that its owner may pose as the philanthropist, and so expound as the vampire.—Robert Dunn, in Everybody's.

"Four long months since he was here," sobbed Cleopatra, "and he promised to return in a few weeks. I wonder if anything has happened to Mr. Cain to be possible."

"Can what he possible is your mistress?" asked one of the court ladies. "The great sphinx has gone insane."

"Can—can it be possible that he smoked some of those Egypt—can cigarettes he bought at the gyp shop? If so, the jig-saw is a reality."

Calling the sphinx Egypt than ever she disappointed, she ran to find out the truth.

North Carolina Wonders.

Mr. Tom Stewart was down in Antioch last week and stayed over night with Mr. Sam Armstrong. He tells us that Mr. Armstrong has a wonderful pet, of which he is prouder than a peacock. Imagine a hen that lays eggs without any rooster! Yes, sir, it is true, and it is a fact. Mr. Armstrong says he has a wonderful gander, too. The gander will climb an apple tree, nimbly it and then eat down and eat the apples. Mr. Stewart says he did not see the gander, but after seeing the hen he was believed anything Mr. Armstrong told him—Wilkesboro Chronicle.

Walker Family Clash.

John T. Walker, of Turner, Me., is a character whose sayings are reported and whose doings told of pretty much all over that section of the state. Mr. John, who is, by the way, John's only intellectual peer in those parts, one day discovered a hen's stolen nest containing 14 eggs. Upon examination, however, the eggs proved to be too good for culinary purposes. Then these two intellectual clashed.

Said the lady: "Tha' ain't no use wastin' 14 on 'em, we might's well use 'em."

"Huh!" retorted John, "what's the matter settin' up 'em? They won't hatch; an' if they do they'll all be males."

"He is perfectly devoted to that blonde"—so Mr. John Drew was in the habit—"his family think it is a case of hypnotism."

Balanced.

"Yes, he's very vindictive. That's one of his worst faults," said Gaff.

"I didn't know he had that fault, too," said Leaden.

"Oh, yes; I tell you, I'd hate to have a man like that on my trail."

"Yes, but there's his other fault to offset that."

With a very unfavorable season in 1906, the beet crop was more remunerative than any crop the farmer raised, and yet agitation for 1907 comes discouraging tyslow. There are substantial arguments in favor of beets, and not one against them. Everywhere else in Michigan farmers are questionable on the sugar beet question; everywhere else beets hold farmhouses and pay mortgages. Why should it not be so here? It is a vital question and farmers must come to a realizing sense of it this winter, or do very sorry later.

It was a matter of the wrong figure getting into the wrong box and the mistake escaping the notice of the proof reader.

—Saginaw special to Detroit Journal: The campaign of the Michigan Sugar Co., just completed, has been one of the most successful in the history of the beet sugar industry, both for the factories and the farmers. Each year the crop is becoming more profitable for the former, because of more intelligent cultivation. The Michigan Sugar Co., operating factories at Carrollton, Alma, Bay City, Caro, Sebewaing and Croswell, made 72,000,000 pounds of sugar, and the other factories in the state made 28,000,000, a total of 150,000,000 pounds for the year.

—East Jordan Enterprise: The Charlevoix Sentinel complains that the farmers are not making sugar beet washing contracts as freely as they should. So far as we know beets the West Mich. Sugar Co., now in control of the plant have dealt fairly with their patrons, and considering the serious handicap of the bad weather, last year, we believe the returns from beet raising as good at least as any other crop. In the east ern part of the state last season the beet crop was the best the farmers harvested. The industry of raising sugar beets is one that will tend to make those who follow it better and more successful cultivators of the soil and general farmers, and it is to be hoped it will be continued.

—The well respected and jolly old captain John Gemmer, was most pleasantly surprised by about twenty five of his friends and neighbors on Monday evening at his home on the north side. The genial captain had made boasts that no matter how serious or dangerous the circumstances might seem he would always find some way "out of it," but he admitted to the jolly crowd, that for one time in his life, they had got the "best of him." After having recovered his wits progressive pedro was indulged in until Mrs. Grover Gemmer proved her ability by taking first pole, while Mrs. Carrie Hosmer had to be contented with the consolation. An elegant three course luncheon was served, when the guests did proper justice too, while the rest of the evening was spent in visiting and watching the captain do some stunts in modern dancing. Much credit was given his daughter Miss Alvina, who, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Sherman Castle, made the occasion, one long to be remembered.

MOSHER DEFEATED.

The Emmet County Trial of the Charlevoix "Big Six" Results in a Verdict of No Cause of Action.

In the Emmet county circuit court Saturday morning, the jury in the Mosher damage case, in obedience to the charge of Judge Shepard returned a verdict of "No cause of action." Mr Mosher conducted his own case, J. M. Harris and Lyle Shanahan appearing for the respondents.

The case was called Thursday morning. Very little time was taken in the impaneling of the jury. Early in the case the court ruled that the contract between the committee of the board of supervisors and Mosher was invalid. This ruling practically took the backbone out of Mosher's case, and when court adjourned Friday evening, it was evident that Mr. Mosher had lost his case.

Saturday morning Judge Shepard sent the jury out with instructions to bring in a verdict of no cause of action. In reviewing the case the judge held that in order to make a case against the signers of the remonstrance, malice must be shown. This, the judge held, complainant had failed to do. In signing the petition to the board of supervisors, the judge said, the respondents had but exercised the right of petition in a cause involving public interests, a right of which the citizen could not be deprived. There had been no evidence introduced to show that the respondents had exceeded this right, or had shown malice toward complainant in the exercise of this right.

The publisher of this paper was one of the signers of this petition, with a number of others who were deprived of the honor of being respondents in the suit of Mr. Mosher. The distinguished attorney selected from the array that was being "hungmen more worthy of his steel," or because he considered this about as he could manufacture at one chewing, or perchance, with the thought that a hack, a steamboat duck, a steamboat boat, a hardware store and a general merchandise emporium would be good fat meat for the consumption of a judgment. A printing office would come in handy, but for some unaccountable rea on, that valuable utility was scorned as a white elephant in his prospective legal raid on the goods and chattels of the audacious petitioners.

The suit was a most emphatic defeat for Mr. Mosher, and we say this in the same spirit in which we signed the petition—in the exercise of our right to discuss a question involving public interests, as this reaches the point of. But the trouble is not over—for Mr. Mosher. Before he could bring suit he was compelled to give bonds for the costs of the suit, which he did, with Alden Chamberlain and Joshua Mitchern as joint sureties with himself. The amount of the liability under the bond is by law confined to $100, the actual costs, greatly increased from the ordinary statutory limit by the change of venue, will be not far from $250. The difference between these two amounts must be paid by the dear people of Charlevoix county.

CHARLEVOIX CHICKENS

Fancy Stock Taken to the Traverse City Show Bring Back Ribbons.

The Charlevoix exhibitors at the Traverse City chicken show last week return with ribbons galore, and say the exhibition excelled any previous Northern Michigan effort.

D. F. Meech took 18 of his blooded Buff Orpingtons to the exhibit. He comes back with 1st on cock, 1st, 2d and 3d on hen, 1st on breeding pen, and second on hen. Mr. Meech made a trip to Grand Rapids while down the line and brings back a Buff Orpington cock for which he refused $50.

Lyman E. Benson, who also prides himself on his stock brought back a nice bunch of ribbons for his Blue Comb Brown Leghorns. He took 1st on cock, hen and pullet, and second on Single Comb Brown Leghorn. Incidentally Benson sold some of his blibted seven chickens, and took six prizes.

Charlevoix has another fine blooded stock in the flock of Geo. W. Cook, but he did not exhibit at Traverse City. He has decided not exhibiting at the county fair for several years.

THE SHORE ROAD.

The Electric Railroad Project By No Means a Dead Letter.

It is gratifying to record the fact that the Northern Michigan Traction Railway project is yet alive and gives promise of being worked out. Men who made themself obnoxious in the interest of this enterprise, at one and Traverse City prompt are taking hold of the matter with vigor.

The need of a road along the shore north from Traverse City has existed for several years, and every added year affords increased justification for its construction. The fine agricultural region along the route, especially from Elk Rapids north, will be very growing and prosperous manufacturing interests on the score, make the proposition one eminently worthy of earnest consideration.

The farmers of the Norwood section of Antrim county, Michigan, are all of western Banks have reached that stage of agricultural progress when a rail outlet is required. The Death of Gen. Alger.

Gen Russell A. Alger, public senator from Michigan, died at his Washington home last Thursday.

The body arrived in Detroit Sunday morning by special train, accompanied by committees of the National senate and house of representatives, Sunday afternoon the body lay in state at the city hall, and were viewed by 20,000 people. Never have such honors been paid the remains of a citizen of Michigan as are showered upon the remains of Senator Alger. The funeral was from the residence Monday afternoon.

The man in Michigan through the death of Senator Alger is that of a man who found enjoyment in making happier the lives of those whom he could assist. He was true and helpful to all his relatives, and the people of Michigan were glad to be true and loyal to him when he was bitterly assailed from many directions at the close of his Spanish war. It is recognized now that Senator Alger deserved approval rather than criticism, but hitchhiked did not need to wait and did not wait until he was dead to give him his assurances of confidence and endorsement. That the closing days of Senator Alger's life were made happier by the cordial approving attitude of his home people will be to citizens of Michigan it was a source of gratitude and gladness.

TRADE AT HOME

Why Farmer Should Give His Support to the Local Merchant.

PRESERVES HIS OWN MARKET

Depreciation of Village Property Must Inevitably Mean Depreciation of Agricultural Property and Encouragement of Monopoly.

(Copyright, 1906, by Alfred C. Clark.)

The most serious problem that confronts the rural towns and villages of this country is the competition offered local enterprises by the catalogue houses of the large cities. It is a problem for which a solution must be found if the prosperity and stability of the nation is to stand.

And the solution of this great problem lies in the hands of the people of the towns and villages and the farms, especially the farms.

The people of the rural communities have everything to lose and nothing to gain by sending their money to the catalogue houses, by passing by their local merchants and sending their dollars to the concerns who have absolutely no interest in their communities.

These catalogue houses do not pay taxes in your town, the local merchant does. They do not build sidewalks in your town, the local merchant does. They do not contribute to the building of roads over which the crops of the farms are hauled to market; the local merchant does.

They do not help to build school houses for your children; the local merchants does. They do not assist in the support of your churches; the local merchant does.

But there are some things the catalogue houses do for you and the first and greatest of these is to assist materially in bankrupting your community. The dollars they take away never come back to you. They will never help to make a city of your village. They will never increase the value of your real estate holdings by making local improvements.

Let us look at the subject from the standpoint of the farmer, for it is the farmer who is the greatest patron of the catalogue houses.

The town or village one, two or three miles from his home is his market for the butter and eggs and other produce of his farm. The half dozen or more merchants of the town, each anxious to obtain his fair share of the business of the community, maintain a competition that affords to the farmer at all times the prices for the products of his farm. It is those half dozen merchants that make farm profits possible, the profits are in no way due to the catalogue houses of the cities.

But the farmer results in sending his dollars to the city, he wants a buggy, or a set of harness, or a pair of mackinaws, or any of the necessities or luxuries of life, and to get them he takes out his mail order catalogue and looks at the finely printed cuts, reads the well written descriptions, and, passing the local merchant by, the merchant who has purchased his produce at the most market prices, the merchant who has helped to build the community, he sends his dollars to the catalogue house in the city and takes what they choose to send him.

What is the result?

One after another the doors of the local stores are closed, and where at one time there were half a dozen merchants, each bidding for his share of patronage by offering fair prices for that which the farmer had to sell, there is now but one merchant who has a monopoly not only of the selling, but of the buying as well and he pays what he pleases for the farmer's produce.

The farmer can continue to send his money to the catalogue house in the city for his supplies, but he cannot send his produce to the same place.

In disposing of that he is absolutely compelled to sell to the local merchant, and by his patronage of the catalogue houses he has killed competition, and must now take whatever is offered for what he has to sell.

Mr Farmer, are you helping to kill the goose that is laying your golden egg?

Are you sending your dollars to the catalogue houses and by so doing killing the local industries of your town?

Are you putting your merchants out of business, and creating a monopoly that will pay you what it pleases for the products of your farm?

If you are doing these things it is time for you to stop and consider the future. You will have to look but a little way ahead to see the result, and it will not be an attractive picture that greets you. The prosperous community of which you are now a part will fade like the summer flowers before the winter winds, and almost as quickly.

It is the fact that there is a market within close proximity to your farm that makes your acres valuable. The men who maintain this local market for you are the men who cause the railroad trains to stop at your town. Take them away and soon the town will be wiped off the map. The churches will close for lack of support. The schools will cease to be a pride, and your sons and daughters will lack the opportunity that is theirs by right of birth, and your acres, that are now valuable because they lie in close proximity to a market, will show a depreciation that will astonish you.

Your interests are identical with those of the merchants of your town. By sending your dollars to the city you may cause the merchants to close their establishments, but when they are forced to this they can pack their stock of goods and go elsewhere, but you cannot pack up your farm and move it; your acres must lie in the best you have builded for them whether it be fair or foul, and it is "up to you," Mr. Farmer, to spend your money at home, and in this way you can solve the greatest problem that now confronts this country.

Will you do it?

YANKEE IN DIAMOND FIELDS.

Commissions to Study a Country Which Produces Such Men.

Mr. Alfred Mosely is an Englishman who admires American ways so much that he sends commissions here to study us.

Mr. Mosely does not admire us without a reason. It is not a very specific reason. He came to Mr. Gardner F. Williams, and it is by way of being an American mining engineer. Mr. Williams directs the diamond output of the world.

Mr. Mosely made his fortune in South Africa. He watched Cecil Rhodes' dream of empire develop and knew the men who made it real. This gave him a look his Americanism was Gardner Williams.

Here was a man who had left Michigan at the age of 15 to go with a pioneering father to California in the flush days of the early mining camps, had had a taste of California mining, had gone when still a young man to explore in South Africa and had become a general manager of the great monopoly of the diamond mines.

A fighter of financial battles and a manager of men, a writer, a scientist and one of the world's greatest engineers, he so stamped his personality on the people among whom he lived that he was feted and cheered by all South Africa when he retired last spring and came back to the United States to build a home for his latest years in the land of his birth. —Work.

Keep Your Money at Home.

Don. send money to mail order houses to deposit. Your home bank is the only safe place to keep it and will pay you as good interest as can be had, and then you run no risk as in such cases as the "Cash Buyer's Union" failure. The home bank will treat you fairly and mail order houses never do.

Awakening Him.

The honeymoon was over and the cupboard was bare.

"Don't worry, darling," said the romantic husband, as he opened the piano, "remember, music is the food of love."

The practical little wife shook her head.

"But if you really think music is the food of love," she responded, "perhaps you can step around and get the butcher to give you a beefstock for a merry song."

Then the long-haired genius woke up.

Representation Not Growing.

The first British parliament, consisting of its present number of members (670), was elected in 1886.

Give your town a chance by patronizing your local merchants and you may confidently expect its growth in business and population and a rise in real estate valuation. Send your money to the catalogue houses and you may look for the reverse. The picture tells the story of the possibilities.

FARMER WILLIAMS' LESSON

In Time of Adversity He Got to Understand Who Were His Real Friends—Prosperity in Standing Together.

(Copyright, 1905, by Alfred C. Clark.)

"What I got there, Sis?" inquired Farmer Williams, as he kicked off his felt boots and set them carefully behind the stove to dry. "That's what I thought it looked like, one of them there Chicago catalogues, though I hadn't seen one close for quite a few years back. Me an' your ma used to be mighty nigh everthing we used out of them catalogs when we first come to Kansas. Land sakes! I have to laugh now sometimes when I think of the way we would get hatched onto a while. They's some cheap things in them catalogs, an' then agin they's a lot 't ain't so cheap. Y' never kin tell till they come, an' then it's too late to send 'em back. But as I was a sayin', we hain't bought nothin' out of a catalog for a right smart of years now, an' the way it come about I had as well tell y', cause I don't think y' really remember much about it.

"When we come to Kansas land in the first of the 90's we got along right well. We was able to pay cash for what we got, and we got the money for everything we sold. We was payin' out on the place right along, crops was pretty good an' we was a feelin' like the Lord was a smilin' on our efforts, and the happy home we dreamed about when we first got married was in sight.

"But they come a change in Kansas long in the last half of the 90's. Times got hard and kep' a gettin' tighter. Your straight years it was so dry y' had to soak the hogs afore they'd hold awslp—though I will say they was some every reason on account of the awful heat' so thin—what heat died in the ground for want of rain, and the hot winds blted the everlastin' say out of the corn. They wasn't no pasture, no nothing. You can know we was a feelin' purty blue about that time, but we was young and strong, and thought with the chickens an' hogs we could get through anyway.

"Then one day you got to complainin' and lookin' as thin 'n worried as Your ma is a sittin' good doctor, take it all around, but nothing she could think of done you any good. Well you kep' a sittin' platter and pindliter, till you got sot an' y' wouldn't do nothin' but set in a chair by the fire then stove wrapped in your ma's old shawl, an' you looked so pitiful that we makin up our minds to have the doctor; even if it took th' last chicken on the place. Well, he come, and after he'd looked at you awhile an' felt your pulse, he shut his watch up with a snap, an' says, quiet like: 'Better fix up a warm place for her in the front room, don't have too much light nor any drafts to strike her.' Then we knowed it wuz no small sickness we had to fight, an' when we got you fixed up in bed, I followed Joe out on the porch an' I says: 'Well, Doc,' says I, 'what's the matter with our little girl?'

"'I don't want to skeer ye, Mr. Williams' says he, 'but I'm afraid she's in for a siege of typhoid fever.'

"Well after he was gone I went out in the kitchen an' told your ma, but she says, brave as kin be: 'Well, Ezra, if the Lord has seen fit to put that much more on our load we must bear up an' pitch it on durn our duty the best we kin, bearin' the cross to him.' An' I thought to me, 'Ain't we bad hearts to have an' done what seemed right t' do.

"The hardest thing was to figure out where I' git the medicine, an' fruit, an' delicty things your sickness called for. We hadn't been traffic much with the stores in Horton, bein' mostly from the catalog folks y' know, an so we didn't have any credit there to speak of. But I went t' Foster, th' druggist, an I told him how things was. I didn't have no money t' pay for th' medicine an' things, an' the prospects for the next year was as poor or poorer than th' last.

"'Why certainly, Mr. Williams,' he says, 'just let us know what you want an' we'll carry you along till times come better for you. We're all in a tight pinch now, but if we hang together things is all goin' to come out right.'

Beats the Story Books.

For about 20 years Joseph Glover Southway got off what he might have done any day. Consequently he has just reappeared at Middletown, Conn., after an absence of 20 years. Funeral services were held for him a generation ago, when he was believed to have been lost at sea. The amusing part of the story is that Southway for 20 years has been farming a farm a little more than 20 miles from Middletown. There is room, enough in this world, it appears, unless a man is really trying to hide.

"Why Certainly, Mr. Williams, Just Let Us Know What You Want."

Difficult Breathing

Short breath, fluttering, palpitation, sinking spells are symptoms of a weak heart, struggling to do its work. It must keep the blood in circulation to carry nourishment to make flesh, bone and muscle, and remove the worn-out particles. When it cannot do this, it must have help. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure gives strength to the heart nerves and muscles, and increases the heart action.

"I am glad to say that I am so much improved in health, Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me when several doctors failed. I feel that I cannot do enough do for me what Heart Cure has done. My case was bad, had an ill feeling of heart, short of breath, palpitation of heart, my heart would so fast at times that I thought it would burst, I could not lie without pillows, the pain was very severe in my left side, and smothering spells. Your Heart Cure and advice given me at least 12 years ago, and I have never had a second relapse. I can walk up hill or climb stairs without great fatigue." Mrs. Mary C. Hamlin, Dr. Miles' Remedies do all what they claim, they are a blessing to me." MRS. MARY C. HAMLIN, Sullivan, Ind.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by druggists on guarantee first bottle benefits or money back. If it fails he will refund your money.

SEA TO TAME BAD BOY

INCURABLE SPENDER IS SENT AWAY BY HIS MOTHER.

Hires Ship and Liquids and Their Will Pass Upon Cases Very Soon—Civilization—Severe Storm Causes Great Loss.

Mrs. Bloodgood of New York, who is the mother of Ralph Bloodgood, the bought and unmanageable, has been sent to Italy by her son. Ralph is a member of the Knickerbocker club and has earned a prodigious amount of notoriety in London. He is a big, good-looking fellow, and when he is at home he is very fond of his mother. Ever since he was a little boy he has been a terrible spendthrift. When he was 10 years old he ran away from home because his mother would not give him a pony worth $300. He was brought back, and his mother, to prevent his running away again, gave him the pony. When he was 14 years old he ran away again, and his mother had to buy him a pony worth $500 to induce him to come home. When he was 16 years old he was sent to Eton, and his mother had to pay his bills, which were very large. When he was 18 years old he was sent to Oxford, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Cambridge, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Paris, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Vienna, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Berlin, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Rome, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Madrid, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lisbon, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Constantinople, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Cairo, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Calcutta, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Melbourne, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Sydney, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Yokohama, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to San Francisco, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Chicago, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to New York, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Newport, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lenox, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Tuxedo, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Bar Harbor, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Narragansett Pier, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Saratoga, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Champlain, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake George, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Mohonk, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Placid, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Minnetonka, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Michigan, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Superior, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Erie, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Ontario, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Huron, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Tahoe, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Tanganyika, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Nyassa, and his mother had to pay his bills. He was then sent to Lake Victoria

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.

That every citizen should be enrolled in war, is a view of the war-rage situation that is growing in favor. It is believed by some thoughtful students of our problems that the assessment of a heavy fine or limited tax of the voting privilege, should follow failure to cast their votes on the part of those possessed of that right. While the results of neglect may not lead to the more serious possibilities for our government of the people in the minds of those most anxious over the situation, it would not be at all unreasonable to make it possible an incident of individual loss and regret so far as those responsible for the possibilities of danger from that direction are concerned.

• • •

The suggestion that too much is being attempted and too much accomplished by the people of the United States, is probably a timely warning in a needed direction. That the present pause in American business life is leading to nervous prostration is probably not far from the truth. It is to be hoped, however, that the cure prescribed will not be a change of political administrations. The election of a democrat to succeed President Roosevelt would undoubtedly bring about the quietest sort of a season; the clamor for freight cars would be done away with and the American business pace would slow up so abruptly as to although many of the pacers over the handicap. There is not the least doubt but that such a change would be effectual, but the remedy would prove far worse than the present embarrassment.

The distribution of several million dollars to the farmers of Michigan on sugar beet account, already this season, in the several Michigan factories, makes it quite plain that it was good business sense and not mere sentiment or politics that caused several of our Michigan congressmen to urge against tariff concessions that would weaken sugar beet values in Michigan and would not directly or indirectly help the growers of cane anywhere within the area of American territory. And another suggestion of importance is given through these recent large payments to Michigan sugar producers, and that is that more beet and fewer potatoes should be produced in this state, especially in the northern section of the lower peninsula. Potato prices throughout the state are now below the cost of their production, and this is a periodical affliction. It would mean millions more to Michigan if the potato farmers who can would include sugar beets as one of their large crops.

Mr. August Sherpe, the popular overseer of the poor, at Fort Madison, Ia., says: "Dr. King's New Life Pills are rightly named; they act more agreeably and do more good and make one feel better than any other laxative." Guaranteed to cure biliousness and constipation. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

One of White & Co's logging camps in the east end of the county was partially destroyed by fire on Sunday last. It is believed the fire was of incendiary origin, to try and cover a burglary to the same place.

Cadillac News: Joseph Wiesman, proprietor of the Fair store on South Mitchell street, together with his brother, Jacob Wiesman, of Ionia, were arrested and placed in jail in Grand Rapids Friday night, by Deputy United States Marshal O'Donnell, upon indictments returned by the federal grand jury. According to the statement given out, Jacob Wiesman was in business in East Jordan one year ago, with the Cadillac man in his employ, when an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against him, setting his assets at $4,000 and his liabilities at $20,000. It will be remembered that at the time it was declared that the books of the firm had disappeared, and that considerable of the firm's goods were shipped to Hobart, from where they also disappeared. In the indictments, the two brothers are charged with entering into a conspiracy to conceal the property of a bankrupt estate, that was fixed at $1,000 which was formulated, and the brothers were liberated.

Man Just Promoted Once On Lake Survey in This Section.

Walter J. Graves, for several years junior engineer in the United States lake survey offices in Detroit, has been appointed assistant to Superintendent L. C. Sabin, of the same bureau and corps, in his new position he will assist in designing and constructing the new $6,200,000 lock and canal, under Col. Charles E. L. B. Davis, district engineer, and the immediate supervision of Mr. Sabin, assistant engineer in charge.

Engineer Graves is a Michigan man, born at Adrian in 1870. After a mechanical course at the Michigan Agricultural College, he was engaged in engineer work on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, from 1892 to 1895.

In 1896 he was graduated from Cornell University, and at once came to the lake survey, where he has served continuously ever since. Among other duties he has engaged in water level observation, and in measurements of the flow of the St. Clair River at Fort Huron, and was later given charge of a survey party. In 1903, Mr. Graves was placed in charge of the United States steamer Surveyor, engaged in important hydrographic survey work in the north ends of Lakes Michigan, with headquarters at Beaver Island for two or three seasons, and Huron and in Lake Superior. He is credited with discovering and surveying many uncharted shoals.

In the line of perfecting the work of his branch of the government establishment, Engineer Graves has designed new apparatus and devised new methods for performing survey work. He is an associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, a member of the Detroit Engineering Society, and other bodies.

Cured of Long Trouble.

"It is now eleven years since I had a sore scrotum from chronic constipation," writes C. O. Floyd, a leading business man of Keyhoe, S. C. "I had run down in weight to 135 pounds, and coughing was constant, both by day and by night. Finally I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and continued this for about six months, when my cough and lung trouble was entirely gone and I was restored to my normal weight, 170 pounds." Those suffering from colds or lung troubles should not fail to use this great remedy. Sold under guarantee by F. G. Hines & Co. drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle, free.

Important Land Reclamation

Long past month of this city, on both sides of the railroad, just over the southern border of Hayes township, is a tract of about 1000 acres of land that up to quite recently, has been to the eye of the traveler, an apparently barren waste.

Covered with bushes and half burned fallen timber it has presented the appearance of an area only fit for rabbits and foxes, and a worthless blotch on the fair reputation of Northern Michigan.

Then Jas M. Felts, an experienced Indiana farmer cast his eye over it. He went in and investigated the soil. Then he bought fifteen hundred acres of it quick, and started in to clean it up. Subsequently he sold 500 acres of it to another Indiana farmer named Barrett.

Mr. Felts' investigations were a revelation to him and a surprise to the natives. He found the soil as good and productive as any in Charlevoix county. He cleaned up a patch and sowed grass seed. The result was marvellous in yield. Then he increased his operations until he has sixty acres cleared and ready for the plow. He proposes to clear and ultimately develop his entire tract of 800 acres for crops or stock.

Mr. Barrett proposes to clear his 500 acres and establish a stock farm thereon. The land is all muck and loam, with good clay sub-soil, and possesses all the essentials of excellent farming land, and will prove a most valuable addition to the area of productive agricultural land of Charlevoix county.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Ethel Cook, a member of the 1905 class, is attending the High School taking up sufficient studies to complete her course as a graduate. In the class of 1906, is also spending her vacation taking up work in the High School.

Ruth Eastman returned to school Monday morning after an absence of several days on account of illness.

Bessie Hanshaw substituted Monday morning, in Miss Jarvis' room in the North Ward school.

Ethel Cook gave the class an interesting lesson in Manual Training last week, in paper cutting. One of her pupils a little Danish girl, had taught her. The little girl's father had learned it in Denmark when he had gone to school and had taught his daughter. She set a jack-o-lantern, two kinds, and a basket out of paper. She informed us that she made use of both of these articles in her school work.

CHAPTER XII.

As soon as Stafford had completed his task, he summoned some of the servants to show him to Mr. Wylie's apartment. He was good enough to assure them that each behalf of "Mr. Wylie" he would be rather not satisfied. The servants, thus dismissed, left the room, and Stafford was alone. A bedroom, very comfortable in because spite of its size, was furnished in the luxurious fashion with the exception of a model workshop, and an old-fashioned bureau, and half under the grate, that would not matter to the man who was fond of thinking, and I will assist you to the utmost in further research." He gave you a sketch of Stafford's apartment. As to my mind, Stafford was a man of strong will, of great nerve. He not merely was clear and logical, but he had the power of concentration, of fixing his mind on the matter in hand, to the exclusion of everything else. Stafford, who could more than once go straight for days without food or sleep, or rest, who could bear pain without a quiver, who could be absolutely cool in the face of danger, who could be absolutely cool in the face of danger, who could be absolutely cool in the face of danger

STAND BY TARIFF.

INADEQUATE REASONS ADVANCED FOR REVISION.

Tariff Reputation Would Bring Price Reduction, and Also Wage Reduction—Values of Farm Products Also Would Go Down.

A majority of those now advocating tariff revision and reduction do so for the avowed purpose of breaking up monopolies and producing lower prices for products in our own country, yet few of them are willing to assist the articles that are now too high. Certainly no man advocates lower prices for farm products in a community where farm products are produced. Yet it is not reasonable to believe that the prices of other commodities could be reduced by an approach to free trade without reducing the prices which the farmer receives. It would be impossible to reduce the prices of lumber, iron and steel goods, steel rails, coal, hides and wool without these reductions having an effect upon wages in manufactories, and when wages begin to go down the prices for farm products will also go down because of the decreased purchasing capacity of the wage-worker. The farmers' market is contingent on the steady employment of men in other pursuits and men cannot be steadily employed in other pursuits when prices are constantly going downward.

It is erroneous on the part of Republicans to concede that monopolies are the creatures of the tariff. When that point is conceded, the whole Republican position is given away, when that much is conceded then the democratic contention is established. It is also erroneous to say that it is necessary to cut down the present tariff in order to lessen the profits of numerous American industries at the present time.

Some men say that they want tariff schedules lowered that they do not want the schedules made low enough to let foreign made goods. The advocates of such doctrines assert that they would simply want to take off the "surplus tariff," leaving it high enough to leave the American manufacturer and producer in full and undisturbed possession of the American market. We concede that it is only necessary to leave a tariff high enough to leave the American manufacturer and producer in full possession of the American market. But we contend that a tariff that is higher than is necessary for that purpose does not mean merely enough higher prices for American products to American consumers.

It is a well-known fact that prices do not constantly range high except when the demand is without limit, and when prices are high and the demand is without limit now factories will be built and competition will enter in. And competition with those building the results which all protectionists say are logical, to-wit: a lower scale of prices. It is erroneous to constantly couple the tariff with the American prices of products. It is erroneous to attempt to use the protective tariff to affect the prices of every commodity. The theory of protection is that the duty should be high enough to keep all American trade at home, to preserve the American market for American. The theory then is that Americans competing with Americans will be all that will be necessary to maintain reasonable prices to the consumer.

When a man talks about lowering the tariff to give Americans foreign competition for the purpose of reducing the prices in America, and then in the same breath says he is not in favor of making a tariff low enough to surrender any part of the American market, he is talking nonsense. If a part of the American market is to be surrendered, the prices would not be reduced at home and the purpose for which he advocates reduction are not accomplished. If his purposes were to be accomplished the foreign products must interfere in the American market, which would bring lower prices and demoralization at home.

A majority of those who advocate lowering the tariff claim to have in mind a desire to strike at Rockefeller, Morgan and the millionaire class generally. A majority of those who advocate tariff changes desire to strike a blow at the very rich. We say that there ought to be some other way of striking at the rich without striking at everybody else at the same time. We take it that no one has any love for the millionaire class. It is conceded that they have more than they need and more than they ought to have, but the millionaire class would not suffer by the giving of a part of the American market to the foreigner.

Coming back to Mark Hanna's doctrine, we inquire—that inasmuch as the country is prosperous—why not let the tariff alone? We are not buying steel rails. Those who buy them have the money with which to do it. Congress is regulating the rates of the railroads, and railroad rates would be no lower if steel rails were selling at $12 per ton. We have always believed that those Republicans who talk about reducing the tariff in order to reduce prices to the consumer do so for the purpose of catching the ear of the groundlings and drawing temporary applause.

The Dingley law is all right. It put American labor and American industry on their feet. It put money in the treasury. It paid the expenses of the Spanish-American war. It is digging the Panama canal. Stand by the Dingley law.—Des Moines Capital.

Most Valuable Meerschaum Pipe.

What is described as the largest pipe in the world is valued at $40,000, and is counted as one of the most remarkable pieces of carving in existence. The pipe is made of one solid block of meerschaum, and represents the landing of Columbus. There are six figures in the block, each one four inches high. The carver who executed this masterpiece is dead, and as the demand for this sort of work has greatly died out, it is practically impossible to fill a mate to Columbus it.

THE GERMAN DEMANDS.

Involve the Abandonment of the American Tariff System.

Three important changes in our tariff system are demanded by the German government as the price of commercial retaliation against American exports. Any one of the three changes would be a heavy price to pay for fair treatment at the hands of Germany. The three combined would practically amount to a permit to Germany exporters to write the American tariff to suit themselves.

First, it is asked that no penalty shall attach to undervaluation unless it shall amount to ten per cent. Against this world, in many instances, reduce our tariff at least five per cent. An invoice of $100 real value could then be entered at $90 if the ad valorem rate is 10 per cent. The net reduction of the tariff will be five per cent. In some instances a merchant would give our market to the Germans. Upon $150,000,000 of imports the ten per cent latitude would worry a decrease of $7,500,000 of customs revenue.

At present there is no legalized latitude or margin for undervaluation. When importers make "mistakes" they are let them in the shape of duties increased cent per cent, with the minimum of undervaluation. To grant a margin of ten per cent would be equivalent to the legalization of undervaluation.

Second the German government asks that values made for export, and not regular market values for domestic consumption, be under the proposed law, shall be accepted without question by our tariff collecting officials. If this concession were to be granted there would be no need of the ten per cent undervaluation leniency. Consigning goods in their own agents in the United States, the German exporters could then have a far greater latitude for undervaluation than one per cent. The invoice selling at the place of production at the current wholesale market prices of goods might be valued for export purposes at 90c or even as low as 75c. The exporters as great as these would need real market values and "export values" to avoid incurring heavy duties. Would be of constant recurrence, the value question would be unbearable. It has port value" privileges were to be legalized. As well repeal the Dingley tariff altogether, for then the domestic producer would know where he stood, at all times. The demand for the recognizance of "export values" is proper enough. It is unreasonable that it should be for a moment seriously considered, much less accepted by

Third, the granting of open bonings in all cases for the determination of value and classification. The effect of such a change would be to subsidize our cut off the government from obtaining expert information. Honest importers would not care a consummation for the advantage of undervaluing importers that would place them to disadvantage as a class. This fact is well known, and it is for the purpose of depriving the government of the continuing of honest importers that the demand for open bearings is pressed.

What Germany wants and will try to get in the shape of tariff privileges for her competing exports is fairly enumerated in these three propositions. What she will get remains to be seen. Which concessions she will grant in the event of enforcing the retaliatory tariff. Discrimination provided for in her maximum tariff schedule, is least expressed in the proviso of the McKinley tariff bill. Whether the Kaiser's government will win its point of tariff and indemnities, or whether it will be not with a rousing bluff, depends upon the backbone of the American congress.

He is Not Tired of the Tariff.

The Same Argument.

Organized labor has the same argument as do protectionists—there is no reason why the protected manufacturer should share his profits with the foreign manufacturer, we inquire—that inasmuch as the country is prosperous—why not let the tariff alone? We are not buying steel rails. Those who buy them have the money with which to do it. Congress is regulating the rates of the railroads, and railroad rates would be no lower if steel rails were selling at $12 per ton. We have always believed that those Republicans who talk about reducing the tariff in order to reduce prices to the consumer do so for the purpose of catching the ear of the groundlings and drawing temporary applause.

The Dingley law is all right. It put American labor and American industry on their feet. It put money in the treasury. It paid the expenses of the Spanish-American war. It is digging the Panama canal. Stand by the Dingley law.—Des Moines Capital.

Terror's Effect on Hair.

It has been repeatedly affirmed that Queen Marie Antoinette's auburn hair turned white in the days of the reign of terror and we English scholars named Fairy state that just after the Indian mutiny he actually saw the jet black hair of a rebel sepoy, who was under examination and found a dreadful death, turn white in the course of an hour. In the time of the commune in Paris, the dark locks of Darcy, a phrase de Rothschild was blanched in a few hours.

MENACE TO ALL

Giant Mail Order Concerns Are Sapping Country of Its Wealth.

SMALLER TOWNS CRUSHED

By Assisting in the Centralization of Wealth, Patrons of These Institutions Contribute to Their Own Injury.

(Copyright, 1906, by Alfred C. Clark.)

Every year millions upon millions of dollars find their way from the towns, villages and rural districts of the country to the coffers of the mail order houses in the cities, and go to the upbuilding of enormous institutions in the centers of population. Naturally, the stations from which the contributions are made suffer accordingly.

Figures ever tell a better story than words. Here are figures which tell a story so stupendous that its full significance cannot be grasped in a moment, but the more sight of which are awe inspiring.

In the year 1905 two mail order houses, located in Chicago, did a business amounting in round numbers to $100,000,000. In the year 1904 these same concerns did a business of about $80,000,000, a gain of $18,000,000 or nearly 20 per cent in a single year be-ing thus exhibited.

These figures represent the sale last year of one dollar's worth of merchandise for every man, woman and child in the country by two catalogue houses alone, and those operating from the same central point. Dozens more of varying size and importance are operating all over the country from coast to coast and from border to border.

The "Man Behind the Plow" last year contributed a large portion of the vast number of millions which found their way into the coffers of the mail order houses. The money so contributed were this deprived of it, suffered accordingly.

Hundreds of concerns throughout the country which now are doing business through the regular trade channels awaiting only a parcels post law to be put into effect, already prepared in many instances, which would project their lines into the mail order field, and this does not take into account the hundreds and perhaps thousands of entirely new mail order concerns which inevitably would spring into existence under such friendly auspices.

The two Chicago institutions referred to, whose combined business includes several hundred million dollars, found themselves cramped for room. One of them expended not less than $1,000,000, and probably more, for a new home. The other lately has expended or has contracted to expend at least $1,000,000 for an immense new building.

Anyone who will reflect even casually on what such business means, must grasp the influence of the mail order business in toward the centralization of wealth, and how enormous a part it is playing in this direction will be understood from a second glance at the figures which have been given above.

It is due to himself that every patron of the mail order house should inquire honestly of himself what the final outcome is to be if the mail order business shall continue to make the great strides which have marked its progress during the last half decade.

It is useless to regret the well worn argument of the mail order concerns that they are doing good because more cheaply than the merchants in the regular channels of trade to leave their customers more money than ever to devote to home enterprises and institutions. The fallacy of this statement has been proved over and over again by actual and infinite comparison of goods as to their quality, and prices. To refute it finally and indisputably by a simpler and more direct method it is necessary only to ask the reliable business men of any of the smaller communities to show you some of the letters their books and accounts of the harm the mail order habit is doing their communities.

It is a truth as old as the hills and as certain as the rising and setting of the sun that no country or section of a country can prosper unless the profits of its people shall be prosperous, much general prosperity as may exist cannot be sustained if the institutions of the already larger and wealthier communities are to continue to be built up by contributions that should be spent at home from the thousands of smaller communities.

The seed of the country, a desert, not seed upon which the welfare of the individual depends, is for the upbuilding and continued progress of the smaller communities, so that the wealth of the country may be distributed over the entire country, and not congested and controlled in large amounts in a comparative few centers of population.

Therefore, the man who sends away from his own community money which he might have spent at home and permitted a fair profit to the home merchant to be retained there for the benefit of the community, is injuring his community, and therefore the prospects for his own future prosperity.

In a large number of instances he is doing more than this. Unwittingly, or unthinkingly, perhaps, he is violating his own principles of right and justice, for, at the expense of his own community, he is unwittingly contributing profits to the capitalistic combinations which his conscientious crime cost are now beginning to crush him.

The mail order giants direct their attacks particularly toward the people of the smaller towns and the agricultural districts. In hundreds of thousands of the homes of these latter the catalogues of the mail order houses is as regularly received as the home paper. The man on the farm last year sent a very large portion of eighty millions of dollars to two of these institutions, in one community, alone.

In all sincerity we ask: Admitting, purely for the sake of the argument, that the farmer or the resident of the small community can save a few dollars on some of his purchases, or even

NO GOLD SCARCITY.

DEPOSITS OF PRECIOUS METAL ALL OVER THE WORLD.

In Small Quantities It is Found in Almost All Volcanic Rocks and Will Yet Profitably Be Taken from the Sea.

The world's gold supply is absolutely inexhaustible, no matter what demands are made upon it, says a writer in Moody's Magazine. Hitherto the attention of miners has been entirely directed to comparatively rich, easily worked deposits. But it has to be remembered that gold in small quantities occurs in enormous masses of rock throughout the world.

Almost all volcanic rocks and the formations derived from them, such as granite, serpentine and thyolite, contain appreciable quantities of gold and vast deposits of sedimentary rocks derived from such volcanic formations contain gold in concentrated form, and are to-day in some localities profitably worked.

Profit is and always has been the incentive to gold prospecting. Should there ever be need for working the volcanic and sedimentary rocks that are auriferous the means of profitably working them will be found.

Sea water has shown that gold is regularly falling to the earth, in combination with cosmic dust, and day and night settles all over the land and sea. Some of this gold, when concentrated by what or water, or dissolved by gold surface waters and redeposited in a more concentrated form, is recoverable.

The waters of the sea, also, are auriferous, and there can be little doubt that if ever in the remote future there should be an extraordinary demand for gold, means could be found for profitably extracting the gold in the seawater.

The area of the seabed is much larger than that of the land. Its composition is similar in every respect with that of the land. It is composed of mountains, plains and plateaus; of islands, mediterranean and continental rocks which contain great areas of gold bearing and other mineral veins.

Only in a few instances, however, where the submarine gold fields are close to the land will it be possible to work them as the submarine mines needs are now worked. But those oceanic gold fields on which the veins outcrop at the surface are subject to constant attrition by the waves. This causes the shedding of gold, which is concentrated by the sea and washed ashore.

Gold deposits thus formed exist in many countries and they are remarkable in that they are renewed or enriched by almost every storm that passes over them. These deposits are known by various names, but the term auriferous beach sand sufficiently describes them. They occur in the Pacific beaches, from Alaska to Terra del Fuego, and throughout the coasts of Australia and New Zealand, where they have long been worked with profitable results.

The gold output from the gold-bearing beaches at Nome, Alaska, this year is expected to reach $1,000,000. The coast between Cape Nome and Point Rodney for a distance of more than 75 miles is being worked for gold by hundreds of men.

The beach is in places auriferous for a width of 2,000 feet inland from the sea, and for a considerable depth, 40 feet. From the western issue of Cape Nome there is a series of gravelly sea beaches extending inland over miles, which contain gold and are in places being worked to-day. These marine deposits yielded gold to the value of $2,500,000 in 1903, $1,450,000 in 1904 and $2,850,000 in 1905.

The earth has also immense lagoons of auriferous sands and clays. These are chiefly in the arid regions in many countries they are profitably worked by dry blowing processes.

Not experienced in Australia have shown that much of the gold can be extracted in these cases by a special adaptation of gold dredging known as the pulmocoing process. These deposits are formed by the erosion of auriferous rock formations and the concentration of the gold by the action of wind and rain.

Married Men Appreciated.

Everywhere broke with favor on the married men in Australia, and he is considered to deserve well of his country. Even if he is an impudent author on nothing, and has no home to which to take his bride, he is not much blamed; his relations or her relations generally come to the rescue and set the young couple on their feet. In the government service the married man is very tenderly treated, and the rule is that no married man shall be dismissed except for insubordination. Needless to say, all the young clerks take wives at the earliest possible moment, and thus insure their positions.

AT HOME IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Yankee Cop, Bandmaster and Coachman Entertain a Visitor.

"You are not always in a foreign country when you are out of the United States," said a man who was enthusiastic experiences with a New Orleans Picayune writer.

"I was held up in a Nova Scotia coast town one evening, awaiting the arrival of a belated steamer. The only attraction in the place was an open air concert by the town band, and I strolled out to kill time. The musicians of the band wore the red uniform and the British colors were suspended from the front of the stand.

"I took my seat on a fence near by. Just as I got myself well balanced a cop came and courteously informed me that the fence was private property and that I would have to climb down. I obeyed orders.

"While waiting for the music I chatted with the cop. The band got time and played several numbers, all foreign airs.

"When I asked the cop if he knew the leader, he said he did. I asked him to bait in and tell the leader that an American was in the crowd and that he would like to hear something from home.

"The leader obliged and the band rendered 'Old Black Joe,' 'Maryland, My Home,' 'Dixie,' 'Dolly Gray,' 'Yankee Doodle,' 'Hail' and wound up with the 'Star-Spangled Banner.' The attitude applauded and I made as much noise as was desirable.

"While the band was playing this last gem I the cop asked:

"Where are you from?' When I told him he said: 'You can get up on the fence if you want; stay you here. I'm from the United States myself.'

"I gave him a cigar and we got chummy.

"I told him to thank the leader for me and tell him he had made me feel as if I was not far from home.

"'I guess he knows how it is himself,' said the cop. 'He's from the states, too. He lives in Boston and comes over here in the summer to give the band lessons. He told me once that although all the musicians were Canucks they marked American sheet music from any other.'

"After the concert I took a seat in the conveyance that took me back to my hotel. It was crowded and I sat beside the driver. He was very polite and I asked him if he was a blue nose.

"'Not by a long shot,' he replied. 'I come from Wisconsin. It's all up to here to skin them Canucks and I'm doing it all right.'

"Then, indeed, I felt as if I was not far from home."

Proper Care of a Pipe.

To obtain the best results from a briar pipe and have a the pleasure of smoking, the following hints will be found of value. Fill the pipe well, light the tobacco evenly and smoke slowly. This will avoid excessive heating of the wood and will prevent it from burning. See that the tobacco is entirely consumed so that the cake forms inside of the bowl evenly and if the cake is allowed to become too thick it will soiled the bowl, because when heated the cake expands more rapidly than the wood. When the cake has been scraped away the same care should be taken as with a new pipe. Always keep your pipe clean; this will prevent it from getting strong. Item of a keep several pipes in use and change frequently.

It is an easy task to give directions that will insure the life and coloring of every meerschaum pipe. Much depends on the quality of the material, as also on the care exercised by the smoker. Always smoke slowly. The a meerschaum button. Allow the pipe to cool before refilling. Keep the bowls away from the heat while it is hot. Use a top load if the smoker desires to color the pipe in the top. Avoid smoking the pipe out of doors in rainy or extremely cold weather. Unscrew the mouthpiece only when necessary that is when the pipe is charged and needs cleaning. Use a knife with a rounded edge when it becomes necessary to remove the cake to the bowl.

Qualities That Win Success.

Nothing will give permanent success in so complex of life, except native capacity cultivated by honest and persevering effort. Genius is often but the capacity for receiving and improving by discipline.—G. Eliot.

THE SENTINEL

Don't Neglect It

It is a serious mistake to neglect a weak heart. It is such a short step to chronic heart disease. When you notice irregularity of action, occasioning short breath, palpitation, fluttering, pain in chest or difficulty in lying on left side, your heart needs help—a strengthening tonic. There is no better remedy than Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. Its strengthening influence is felt almost at once.

"I have used 13 bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and can truthfully state it has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I was troubled for twenty six years with a weak heart and shortness of breath. I was so bad I could not walk a block or two without stopping to rest. I am now able to do my work and feel as well as I ever did. I can recommend Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to all who suffer as I did, and will always speak a good word for Dr. Miles' Heart Cure." MRS. ANNA BOSTWICK, Ashland, Ohio.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by druggists on a guarantee. First bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on heart and nerves sent free. Address Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, Co., Elkhart, Ind.

BOY ROBBER EXPERT.

OPENS BURGLAR-PROOF SAFE WITH HAIRPIN.

New Jersey Lad at Ten Years Is Placed Under Arrest—Gives Police Trying Point to Scotland Yard, Says Detective.

Herbert Hanson, Chicago and a schoolboy, with a safe and a hairpin, opened a burglar-proof safe within half an hour, and without the use of the officers' Mulvaney Mackenzie, a well known detective on Dearborn street, announced. Young Hanson's wife is a prisoner. They were married in Chicago, Feb. 14, 1905, when he was 17 years of age and she 16 years of age. The marriage was a secret in the parents of the young people, who had planned to have the ceremony performed over the telephone. But the young people were married after they had eloped to Hobart, Ind., and the marriage was kept a secret for a month, when the young people went to their homes and announced what had happened. The young couple were married by Justice Hoffman, who married them in the parlor of his home, and they went to Chicago where they have lived ever since. Hanson is employed by the Illinois Steel company, and his wife is employed in the Sears-Roebuck department store. The young couple have lived happily together and have never had a quarrel or a word of reproach for each other. The young couple are well known in Chicago, and have many friends who are astonished at the news that the young man is a burglar and safe cracker of such ability as to be placed under arrest by the police of Chicago.

Hanson's father, who is a prominent Chicago contractor, said: "I am astonished beyond measure at the news that my son has been arrested for burglary. He has been a good boy and I have never had any trouble with him. He has been married for three years, and his wife is a good girl. I do not know how he learned the trick of opening a safe with a hairpin, but I suppose he learned it from some of his companions. I do not know how he learned the trick, but I suppose he learned it from some of his companions. I do not know how he learned the trick, but I suppose he learned it from some of his companions. I do not know how he learned the trick

The recent defeat of the socialists of Germany is a very proper source of satisfaction to all the friends of good government in the United States. Notwithstanding all the differences which exist in this government of the people as compared with the governments of England and Germany and France, the socialists of the United States have been as severe in the criticism of the American form of government as of the monarchies of Europe. They have also hesitated upon occasion to cheer and encourage in their course in the United States by their victories in France and Germany and elsewhere, and that is why their decided defeat in Germany is now not cut by gladness by those who regard the ideas of the average socialist as a hindrance rather than an aid to real advancement in the direction of good government.

Neighbors Get Fooled.

"I was literally coughing myself to death, and had become too weak to leave my bed; and neighbors predict that I would never leave it alive, but they got fooled, for thanks be to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It took just four dollar bottles to completely cure the cough and restore me to good health." writes Mrs Wm Speaker, of Grovertown, Stark Co., Ind. This King of cough and cold cures, and healer of throat and lungs is guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. Druggist. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Anna Alcock has been absent from school for a few days on account of sickness but has now recovered and is back and ready for work.

Ethel Cook and Jennie Mitchell recently entered the High School and expect to graduate next spring with the class of '07.

The teachers now have the program arranged to accommodate every one in the High School as far as is possible under the circumstances.

Monday morning, Jan. 27th, Dr. Crouter and Mr. Miller, members of the school board, made a short visit to the high school assembly. Teachers and students are always glad to have any one interested in the schools visit them.

The gymnasium in the basement of the High School, is now finished with a fine under floor and a track about seventy yards long around the sides and ends of the room. It is fitted with apparatus such as parallel bars, looking glasses, dumbells, bars, rings etc. This is one of the finest High School gyms, in Northern Michigan and a gym. society has been formed which will soon be at work.

County Normal.

Mamie Williams substituted a half day last week in the second and third grade room in the Central building in the place of Miss Smith, who was ill.

Ruth Ekstrom came to school Monday and Tuesday of last week but was suffering so much with a bad cold that she was compelled to be absent the rest of the week.

Commissioner J. H. Milford and Miss Hudson, of East Jordan visited us last Friday afternoon.

Miss Himes says she feels as though she were just beginning a new school year, for she has undone the work of us did) because last Saturday she with three other teachers moved and began keeping house by themselves. Miss Reed keeps the rooms in order while Miss Himes oversees the cooking department. We think Miss Himes looks like a good cook and we hope they will give us a chance to prove it. Miss Lombard makes the kindling. She calls out mathematical minds in school and we are afraid she will cut her fingers at home. The other teacher is noted for her good looks and so was taken in for oramentation but she is reported to be "Useful as well as ornamental."

Bids for Poor Farm.

Bids will be received up to Feb. 10th, 1907, for serving in the position of Keeper of the Charlevoix county poor farm. Bids to specify terms etc. Bids may be left with R. A. Miller, Charlevoix; Wm. Herrington, East Jordan; or J. H. Kennedy, Boyne Falls. Right reserved to reject any or all bids.

Board of Poor Commissioners.

Blown From the Stage.

A prominent manufacturer, Wm. A. Tarwell, of Lancaster, N. O., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like on rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease, in the advanced stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and kidney complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at F. G. Hines & Co. druggist. Price only 50c.

HAVE MANY ENEMIES.

Fish Are Preyed on From the Moment They Enter the World.

Some faint conception of the great destruction of eggs and young fishes and of the comparatively limited number of them to attain full growth may be formed from the statements of those who have made a study of fish productively. Thus the great English naturalist, Buffon, made a careful investigation of the number of eggs produced by a female herring and on that basis calculated the increase for 20 years. His conclusion was that the increase of a single pair of herring, if all reached maturity, would in a score of years amount to a mass as large as the earth.

Without going extensively into the figures of those who have made a study of this subject, it is only necessary to remember that the herring is a comparatively small fish, and that some of the larger species are almost equally prolific. Thus 10,000,000 eggs have been found in a female codfish and it is stated that one will produce not less than 45,000,000 young in a single season. The eggs of a female eel were counted, and the number was ascertained to be about 10,500,000. Other common fishes, while not so prolific as these, are enough so to make one wonder just how long all the waters on the earth could contain the fishes if all the eggs that are spawned should reach maturity. The seas and the oceans and the rivers would soon become impassable.

Fortunately for humanity, from the moment the egg is laid its enemies are ready for it. Eggs are eagerly sought and devoured, and young fishes have to better. Numerous natural enemies of the tiny tribe follow the mothers, or lie in wait for eggs and young, so that but few reach maturity, compared with the incalculable number that are brought into the world. Valuable as all fishes are for human food, it is fortunate that man is not the only animal that feeds on them.

The same conditions exist with the fish of the great lakes. With the possible exception of the cod, lake trout and white fish are equally prolific, and are subject to equally destructive raids. Sturgeon and suckers grow fat on the natural spawn, and big trout make merry with the small fry.

The fish commission is doing a grand work. There is abundant evidence that a large percentage of the fry deposited on the fishing grounds mature.

Lifelifter.

After a lingering illness covering the greater part of the winter, Mrs. Libbie Scott, wife of John Scott, died at her home in Northport lately. Besides her husband, three sons survive Ed, Bert and Birney, all of whom reside near here, the son Birney now occupying the farm at the "bight" on which his parents lived for many years. Mrs. Scott was one of the old pioneer of Leelanau county, having resided here for the greater part of her life. Two sisters, Mrs. Martha Dodd of northport and Mrs. Stover of Charlevoix, also survive her.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

The ice harvest has commenced.

Plenty of snow now for the loggers.

The mail carriers made their first trip across the ice Wednesday Jan. 30th.

Mr. W. C. D. Germain of Traverse City spent a few days on the island last week.

W. J. Gallagher and W. E. Stephens visited camp 4 at the south end of the island a few days ago.

Mr. Eric Busby met with quite a serious accident by being struck on the head with a falling limb.

Mr. Herman Allers and wife left here last week for South Haven to attend the funeral of Mrs. Allers' mother.

Mr. Hiram Doty, who works at Morrow Bros. camp was in receipt of a telegram announcing the death of his brother at Central Lake.

The remains of Mrs. Phil D. Malloy who died a Big Rapids a short time ago was brought here for burial. She leaves a husband one child and several relatives who will miss her very much.

In some way or another Dr. A. M. Wilkinson slipped and fell into a hole in the ice, and had it not been for the combined efforts of Mr. Jas. B. Gallagher and Jas. J. Martin we would now be minus a doctor.

Two Indians left Beaver Island for High Island Monday morning, with a horse and sleigh and loads of supplies, including a bale of hay. The whole outfit broke through the ice. One of the Indians got out and pulled the other out, but the could not extricate the horse. They then returned to Beaver Harbor. In the afternoon they went back to save the supplies, and found the horse still alive and pull and haul and drag him from the floating sleigh. How is that for High Island? The horse was got out apparently none the worse for wear.

Aid We Think So Too.

A leading citizen, the other day, in a barber shop discussion of local affairs, said: "There is no reason under heaven why the bodies of non-residents, and especially strangers, should be brought here and buried in Charlevoix cemetery. At the present rate, it will not be many years before we shall be looking up more ground for cemetery purposes. Quite recently the body of a man was brought here from Colorado. The man had never lived here, but ten dollars buys a lot. The price of lots to non-residents should be placed high enough to be practically prohibitive."

We agree with the citizen on the general trend of his remark, but the rule against non-residents should be made somewhat elastic. A case in point: A lot owner brings the remains of a son or daughter from a distant state, for burial in Brookside beside the body of a mother. The son or daughter in life may never have seen Charlevoix, yet the father is a resident.

Undoubtedly the citizen quoted above intended prohibition to embrace only the purchase of lots by non-resident, or by residents for the interment of the remains of non-residents. And yet this rule should be made a little flexible to cover an exceptional case.

At any rate, we believe the cemetery board should have discretionary power to restrict occupancy of Brookside to rational and reasonable limits. While we are heading our energies to build up our town and increase its population, we should remember that those who come after us, whether they be many or few, must also die.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Grand Traverse county has collected $140,706 inheritance tax within the past two years, the J. T. Hannah estate paying the largest amount $2,560.38. The money derived from this source goes to the primary school fund.

Boyne City business men and manufacturers had a banquet last Wednesday night that was a great success. Speeches were made that indicated a determined effort to boom the town, increasing its industries and incorporating as a city, with six wards.

Capt. Charles McConnell, of Indian River, who for several years, ran the passenger boat Charles D. on the inland route, will have an elegant new steamer on the route the coming season. The boat now being built will be 80 feet long and 16 feet beam in order that she may pass through the locks. Capt. McConnell will name her the City of Cheboygan. She will run from Cheboygan to Burt lake, taking in all the resorts, and will make the round trip every day.

"Ice clear to Manistique," is the information the crew of the car ferry grave out at Northport this morning. That means that Grand Traverse bay and the whole upper portion of Lake Michigan is covered with a thin coating of ice that bids fair to thicken rapidly. The portion of the bay that was open yesterday began to close rapidly yesterday afternoon and this morning there is no open water in sight from any bay point. This is an extraordinary thing at this time of the year when the weather a few weeks back is taken into consideration. The lake probably froze Tuesday night.—Traverse City Record.

Northport special to Traverse City Eagle. After calling Northport his home for the past 42 years. Howard E. Gill, one of the most prominent citizens of the village, left this morning for Panama, where he expects to spend some months, going to the tropical isthmus with the intention, if he finds things to his liking, of locating there permanently. If he does not find a desirable location in Panama, he will look elsewhere. He does not expect to return to Northport to live, although he has not disposed of his property at this place, still holding his home and other real estate. Mr. Gill has spent his entire life in the village of Northport, and from the time he was old enough to measure off a yard of cloth or weigh a pound of sugar has worked in the general store which was established by his father, the late William Gill, more than 50 years ago. In 1891 he became the owner of the store, which he managed until it burned to the ground last fall. Twenty years ago Mr. Gill was married to Miss Anna Hilliard, a school teacher, and they have reared a large family. Mr Gill has been postmaster at Northport for many years, was president of the village and held other offices. His family moved to Muskegon some time ago, where they will remain until he finds a permanent location. As a farewell gift a number of his friends presented him with a handsome gold watch, engraved, "From his friends to H. E. Gill."

Dan A. Shannon, the "Irish Evangelist," is having a great meeting at Cheboygan and will be here soon. The following is an extract from a letter from Mr. Shannon to the pastor of the Baptist church, dated Feb. 4th: "In spite of the zero weather yesterday we had a great day. At the afternoon meeting for men, fifteen decided for Christ. At the meeting last night twelve more made a definite surrender. Some forty have been seeking Christ, fifteen already added to the church. It will be impossible for me to be there next Sunday. The work is developing in a wonderful way. The whole city is shaken." "I didn't be impatient, I am sure we will have a great awakening in Charlevoix, and I shall not leave until the work is finished. Will let you know in time when I will come."

All the members of the church are urged to rally at once and get ready for the coming of the evangelist and the great work God has called us to. Surely a sweeping revival is coming to our city. Who says Amen?

—Chas. Shepard and family left Tuesday for Benton Harbor, where Mr. Shepard has accepted a position in a hardware store.

The SENTINEL and the New York Tribune for one year for $2.00 per year, or the SENTINEL and the Chicago Daily Chronicle for $3.

—Penship is just waking up to the paying proposition, and yet they tell the stranger within their gates that Charlevoix is a back number.

—Special communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. next Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th, for work on second degree. By order of W. M.

—Mrs. Clara Law, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Milo Bacon, the past month, returned to her home in Covington, Ky., on Tuesday.

—The Emperor of Germany, while sleigh riding near Brandenburg gate, Berlin, lately, was accidently hit by a snow ball thrown by a boy. That kid should be arrested.

—Manager Bridge, of the Charlevoix Theater, is in correspondence with the William Owen Shakespearian Co. for its appearance here in the near future, and prospects are good.

—The many friends of Levi Shea will be glad to learn that he is now considered safely on the road to recovery. Mr. Shea has been very ill for two months, so ill in fact that at one time his life was despaired of.

—Henry O'Leary went to Oklahoma to seek his fortune some months ago, but is back, having concluded that Charlevoix is good enough for him. On Tuesday he bought O. D. Hammond's bus line and anchored himself down to stay in the best town in Northern Michigan.

—The ice harvest is on and a large number of men and teams are employed in filling the big ice houses of the Booth Co., the fisheries, the hotels, saloons, and local retailers. In addition to this, R. S. Shapton is getting out twenty car loads for the Pere Marquette people at Petoskey. Probably Charlevoix will harvest a larger amount of ice than any other town in Northern Michigan because of our extensive fishing establishments. It is a midwinter industry of large proportions. An investigation of the work shows that the total crop of ice cut there this winter will be 1600 cords, or nearly 3,000 tons. Forty men and ten teams employed, and the work lasts five or six weeks.

—F. E. Frazier, the shoe man, has a new ad this week.

—Iva Benton left here Tuesday for Detroit, where he has accepted a good electrical position.

—Albert Holmes, who has been five weeks in southern Michigan, with his parents, returned home Tuesday.

—Capt. John Stuffelebeam, last year master of Ann Arbor ferry No. 4, will sail the steamer Illinois this year.

—Ezra Bowen and wife, of Santa Cruz, Calif., were the guests of Capt. and Mrs. F. D. Campbell, the past week.

—The new 15 horse power electric motor at the Ferry seed warehouse went into commission Friday, and works like a charm.

—Supt. Woodley, of the public schools, is happy this week over the accession of another son to the family. The boy arrived Tuesday afternoon, and both mother and son are doing well.

—Following are the Charlevoix county delegates to the Republican State convention being held at Grand Rapids today: J. M. Harris, F. E. Turrell, R. Newcombe, J. L. Crawford, A. J. Strand, A. L. Conlier.

—The SENTINEL has made a clubbing arrangement that will be pleasing to its patrons and readers. By it we are enabled to furnish the SENTINEL and the New York Tribune Farmer (weekly) for $2.00 per year, or the SENTINEL and the Chicago Daily Chronicle for $3 per year. This to new subscribers or those who pay one full year in advance. This combination is one of the best being offered by any country paper, and should be taken advantage of.

—Miss Maggie Zeitler, who is teaching in the Ishpeming Settlement school, near East Jordan, came to Ironton last Saturday and brought with her the following young people: Rosa Belisle, Mary Sturge, Christina LaBarr, Mary Hanly, Mary Bieber, John Sturge, Joe Hanly, Frank Vacek, Joe Zitka, Louie Gass, James Liska and Clarence Corthaire. They intended to drive to Charlevoix Sunday but the storm prevented them. They all reported a very pleasant time. They returned to the settlement Sunday afternoon.

A GREAT EVENT.

The Charlevoix Historical Society's Lincoln Day Banquet.

The grand old Historical Society—thirty years of age and still robust—embracing the best of Charlevoix society and proud of its three decades of honorable and useful existence—fittingly observed Lincoln's birthday Tuesday night. It was a feast for both body and mind.

Of the first of the above mentioned elements of the event we need only say that it was at the Staton. One hundred and seventy-three covers were laid, and the beautiful dining room was full to its limit. The spacious lobby was decorated with flags of all nations while bunting draped graced the dining room—"out glory" predominating in graceful folds. Carnations and smilax gave color and beauty to every inch of the faultless linen. The menu was elaborate, and the service all that could be expected with so large a crowd.

The guests were seated at 8:30, and from the moment when Rev. Dr. Wright invoked a blessing upon the assembled people and the bounty before them until President Hattaras rapped for post prandial decorum, two full hours were spent. Following was the program:

1. Vocal Solo, "An Open Secret"—
2. Reading, Miss Pennsen
3. Vocal Solo, "For All Eternity"—
4. Address, "Abraham Lincoln"—Mrs. L. L. Coulter
5. Vocal Solo, "Mammy's Wish"—Rev. D. A. Harsha

The address of Rev. Mr. Harsha was the leading feature of the after-dinner program. It was a masterly and eloquent review of the life, character and public services of the martyr president, and was listened to with rapt attention and earnest appreciation by the banqueters.

The High School Orchestra, stationed in the lobby, elicited many compliments. The occasion was one of unalloyed enjoyment, and reflected credit upon both the Society and hotel management.

The Charlevoix Historical Society is half a generation old. Its life-span is assured; its life thus far has been one of dignity and usefulness. That it shall thrive a hundred years hence is the earnest wish of the Sentinel, in the assertion of which its first meeting was held in the long ago.

A CRYING NEED.

A Crusade to Improve Agricultural Conditions Required in the Interests of Progress.

We believe there is a written and published record of the fact that the Charlevoix board of commerce, some time ago, took up the matter of exploiting the semi-dormant agricultural interests of this section, and promoting settlement of farmers from other sections here, upon the large area of uncultivated land that has come to be a reproach to Charlevoix county.

We do not say it is a spirit of civic clam; but we have heard nothing of the matter lately. We presume the matter was pushed to one side temporarily by questions that demanded prompt and decisive action. As a matter of fact, this is the burning question of the hour. It is a far more vital question than any oil or industrial project that constitutes the present board of commerce program, with the single exception of railroads; because it lies under and above all other influences that promote permanent municipal growth and prosperity. We may talk all we will about dimmer pails and tall smoke stacks, the permanent weal of a business community depends upon the agricultural prosperity of the country surrounding it. Factories in plaster of go up in smoke, but the good farm goes on forever, giving life and vigor to commerce and industry.

Charlevoix county has many good farmers, and at this end of the county there are farmers who are making money from intelligent and energetic effort in agriculture. But there is a percentage of laziness in this neck of woods who are not farmers, and never will be. As producers they are little better than the "homesteaders" of forty years ago. The land they occupy is worthy of better effort.

Then again, there is much productive land that is unoccupied and untilled. There is, lying between the State road and Lake Michigan, in Norwood and Charlevoix township, one thousand acres of unimproved land, the soil of which is as good as any under the plow in either of those townships. The same is true north of Charlevoix. It is any wonder that sugar factory people make wry faces?

A campaign to let the sunlight into the shady spots and make summer-fallowing popular is what is needed. A crusade to discourage agricultural section in Michigan than right here in the west end of Charlevoix county, and in several important respects it excels that of southern and central Michigan. It record has been indelibly written in many years of test.

Harbor Bill Passed House.

The House passed the river and harbor bill last week, and there is no doubt of its passing the Senate unchanged. Charlevoix harbor is in the bill for $25,000. This will not be available until July 1st, but there is undoubtedly a balance left over from the last appropriation, upon which to begin much needed work as soon as survey can be made and plans and specifications prepared.

Just above the bridge, on the South side of the channel is a bad bulge in the revetment work, which threatens, to go into the river the first time it gets a good bump. The engineers know of it, and will probably give it their attention this spring.

We shall know more about it a little later.

—The high school notes came in too late for this week.

—Capt. E. E. Bedford, keeper of the White River life saving station, is here visiting relatives. Capt. Bedford is accompanied by his wife.

—Mrs. Hiram Mack has moved into her new house on Hurlbut avenue. The plant of the house were made by her son, John Mray, and are a credit to him.

—There will be an open meeting of the Current River Club with Mrs. J. L. Crane on Thursday evening, Feb. 21st. An interesting program is promised.

—Capt. A. C. Majo, of Duluth, is here negotiating for the purchase of the summer Crescent, and the transfer will probably be made today. The Crescent will run between Duluth and Superior City.

—The Northport-Manistique car ferry was seen from Norwood Tuesday forenoon, in the ice field off that place headed for Northport. A high northeasterly wind sprung up, and the ice field moved out. Yesterday the big boat was seen from Norwood again. She was in the vicinity of the head of the Beavers, where she has had taken her.

NEW LIFE INJECTED

The West Michigan Sugar Company's Factory to Be Given Energetic Impetus for 1907.

The meeting of the board of directors of the West Michigan Sugar Co. at this city last Thursday wrought another epoch in the history of that plant, and determined the policy of the company for another year, and let us hope, for many years to come. Three were present, beside general manager Hoffhaut, secretary Martling, and president McLean, Col. H. A. Martling, of Ironton, Ohio, and J. W. Henderson, of Ashland, Ky., who are the principal stockholders.

As Mr. Hubbard expressed it, Col. Martling and Mr. Henderson are "again." They pledged the factory a good 1907 trial. If the plant holds its own this year it is a permanent institution here. If to fake to do this it is not. We say this advisedly. The chief stockholders, which also includes Mr. Lewis, of Charleston, W. Va., but who was not present, propose to supply the necessary funds to do the field work and operate the plant this year. Beyond that, the fate of the factory rests with the farmers of Northern Michigan, and they must do some selling—holding between this and planting time, if they would better their condition.

Last Monday the entire office force took the field, and will put in two full weeks among the farmers of counties none of which adjoin Charlevoix county. This fact should be a humbling reproach to us. There is no earthly reason why the farmers of this end of Charlevoix county at least, should not contribute more generously to the beet acreage required, and there are many why they should. Sugar beets are profitable. That fact has been demonstrated; and they may be made still more profitable with increased experience and consequent acquired knowledge of beet culture.

With a fixed and undeviating value, and unquestioned adaptability to the soil and climate of this section, beets are no longer an experiment, but a product of established profit to the farmer.

On the return of Mr. Hubbard and his field force, the farmers of this vicinity will be given another opportunity to share their interest in the enterprise. Transportation of beets by rail for a distance of over ninety miles is unprofitable, and this fact should be very suggestive to our farmers if they would make the factory a permanent industry here.

Very much credit is due Mr. E. S. Stacks, the company's agriculturist, is the up hill task of anchoring the factory. No man knows better that he what the farmer needs, for he has been a farmer. He has kept overhauling at it, and his optimism has in spired everyone else with confidence. Mr. Stacks is a firm believer in the future growth and importance of Charlevoix as a manufacturing town and agricultural center, and is equally confident that this is the country in which to come beets to a certain and continuous profit.

The Charlevoix Creamery.

At the recent meeting of the I. X. L. Produce Co., the following officers were elected:

President—R. W. Coulter.
Vice Pres.—I. P. Merriam.
Treas.—G. W. Crouter.
Sec. and General Mgr.—R. W. Paddock.

The company proposes to start up a creamery April 1st, and will make a vigorous campaign among the farmers. The creamery is an industry that should enlist the earnest co-operation of the farmers. It is a very important factor in agricultural progress.

The creamery people suggest to the farmers the advisability of putting up a supply of ice this winter for use in cooling and handling cream. The quicker the cream can be cooled down after it is separated the better the results both to the farmer and the creamery.

—We have received a letter and paper from Garfield Myers, who is spending the winter at Garrison, N. D. The paper, the Press—is printed on wrapping paper. Garfield has brought a substantial appetite, and is doing a good business. He says, concerning the blizzards and snow blockade: "We have not had a train since January 15th, and we have a blizzard at least once a week. Temperature 42 degrees below zero this morning. Prospects getting scarce." The letter is dated Jan. 29th, and probably came on the first train out.

NEW SYSTEM COMPLETE

Electrically Propelled Centrifugal Pump in Successful Operation.

The water supply branch of the new system at the city plant was successfully inaugurated last Thursday afternoon, when for the first time water was taken from the well by the new electrical centrifugal pump. So perfect was the erection and adjustment of the new machinery, that there was not a hitch or lay. The two Worthington reciprocal pumps at the old plant are capable of consistently out of commission here, but will probably do duty somewhere, as they are as good as ever. They have done their work well, but were driven from this field of work by the irresistable spirit of progress. In the boiler room the same idealizing chauffer genius prevails, although banked fires are to be kept for a time for possible emergencies.

The new pump is a Worthington centrifugal, of a capacity of 1000 gallons per minute, just double that of the old pair of pumps. It has direct connection with an 8g horse power electric motor. Both motor and pump make 850 revolutions per minute. So substantial are the frame and concrete foundations, and so perfect the adjustment that there is absolutely no vibration. The pipes and valves are so arranged that the pump may give direct pressure on the mains or discharge into the tower, and the change from one to the other is governed by an electric switch that can be operated by one finger. On the wall beside the impressive array of gauges and indicators is an appliance that records the water pressure, and another that automatically rings a bell when the tower is either empty or full.

We have stated that this complete equipment of the new plant, but it does not. Sometime this spring there will be installed an 8½ horse power gasoline engine as a reserve power to be used in the possible emergency of an interruption of electric power. The chances of this being used to any great extent are remote, but it will remove any possible danger of water shortage, should an accident occur to line or motor.

But the new pumping system has revealed a danger that, while not alarming, is somewhat serious, and that is the probable inadequacy of the water supply. Under the old system the supply was ample and would continue to be if the old plant were to be continued, as the demand upon the well was confined chiefly to a single gallon capacity of the pumps at continuous direct pressure. With the new system the demand upon the well is spasmodic and double that of the old system. In other words, the flow of water into the well is not sufficient for the capacity of the pump while at work. Assume, as is said, the plant is operated an hour and a half in the morning and the same in the afternoon. In the interim, or in case of a large fire, this would probably be doubled. In order to keep the tower full, Superintendent Martindale thinks it will be necessary to sink another well. However, an eight hour test is to be made this week or next, to determine the exact condition of the water supply under a maximum demand.

But Charlevoix now has added to its plant one of the most complete and up-to-date water systems to be found anywhere. Mr. Martindale knows of but one in the State like it, and he thinks there are not half a dozen in Michigan. The installation and successful inauguration of the plant is another evidence, in no wise needed, that J. H. Martindale is one of the best equipped and most competent mechanical and electrical engineers in the State. From the inception of this change, which was really his own, he has met and successfully worked out every problem of the work, such as would have required not only a broad knowledge in the above mentioned fields of scientific endeavor, but a comprehensive grasp of civil engineering. "Jim" is a wizard.

In the matter of public utilities, owned and operated either by private individuals or the municipality, we doubt if there is a Village or city in Michigan, of the same population, that can match the Charlevoix light and water plant.

CHAPTER XIV

The week standing in being a letter from Cribber intended to surround great surprises and announcements of some strange or long-expected nature, which, when they arrived, proved to be nothing more than the ordinary epistles of a school-boy, in which he expected to find a fortune, or at least something very important happened and which either he forgot to write about, or he had been in terrible fear lest it should be taken in transit and the figurative bird would be taken from him, but finally, he found it was a piece of no-account, and he promised to write more and more explicitly in his next epistle.

Jasper, too, had received three letters, one from his father, one from his mother, and one from Lucy, and he found that the mother's letter was the most important of the three, and that Lucy was growing quite a young woman, and was very anxious to see her brother.

Jasper was also informed that Lucy was to be married in the spring, and that he was to come home and be her groomsman, and he was to be sure to write back and let them know how he was, and if he was well enough to come home, and he was to be sure to write back and let them know how he was, and if he was well enough to come home, and he was to be sure to write back and let them know how he was, and if he was well enough to come home

VENTILATING GRANGE HALLS.

A Practical and Successful Method Described by Mr. Cook.

Now that grange halls are becoming almost as numerous as village schoolhouses or churches in some of the states it becomes an important capital question to have them properly ventilated, and especially when grange buildings are being erected the matter of proper ventilation should have chief consideration.

An excellent method of ventilation was recently described by the American Agriculturist by H. E. Cook, and we give it in substance (mostly) in the text which is illustrated. Simply by opening the windows one up a considerable distance from the floor, result is helpful. The upper sash is so arranged that it swings in from the bottom. When open to the fullest this leaves a space of about 4 feet. The side walls of the building are ten inches thick, so we have a little air space on the edge of the wall near the top. The windows are fitted with springs so the space can be small or large depending upon the outside temperature. The air enters the room, as it does in the long spaces near the ceiling and comes produces a draft of air not a cold one.

The next problem was to get the entering air to circulate and not to warm the upper portion of the room. Three dam-shaped pieces of lumber were fitted into the ceiling, as here shown, passing on through the ridge of the roof. Over these pieces are placed five feet and are capped. A damper is placed in each one to prevent all escape in the coldest weather.

A lamp was then hung directly under the center of each one on a pulley with a balance weight attached. The best attached to the lamp passes through the center of the flue and also through the center of the damper and through the sides of the flue and another pulley and down to the weight. The last shall be heavier than the lamp after the installation of the system, so it will not fall. The room was crowded with the people and the night a good but bad one. The room was warm, but could not be cooler than the outside air. The circulation was so free and rapid that every one thought they were outside. There is no patent on this device and plan. It can save serious health and comfort conditions with simple the scheme to their comfort and profit.

A GOOD IDEA.

A Debating Club Organized Among Patrons Granges in Massachusetts.

Springfield (Mass.) Patrons grange has undertaken an enterprise which should lead to very satisfactory results, says an exchange. It has organized a debating club and offered a suitable trophy to the subordinate grange in its jurisdiction which proves itself the best debater. It recognizes the opportunities and improvement that the grange can describe and urges that debating is one of the most important factors in intellectual improvement.

The plan is for each local organization to elect or otherwise designate a debating team of three members, the different teams from the several granges in the Pomona circuit will be pitted off, and the winning of each set will dedupe the winners of a second set. When the contest is reviewed down, until two undefeated teams remain, these teams will go before the Agricultural Pomona grange and debate for honors.

Considerable interest has already been shown in the matter, and some of the granges have written to consider the plan ready for the fight. It is the intention of the Pomona to have the matter attended the coming year if the present enterprise proves successful. There is no reason why other Pomona granges could not have a similar course and that the subordinate granges in each county or Pomona as town cases the opposite team from another. This whole matter is capable of much good for the participants.

MICHIGAN STATE GRANGE.

Michigan state secretary's report shows 230 subordinate granges, represented in its convention, with a paid up membership of 40,000, and 57 Pomona or county granges with a membership of 4,220. The subordinate granges organized during the year were 23, and those reorganized 3; juvenile granges, 7; total receipts for the year, $10,928.41; total disbursements, $10,268.55. The report of finance committee showed the subordinate granges yielded large returns to the state grange, bringing over $6,000 into the treasury in 1896, that the grange held bonds and mortgages exceeding $38,000 in value.

Much Money, Much Trouble.

The big Wolcott (N. Y.) grange, with its over 900 membership, is so financially prosperous that it doesn't want its members to pay the $1.20 a year due each, but only 90 per cent thereof. Consequently the state master has been obliged to require them to pay the legal amount of dues in conformity with the state grange constitution or give up their charter. We have no doubt that the matter will be amicably adjusted.

There is one grange in Oregon without an American in it. State Master Buxton says its members are intelligent and anxious to acquire information concerning our institution.

A MODEL HALL.

Metcoac Grange of Granville, N. Y., Possesses It.

The members of the above named grange have gone to work and made into themselves on the 3 acre grange lodge. It is a quite a big room in which heated and a component in the entertain of the members of the grange. The lower floor is the project through an amusement. The land and of the structure, which is of brick and stone, was over grounds but from outside an income is assured of $1,000 a year.

The building is seventy feet long by forty feet wide and three stories high. The first floor contains a dining room and kitchen, together with pantry, storeroom, etc. The building is furnished with hot and cold water in the kitchen and table rooms. The grange has a new set of crockery and silverware, which is a great improvement to the attractiveness of the dining room.

The second floor is used for the grange hall, entrance, parlor, dining room, toilet rooms and a ladies' parlor. The grange hall proper is 36 by 50 feet, and is 20 feet in the clear. The ventilation, so often ignored in building grange halls, is almost perfect. The floors are of maple, laid in alternate strips of light and dark, the woodwork is North Carolina pine, finished in the natural color. The roof and are of hard wood, and are kept by appreciative donors, similar to the number of a church. The building is lighted by electric and with electricity.

The third floor is divided into the same number of rooms as is of the same size as the second floor and is used for a dormitory. The winter it has been rented to the Masonic order for a term of years.

NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANGE.

Some Interesting Facts About the Work in That State.

State Master Hobart, who is also state senator, gave an admirable address at the opening of the state grange session and said that the other granges in New Hampshire were being strengthened by many new applications, while new ones were being organized. Many inquiries in the state are being received from the state in the Granite State is also in the excellent degree opinion which is in vogue there. The state is divided into thirty-three subordinate and two Pomona granges. Each one of the subordinate divisions is required to have at least one grange in the district twice a year at least. He is thus entitled to know the kind of work both literary and degree, which is being done in the grange, and the results have been most satisfactory.

Three questions simultaneously discussed by the grange during the past year were: Is it wise to change the crops by produced will animals and the introduction of manures? Is the secretary reports membership of 13,583 men and 14,116 women and that the Pomona grange has a membership and 3,000 women. Forty granges in the state have property, and fifty-five granges own their own halls.

A Good Scheme.

The quarterly report blank used by the lecturer of the subordinate grange is a model. It is in use the state lecturer can keep posted on the literary work of each subordinate grange and can better know where assistance is needed and of what kind it should be. The report calls for information on each meeting of the course as to number of musical selections rendered, number of readings given, debates, spoken impromptu, papers read with subject and by how many (if any) members, debates, with number participating, also other features and the total number present at each meeting. In this makes an interesting and informative feature when summarized and presented by the secretary in his report to the state grange and not only shows what grange is doing the best literary work, but shows the lecturer is offer suggestions where suggestions and assistance are most needed.

Vermont's Membership.

At the last annual session of Vermont state grange Worthy Master C. J. Hill said that when he was elected master twelve years ago the organization in the state numbered 2,000 members and that now there are 12,000. There are 126 subordinate granges and fifteen Pomona granges. The increase in membership the past year was 1,000. Mr. Hill refused re-election, and George W. Pierce was chosen as his successor. Resolutions were adopted in recognition of his long service and expression of the esteem in which he was held by the grange.

A Sound Organization.

The Jefferson County (N. Y.) Patrons Fire Relief association is now carrying about $13,000,000 insurance on grangers' property. The cost per thousand for losses by fire during 1896 was $1.19 and for fires other than lightning 94 cents.

Every grange can do an interesting work for the community and its members in the coming years by appointing a committee of three each on, schoolhouse, church and the scope of any pioneer event.

A STATE LECTURER'S VIEWS.

State Lecturer Thompson of Maine Outlines Lecturer's Duties.

From the excellent report of State Lecturer Thompson of Maine of his grange we make the following extract. The lecturer's duty is the grange is to direct the literary and educational work. Since the social and educational benefit is the chief end and aim of the work of our order the lecturer's work is paramount importance. While suggestions and systems and directions may be of aid to the lecturer, yet the success of the programme largely depends upon his personal interest and enthusiasm in having it agreed out. We should never forget that the chief value of this work is not in the entertaining feature, but in the work done by the members. A paper written on some subject is much better than a reading or a discussion.

The two common methods employed by the lecturers in directing their work are:

First—To prepare and read the program at the beginning of the succeeding meeting. This has its advantages, and a big lecturer get excellent results from this method and profession is very popular.

Second—To furnish printed programmes for the year, prepared either by the lecturer or better by a committee composition. The latter plan is more democratic by work of the lecturer from meeting to meeting, by making members feel that they are being relied by others and need members are called of their work.

While individual lecturers may fail to discover the best benefit programmes and while individual granges may for the time being grow to weeds by discovering the error in judgment of their energy in money making and other pursuits, yet this kind of light entertainment, yet this kind of work is the rare exception and not the rule in Maine.

MASTERS' CONFERENCE.

Some Questions Considered That Are Worth While.

A masters' conference was called for Feb. 1 under the auspices of the department (Mass.) grange, of which Professor F. A. Waugh of the college is lecturer. Among the questions discussed the following were:

QUESTIONS OF GRANGE ADMINISTRATION.

How can we secure better attendance at grange meetings?

Can we do something more than we have done to facilitate our members with good parliamentary practice?

Should the grange seek to do its membership, persons who are not interested in the grange?

What special service should post masters perform in subordinate granges?

QUESTIONS OF PUBLIC SERVICE.

What can the grange do to promote diverse grange to do improve its neighborhood and community?

Can the subordinate grange cooperate with the school authorities in the matter of the school, the school, the school,

$4,000,000 IN GOLD AND SILVER IS UNEARTHED.

Ancient Cache of Bandits is Discovered in Mexico and Rich Valuable Metal Recaptured—Governor Mendez Acknowledges the Deed.

A Torreon (Mexico, Mexico) dispatch says: Governor Mendez has discovered all Mexico interested in the romantic story that $4,000,000 gold and silver, taken from the Hacienda El Tlacote by Francisco Villa, the Mexican bandit, in 1913, has been recovered from the cache of the robber chieftain near Torreon, in Durango. The government has sent a special train to the place to possibly collect the treasure, consisting of gold, silver and silver bars and a large storage of gold with a rude imprint of gold bars. The treasure was found in a hole in a cliff in Mapimi, in Durango, near Torreon, and is a great find as compared with the treasure of Villa, which was buried in a hole in the ground and which was found to be only a few hundred dollars in gold and silver.

ADMITS MURDER OF GIRL

Arkansas Bootlegger in Dove Case Confessed Crime Through Jealousy.

Paul Hammond, a bootlegger, who has been under suspicion in the Hazelrigg, Ark., district since the murder of Lola Dove, a young girl, last Christmas, has confessed to the murder, it was learned here. The confession was made to Sheriff Dan Jones, of Hot Springs, who went to Hazelrigg after Hammond had been arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. Hammond is said to have admitted that he killed the girl because of jealousy.

Three Prosecution Clubs.

Williamson has the honor to be the town in New York in which there are three prosecution clubs, the Williamson Club, the Williamson Club and the Williamson Club. The Williamson Club is the oldest of the three, and has been in existence for many years. The Williamson Club was formed in the year 1900, and has been in existence for the past 20 years. The St. James Life Saving Station.

Attorney R. W. Kane, acting for James McCann, has consulted up and corrected all defects in the title of the Beaver Island property known as "Sike Point," upon which the government has held an option for the past year.

The property is owned by James McCann, who purchased it some years ago from James H. Donner, who operated extensively in fish and merchandise on the property, many years ago. When general superintendent Kimball got after it last spring for a life saving station, it was discovered that there were defects in the title that would require certain legal procedure to clear up. This Mr. Kane has done so that the transfer will be made the coming spring, and a first-class station will be established there with a full crew, and all modern appliances including a gasoline boat.

The site taken in the entire old stock frontage, and is approximately 150 feet east and west by 300 feet north and south. The location is all that could be desired, having launching frontage inside the harbor, which the old volunteer station does not possess. Of course, in conformity with the well known policy of that department, the grounds will be cleaned up and beautified, and the place made attractive as well as useful.

We understand that district superintendent Morton and inspector Ballinger will visit St. James on their spring inspection trip here, and steps taken to begin work so that the station may go into commission next fall.

Potato News.

A Grand Rapids special says: The potato situation is anything but hope ful for the farmer or the dealer who has a large stock on hand. There has been a slight flurry in the market the past week due to the cold weather and the price is a little higher because the cold weather delays shipping. Farmers have not profited any by the flurry. It has merely given the buyers who stocked up at 25@30c last fall a chance to dispose of a little of their stock at a profit. They have not been buying on the advance and there will likely be little change in the market until spring.

Dealers declare there is yet 50 per cent of the Michigan crop in the state. This is due in a measure to the scarcity of cars in the fall. They declare that if there had been cars to ship in at harvest time the price would have run down to 10c a bushel, whereas it ranged 25@30c through the early part of the buying season and is now around 20@25c.

Michigan potatoes were shut out of the New York market this year by the Maine potatoes. New York's poorer crop supplied the south Atlantic states and this state's crop has been finding it hard to reach north and southeast. This market will hardly last longer than the first of April, when the new potatoes grown in the south will be marketed. When there is a market in the east it sets considerably lower than this. The market may go through till new potatoes without a break, but there is little prospect for it to do more than keep steady.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Miss Hinves was absent Thursday of last week on account of sickness. She received several prescriptions and a health bulletin from the class Thursday noon, and she felt so much better that by Friday morning she was able to return to school. The class worked hard Thursday, but were glad to see her back Friday.

The 1st ex. grammar teachers are having a few weeks rest now. Eliza beth Tyrver and Anna Green are teaching music, and Mamie Williams, Georgia Crowl, Olive Sherman and Bessie Straw are teaching language.

We completed our work in classics in psychology and took up history and pedagogy in their place.

Mamie Williams substituted for Miss Smith in the second and third grade room in the Central building last Friday. Miss Smith was sick.

Florence Nixon, of the '06 class, visited us two afternoons last week. She teaches near Springvale, but the snow is deep and several of the children have a long walk, so she has several weeks vacation now.

FOR SALE—A 200L stove, cross cut saw and six dining room chairs. Inquire of Mrs. John Wilbers, Clinton street.

The New Wrecking Tug

Capt. Alexander Cunning, who is one of the most successful wreckers on the lakes, will sail the new tug Favorite, now being built for the Great Lakes Towing company. Capt. Cunning was master of the old wrecker Favorite which was destroyed by fire at St. Ignace recently. During the past year he was ordered to eighteen wrecks and he succeeded in getting every boat he went after. He relieved the passenger steamer Shoe of Ohio from Hatchetnake island after much delay on account of hard weather. The steamer had to be lifted over the rocks with jacks for about half-her length. Among the other vessels that were in bad shape that he floated were the steamers Pathfinder, John Hancock and the Canadian steamer Winona. Most of the members of the crew of the old Favorite will be on the new boat. The Favorite was launched at Ludlam on the 1st. She is 155 feet long and 25 feet wide.

The Favorite is equipped with one A frame forward which has a steel boom 65 feet long and separate hoisting and swinging engines, also one 7-ton hooker operated by boom. It has a 5-ton derrick in all and one air compressor. One of the most interesting features of the new steamer is its splendidly and completely equipped machine shop and blacksmith shop.

The boat also is equipped with a vertical windlass, numerous wrecking pumps, and a specially built towing machine with 1500 feet of 1½ inch wire cable. There is an electric light plant of large capacity. The boat carries a gasoline launch for hauling lines. Its cabin has accommodations for ninety men.

Another feature is the deepest construction. Even the doors are of metal, and it is impossible for one to spend from any startling point on the boat.

The Beet Sugar Industry.

The growth of the beet sugar industry in the United States, says the St. Joseph Gazette, has been so rapid during the past five years, as to excite surprise among those who have given the subject little or no thought. Indeed, the possibilities of the industry are now believed to be so great as to warrant the assertion that the full amount of sugar consumed in this country will eventually be supplied at home. During the five years from 1900 to 1905 the production of beet sugar in the United States increased 234 per cent, according to figures furnished by the department of commerce and labor, the number of factories devoted to its production increasing 70 per cent. As early as 1870 four beet sugar factories were in operation in this country, the number increasing to nine during the next 20 years, that number being reported in operation in 1899. The number increased rapidly, however, during the past few years, the census of 1900 reporting 50 in operation at that time, while 91 were in successful operation in 1905. The capital invested in the industry in 1899 was $105,000, in 1900, $25,144,719, in 1905, $55,323,450. It is seen, therefore, that the past five or six years has witnessed the greatest development in the history of the industry.

Neighbors Get Posted.

"I was literally coughing myself to death, and had become too weak to leave my bed; and neighbors predicted that I would never leave it alive; but they got fooled, for thanks to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It took just one dollar bottle to completely cure the cough and restore me to good health," writes Mrs. Eva Conagher, of Duvernoy, Shark Co., Ind. This King of cough and cold cures, and healer of throat and lungs is guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. Druggist. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Allen return home again.

Mr. A. Malloy made a trip to Cross Village last week.

The Lumber Co's new engine broke down a few days ago, and it will be out of commission until repairs come from Manistee.

An epidemic of "grippe" is going the rounds of the island. Mr. Phil C. Gallagher has been quite sick the past two days.

The storms of last week broke up the ice considerable. Open water is visible from the harbor. This compells the mail carriers to keep more to the north.

Mr. George White has gone to Manistee on business connected with the Lumber Co's engine.

Hunting for Trouble.

"I've lived in California 20 years, and am still hunting for trouble in the way of burns, sores, wounds, boils cuts, sprains, or a case of piles that Bucklen's Arnica Salve won't quickly cure," writes Charles Walters, of Lincoln, Neb., Sierra Co. No use hunting. Guaranteed at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Council Chamber, Feb. 6, 1907. Council met on above date pursuant to adjournment, Mayor Iddings presiding.

At roll call the following aldermen were present: 1st ward, Wilber and Merriam; 2nd ward, Hose and Cameron; 3d ward, Plum and Webster.

Elmer Johnson, engineer of the Pine River swing bridge, submitted a report of the arrival and departure of all vessels through Pine river, together with tonnage of each vessel.

Alderman Cameron moved the report be accepted and several copies be made of said report and forwarded to member of Congress, U. S. Senator, and the engineers department. Motion prevailed.

Alderman Wilber moved that the treasurer be and is hereby instructed to transfer $1,667.26 from the contingent fund to the electric and water fund, to correct the transfer made to said electric and water fund July 2, 1906. Motion prevailed.

A petition for a sewer on Dixon Avenue, signed by property owners, was submitted and read. Alderman Cameron moved that the petition be referred to the committee on sanitary sewers and police, with instruction to investigate as to the advisability of the sewer, and ascertain the number of property owners on said avenue and report to the council. Motion prevailed.

A petition for a cement sidewalk on the south side of Dixon avenue in front of Capt. E. S. Sardis's residence was submitted by the chairman of the sidewalk committee and recommended that the petition be granted. On motion report was accepted and said petition granted.

Alderman Wilber moved that the treasurer be and is hereby instructed to transfer the sum of $750 from the electric light fund to the salvage fund. Motion prevailed.

The matter of furnishing meals for the board of election inspectors was discussed, whereupon Alderman Wilber moved that in consideration of the election boards hereafter there shall be no charge made that the city shall be responsible for only as provided by the election laws. Motion prevailed.

Charmer Lasper had him out on a fox trail, and the dog brought the fox to the lake at Big Hock Point, north of town. Reynard took to the ice, the hound close on his heels. A large crack in the ice was encountered, and into it both fox and hound plunged. Both were drowned. Frank carries a long face, for the faithful dog has rounded up many a brush.

HYMENIAL EVENT.

An Impromptu Elston House Wedding That Made Hearts Happy.

It was a festive, and, withal, a chivalrous lunch of commercial travelers that was furnished at the Hotel Elston, Thursday. They—but before we preach the sermon we shall pronounce the text:

MARRIAGE.—At the Hotel Elston, at high twelve, Feb. 17, by Judge Dogface, in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Nobbins, of Kalkaska, Mich., Miss Ada Cole, of Alba, Mich., to the same.

When the Elston bus from the morning train drew up at the hotel entrance there were numbered among the passengers who alighted four young people. That they were unaccustomed to the hustle of a large city, and strangers to the flutter of a first class hotel was evident. As the load from the bus filed into the lobby, five smartly dressed and wide awake traveling men were picking their teeth about the big fire-place.

The last from Kentucky stepped forth from the quartet of young people aforementioned, and in quiced of one of the commercial travelers aforementioned if he could direct him and his party to "the marriage house." The other gentlemen about the fire-place pricked up their ears, and there and then it was discovered that a wedding was on tap, and they determined to have a hand in it—in fact, after a consultation, they concluded to absorb the enjoyment of the occasion while the young and innocent couple were absorbing the matrimony. And the program began right there and then. Informing the young groom and his "best man," (who, by the way, was accompanied by his flames) that they should consider themselves guests of the house and that all things would be properly arranged, the travelers went about their work with the same earnestness that they exhibited the same afternoon with their Charlevoix customers.

First, one of them telephoned the county clerk and arranged for the license. Another called Judge Collins. Another went into executive session with the hotel management, and a banquet ordered that would be worthy of the happy occasion. Still another called up leading business and professional men, and invited them to the festivities. Attorney A. L. Frisch was chosen toastmaster. To another was delegated the task of providing appropriate music, and from the high school were brought two accomplished young ladies. The organist Blair was rung up and an abundant display of smilax and carnations was ordered for church delivery. All these essentials to a truly romantic wedding having been arranged, a commodious rig was ordered up, and the wedding party was taken out for a drive about town to the music of augmented sleigh bells.

When the party returned the house and all things thereunto appertaining was turned over to the god Hymen. Mrs. Fred Myers, of Elston, a guest of the house, was made mistress of ceremonies. In the parlors was grouped as fine a wedding party as ever graced the salon of a palace. To the smiling and happy bride and groom it was a dream of paradise. Right royally escorted they entered to the cadence of Mendelsohn's Wedding March, and, with the solemn dignity of a bishop, Bill Collins pronounced them man and wife, and God speed his fee.

Then Mr. Webb kissed the bride, followed neck and neck by the other commercial companions in crime, while the dining room girls pounced upon the groom with equal force of character and exclatory earnestness. The march to the banquet hall was then taken up, but halted in the arched entrance to the children room, where photographer Peter took a picture of the entire party.

Having been seated at the banquet table, prayer was offered by Mr. E. W. Ford, of Grand Rapids, a leading member of the Travelling Men's Y. M. C. A. Mrs. Noble had provided a most enjoyable one, and no wedding breakfast ever was served and partaken of with greater dignity or decorum. Indeed, from the inception of the conspiracy to its happy finish, naught but a chivalrous and manly bearing characterized any of the "conspirators." It was a "lark," but it was the lark of gentlemen, Love and Hymen.

Well, there were toasts, announced by Mr. Frisch, and responses that abounded in good will, good cheer and good advice. To the bride and groom the dream continued, and the memory of it will continue long after the awakening, and be told and retold to the little ones at the fireside. Well, here we go, moralizing again, before the whole story is told. At the ice cream period Mr. Webb and our accomplished Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas with a dozen silver table spoons and a dozen silver tea-spoons. Into needless to say that at this time the young couple were too full for coherent utterance. Besides County Clerk Richard Lewis and wife, there were several leading citizens in the party.

Honors came to the young couple up to the moment of their departure on the 2:30 train. The happy traveling men accompanied them to the station with much rice and many old shoes. With vociferous expressions of regard they bade adieu to the two happy young people whom they never saw before and will probably never see again.

The gentlemen who so promptly and so successfully conducted this little wedding episode were Mr. W. D. Fall, of Grand Rapids; Mr. M. A. Holmes, of Springfield, Ohio; Mr. W. B. Keith, of Lansing, Mich.; Mr. W. R. Stonson, Grand Rapids; Mr. A. B. Webb, of Chicago, and Mr. E. W. Ford, of Grand Rapids. All speak words of praise for Mr. and Mrs. Noble, of the Elston, for earnestness with which the co-operated with them in this piece of WOKE UP THE G. R. & I.

That Railroad Company Now Manifest a Desire to Get Into Charlevoix.

Recent disclosures regarding the intentions of the Michigan Central people have had the effect of stirring up the G. R. & I. people to considerable activity.

One of their men was recently here, and, by appointment, representatives of our board of commerce last week had a conference with a high official of that road, during which all the phases of the railroad situation were gone over.

This official said it was the desire of his company to enter Charlevoix either from the north, south or east. When asked concerning an eastern connection, the official said they could come in from Alba. As the D. & C. crosses the G. R. & I at Alba, the suggestion is significant.

Therefore, it looks like a desire to beat out the M. C. by that route. Aside from a knowledge of these bare facts, we can only speculate as to the true status of these two roads relative to the D. & C.; but it is apparent the M. C. people have the inside track.

DISCHARGED CHORUS GIRL TRIES TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

Left Alone Without Money in a Strange Town She Seeks to End Her Wretched Existence After a Career of Sin.

Hunger drove a half starved female to a lonely spot in Central Park on Thursday morning and she attempted to end her life by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid. The woman, who gave her name as Ethel Lee, is a member of the chorus in the Casino theatre production "The Tenderloin" and she was taken to Bellevue hospital and underwent the treatment usually given in such cases. Miss Lee's condition is said to be very serious. She was found in the park by a policeman who was passing through the park early in the morning. The girl was in a stupor and the policeman had difficulty in arousing her. He took her to a near by house and called an ambulance. The girl was then taken to the hospital. Miss Lee said she had not eaten for two days and was left alone in a strange town without money or friends. She said she had decided to end her life.

"Rip" in the Catskills.

Washington Irving is an unsentimental guide in the New York Tribune's tour of the Catskills. Mountaineers region, with the tourists and members of the camera club performances of "Rip Van Winkle." A Pennsylvania mountaineer, a good, stiff figure in his homespun, is used with the performance. Rip Van Winkle's Pennsylvania mountaineer, dressed in the Dutch fashion of Irving's story, makes a hit at Haines Falls. The meeting with the gnomes takes place in the Catskills.

Four Perish in Fire.

Elbert Brubaker, baker and his four young children were burned to death in the flames which destroyed their home in the business. Mr. Brubaker was facing the window when the flames started. He ran to the door, opening the door, and the flame fanned the fire upward in his face. He then ran back and the partner and his two children were burned to death.

Gingerly Fellow Steals Gasoline.

John Gingerly, of Gingerly, Ohio, was fined $100 and costs in the mayor's court for stealing gasoline. At the time he was caught he had a jug of gasoline under the Methodist church from which he was drawing it.

Water Barrel Escapes Bomb.

A bomb composed mostly of dynamite was found in the cellar of Cyrus Wood's home in Ft. Wayne, Ind., and was placed in a cellar—two barrels away, when the cellar was discovered. The bomb was found by the wife of the owner.

Passed Over Mayor's Vote.

Mayor Dunne has vetoed the two cent car extension and transfer ordinances. Four votes of aldermen passed them, over the executive negative, as a result of the 32.

River Break Closed.

The break in the Chicago River which has been from 200 to 300 feet wide, has been passed as closed by order of the city engineer. The river is now in its normal condition in some big cities.

Eighteen Years for Murder.

A jury in the Criminal Court in Sioux City, Iowa, sentenced Frank Lee to 18 years in the penitentiary for the murder of Mrs. M. Owen, which occurred in the month of August last. Lee's defense was that he was insane at the time of the murder.

Wound in Hunting Accident.

Ernest Hoffman, a young man residing near Ionia, Mich., was accidentally shot in the left side while hunting rabbits. The shot entered the side and lodged near the spine. Young Hoffman was able to walk home.

Seeking One, Man Overheard Tip From John W. Gates.

At the Walbert the other night Charles M. Schwab was seated with a party of friends when he happened for the moment to have his attention directed to a toothpick which he held in his hand, and remarked:

"I scarcely ever take a toothpick without being reminded of the time when an acquaintance of mine made $10,000 and it was a toothpick that did the trick.

"You see," he continued, "It happened in the spring of 1904, when on the day in question my friend was taking luncheon at this hotel, and after he had finished and paid his check he discovered his shoe lacing loosened. He had proceeded scarcely half a block however when he found himself greatly annoyed by a particle of food very firmly wedged between two of his teeth, and, finding himself without a toothpick, he retraced his steps to the hotel to get one.

"On his way out of the hotel he chanced to pass a table at which were seated John W. Gates and a friend, and just as he reached the table he heard Mr. Gates remark:

"'I feel very positive that you will see Steel (common) selling at 10 before the end of the summer.'

"Now, my friend did not happen to make a regular business of trading in the market, but knowing of how Mr. Gates who made the remark, and knowing that his word carried to such masters, he decided to take advantage of the tip and it did not take him long to place his order with a broker to sell 1,000 shares of Steel at 42.

"Well, you all know what stock did during the summer of 1904, going down below nine, but my friend decided his trade to be closed within 10, and he cleaned up a profit of $10,000, which he never would have made had it not been for the little toothpick."—N. Y. Press.

The Endless Chain—It Keeps the Dollar at Home Where It Belongs.

where our laws are made, and unless a check is administered the pulses of the parasite post-bill will mark one of its greatest triumphs.

But let us look at a few of the simple reasons why the farmer should patronize the home dealer. In the first place their interests are centered in each other. Every season of poverty on the farm means a prospect one year to the country merchant. So is the prosperity of the farmer does the country merchant expect to gain. The farmer finds, therefore, in his country dealer, a staunch and true friend and a defender of his rights. They pay taxes together, live side by side, their children play and go to school together. When the crops are poor or industrious comes to whom does the farmer look? Not to the mail order magnate, but to his neighbor, the country merchant. How often does the mail order concern take any interest in the political questions or legal measures beneficial to the farmer? Yet with their bright, loud catalogue of pictured "bargains" they reach out an open hand for the farmer's hard earned dollar. And what do we receive? Nothing, often. The first order he may, but that is only a bait. The business is not founded on principles, it is not based on honorable methods, its mighty walls are erected on graft. The goods are shop worn or shoddy, or perhaps many kinds of goods have defects so cunningly concealed that the naked eye can scarcely see a difference between these articles and those of a much higher grade. We are expected to send cash with the order or have it ready when the goods arrive with the big C. O. D. mark on the package. Your crop failure, or shortage of money doesn't interest the mail order house, your credit with them is good only so long as your pocket book is filled. Your order is made out and you pay for goods you never saw, put up and unbolted to meet you do not know if these goods do not prove to be worth the money. If the shoes do not wear well, if the suit is shoddy goods, will the mail order firm make them good? Not often. Yet the local dealer will do this. He knows his honesty is his best drawing card. So much for the advantage of dealing with honest, and not with grafters.

Still other issues present themselves substitutions or branch houses solves in this connection. With the rapid growth of the mail order houses are being established. These large firms are daily reaching out for new sections of trade. What will be the result along this line? With the growth of the catalogue house comes the death of the rural newspaper trade. Yet them once destroy the country merchant and the markets of the world will be in the hands of a few wealthy capitalists. Their branch houses will appear in all the country towns and the farmer will no longer be independent. His fried, the man by dealer, who through competition

HOME MERCHANTS

GOOD REASONS WHY THEY DESERVE YOUR SUPPORT.

MEANS MUCH TO COMMUNITY

He is at the Head of the Things That Are Good for the Town and Your self.

(Copyrighted by Alfred C. Clark.)

The above head is a subject that can well be treated as open for discussion and establishing it as one all those. It is also a subject that should interest all persons, who have at heart the welfare of the community in which he lives and who wishes to see our of business for the sake of support, and the town will decrease in population, and the people will wonder what the trouble is when the editor of the town sheet sets them together.

The home merchant contributes to the support of the church, he pays taxes to keep the schools up, he contributes to the horse show, the fall festival and the hundred and one things that we have supported heretofore. He is at the head of everything that is for the good of the community and he is always ready for everything that is the operation of all the people, all the time, that are interested in the well being of the community in which they live. The merchant helps to elect the men that are to represent them in the city, county, state and national affairs, but he is never on the go looking to the interests of the people.

The people like to be entertained and they will come many miles to some amusement given by the merchants of the town, where they are ready to go to sell their farm products, the merchant cannot give these entertainments unless he has the support of the people and it is not fair to expect this of the town that are striving for a livelihood when the people will hand their money to a concern more far away city that will neither contribute to any of home enterprises or take an interest in the surrounding articles when he wants anything in the merchant's line. He should be the first one to be consulted when the people think of having the school in session and arrangements made for the purchase of the article, if he does not carry it in stock.

The home merchant advertises or should advertise, in the home paper. This keeps the home paper in the field and helps the community along. The people take the home paper because it gives all the local news that they cannot get any other way and thus the advertisements of the merchants are read by them. If the people do not patronize the home merchant he cannot afford to advertise, and without advertising a paper will soon prove a failure. Soon the home paper is sent to the wall for the want of support from the merchants, it may have a large circulation, but without the merchants help it will soon be lost to view. Then the merchant is sent to that they are in reality paying more for an inferior grade of goods than they could obtain at the home store which probably cost them a few cents more.

Since the catalogue house has sprung into the commercial world and broken operations in the United States, all kinds of schemes have been tried and worked to get the money from the people that are always looking for bargains. It seems that people are in their struggle for the almighty dollar of the country people, and they will listen as far as necessary, at the great expense of the home town of the people that want their money for these concerns.

Magazines have been started for the sole benefit of the catalogue house, and these circulated among the country people at not of 15 cents a year. They build up a circulation on this price, and then have a tremendous circulation. This circulation brings to them millions of dollars in advertising with the catalogue houses and this money expended for advertising is more than doubled from the sales of those concerns to the country people who are the ones who pay for it.

Catalogues are sent out letting the people see the wonderful bargains which they can buy the cheapest place in the country to buy, and it is, if the person receives the catalogue whose a cheap article, not only in price, but also in make and material. The farmer receives this catalogue, looks it over, and after reading the well composed gaudiness or assurance that the goods described in it are the very best that can be found anywhere, sends in an order. The house receives the order and immediately ships the articles wanted. The farmer drives many miles to get them and when the box is opened it is found to contain something much below his expectations but this does not satisfy his mind on the fact that he has been duped and that he is not getting his full money value. In a second order he may be induced the same as the first order, but will he may think that he has saved money by so doing. If he does he could get it cheap.

At the same time the merchant at home has the goods on the shelf in his store waiting for them to be taken away so that he can replace them with newer goods, thereby keeping his stock fresh and up-to-date. He is not the article wanted he can order it from the wholesaler or manufacturer and it will be here in a few days in as good condition and above time as if it had been ordered from a catalogue house. The home merchant's business is not the need to work to order to do this it is absolutely necessary that he keep up home patronize him and help him keep up with the times, or else he will soon be out of the struggle for existence among the country people.

The home merchant should not be expected to pay the highest price for produce and farm products and then to charge quite or the price of good

State of Michigan, Thirteenth Judicial Circuit in Chancery.

Jay-en-li, Gertrude and Jesse E. Dorman, Complainants, vs.

Peter Mahoney, Alexander Scott, Eland Wright, Henry Wright, Theodore Wright, Alva Wright, Albert Wright, Jesse Wright, Ada Wright, Ella Wright, H. W. Lemon and Mary J. Lemon, Defendants.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the county of Charlevoix, in Chancery, at the City of Charlevoix, on the 19th day of December A. D. 1905.

In this cause, it appearing from affidavit on file that the defendants Eland Wright, Henry Wright, and Alexander Scott, are a resident of parts unknown of the county of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, and that the complainants have made diligent inquiry and search for the whereabouts of said defendants and each of them to no avail, and that said defendants are not in the State, and it appearing that said defendants have a claim or claim to claim in the premises subject to the lien of the mortgage in the bill of complaint in this cause, and it appearing that said defendants are necessary parties to this suit and defendants in said bill of complaint, on motion of Lisle Shanahan, Attorney for complainants, it is ordered that said defendants appear in said cause within four months from the date hereof, or be barred and foreclosed of all right, title and interest in the premises described in said bill of complaint, and that said complaint be taken as confessed against said defendants.

And it is further ordered that within twenty days from the date hereof the complainants cause to be published in the Charlevoix County Sentinel, a newspaper printed, published and circulated in said county, a notice to said defendants, containing the substance of this order, and that such publication be continued thereafter once in each week for six weeks in succession, or cause a copy of such order to be personally served on each of said defendants, at least twenty days before the time for their appearance to this order shall have expired.

Dated December 19th, A. D. 1905.

DOOMED.

By WILLARD MacKENZIE

Arthur drew back in astonishment at the sight of her flushed face and glittering eyes. But he so far lost the mood of passion which had prompted him to detain her, and the gentleman's instinct, and the old world courtesy which was part of his nature, asserted itself.

"Why, my dear Miss Grey, what is the matter? I hope you have not been worrying about—about—that little affair of mine. I—I—I—

DIGEST THESE FIGURES.

And then Consider Carefully What You Lose in Not Raising More Beets.

From the St. Louis Republican.

After a campaign lasting 122 days, the St. Louis Sugar factory finished slicing beets on February 9, 1907, having started on October 5, 1906. This is the longest run in the history of the factory.

During this time there were 55,0881 tons unwashed and unsized beets sliced, making an average cut per day deducting time lost in stops for repairs, cleaning etc., of 451 tons. The capacity of the factory is 500 tons per day and the fact that it did not run to its capacity this year is largely due to the poor condition of delivered beets. The reason for delivering was bad and many farmers did not take proper precaution in protecting their beets with the result that the many changes of weather from cold to warm, rain, snow, sleet and sunshine, deteriorated from like a vitally poor quality of beets until many of them were worked at a loss to both manufacturers and farmers.

Of the beets received 20,000 tons were delivered by wagon and 25,000 tons by rail, making 12,000 wagon loads and 1,088 carloads. The largest number of wagon loads in one day were received on December 12, when 205 loads were unloaded at the factory. The largest tonnage for one day by wagon was December 16, when 87 tons were delivered.

The heaviest wagon load hauled by one team was 12,250 pounds. The heaviest car load came from River Dale, November 15, and weighed 83,200 pounds or 41.60 tons.

In the manufacture of these beets into sugar it required the use of 300 car loads of coal, 18 car loads of coke and 90 car loads of lime stone.

The amount of sugar packed consisted of 250,881 barrels and 403,337 sacks. The enormity of this amount may be better realized when it is known it would make 325 car loads.

The company has paid to farmers for beets during the campaign the huge sum of $296,000.00 and for labor over $60,000.00. The amount of money paid to farmers in proportion acreage, is the same amount of land farmers claimed to have in beet cultivation, but which largely exceeds the actual acreage was 3942 per acre. In 1905 it this sum was $42.30 and 1904 $ 48.60.

What Congressman Darragh is Doing

Hon. A. B. Darragh, of St. Louis, congressional representative of the Eleventh congressional district is making himself heard among the powers that be, both at home and at Capital according to the following from the Grand Rapids Press:

Mr. Darragh, of Michigan, an unobtrusive, white-haired gentleman, is probably responsible for one of the biggest fights to occur on the floor of the house in recent years.

The fight has not come off as yet, but it is anticipated with confidence when the postoffice appropriation bill comes up for consideration.

Mr. Darragh is a member of the committee on postoffices. That committee has just finished drawing the bill referred to and in doing so lopped off about $9,500,000 from the amount to be paid per annum to the railroads for carrying the mails. It is on this that the fight is expected. It raged in the committee while the bill was being drawn and there is no reason to expect a cessation of hostilities when the measure is considered in the house.

While the bill was being drawn little was heard of what was going on in the committee room, but now that the bill is completed it is leaking out that for the first time in years the postoffice committee has been having a real "go" to a finish.

In spite of the attention of railroad passes the railroads have their friends in congress and they have some on the postoffice committee as well. And in this case they were there to stay. They fought each of the four steps taken by the committee to reduce the railroad mail pay and they fought as hard and effectively that at the very last they needed but one vote to reconsider and table the railroad reduction and that vote was withheld from them by Mr. Darragh's efforts.

The State Convention.

The republican state convention at Grand Rapids last week was a stormy affair, it being practically a test of the strength of Governor Warner, who was there in person and leading the Leland-Beal forces in the contest for University regency. The governor won out, hands down. Following is the ticket nominated:

Justices of the supreme court—Wm. L. Carpenter, of Detroit; Aaron V. McDivitt, of Manistee.

Regents—Frank D. Leland of Detroit; Junius E. Beal, of Ann Arbor.

Member state board of education—W. A. Osborn, of Schoolcraft.

Boyne City to Incorporate.

Attorneys Knowles and Harris have drafted a bill for the incorporation of Boyne City as a city, with four wards, and the bill will be presented in the legislature and passed at once, to take immediate effect.

Boyne City is big enough and certainly wide awake enough to be a city, and the SENTINEL congratulates our neighbors at the head of the lake on having reached the point where municipal incorporation seems to be necessary.

There is no quality of citizenship that commends itself so strongly or that more conspicuously adorns the character of a good citizen than loyal pride and aggressiveness in the interests of his town. The man who will not take off his coat to fight and work for the town he lives in is not fit to live in it, and the man who will by word or deed work to block the wheels of local progress should be promptly drowned, figuratively, at least.

The "knockers" and the "croakers" are types of men who, in any community, are like the miracles that attaches themselves to the smooth surface of the swiftly moving ship, they retard its movement and betoil its body. At times they must be scraped off. Every town has them, and we premise Boyne City is no exception.

The writer of this has been at the mouth of the Boyne river when there was but one house within the territory now bounded by the Boyne City village limits beside the little shack of the late "Uncle Johnie" Miner, when the Boyne flowed "unvexed" to the waters of Pine Lake, and only the hoot of the owl or the cry of the lynx broke the stillness of the night.

Charlevoix county is big enough, rich enough and progressive enough for two cities, and we shall gladly welcome the day when a third shall be added where old Jordan contributes its majestic flow to the waters of the most beautiful lake in Michigan.

The Library Question.

CHARLEVOIX MICH. FEB. 21 1907.

To the Editor:

In the last issue of the Courier there was an article on the Carnegie proposition. I wish to correct a false impression which had been made upon the mind of the writer relative to the particular case of a successful library in the southern part of the state, which was discussed at the public meeting Jan. 11. The writer states that at that time this "had been closed many months." The truth is that the library had not been closed, but was running at that time. The librarian stated in a letter dated Jan. 15th that it was still open, but would probably close the 15th.

To say that it is closed, what are we to conclude relative to the success of the institution? Does it necessarily follow that the enterprise has been a failure? It is perfectly natural for those who are only partially informed relative to the situation to conclude that this is the case. Such may naturally think that after two years experience the people of that city are opposed to the institution and to the levying of any tax for its support. This conclusion, however, is not correct. A more intimate knowledge of the situation forces us to an entirely different view.

In the first place, over eighty per cent of the people have been using the library. Next to the public school it is the most popular institution in the place. With such a sentiment it does not require a prophet to foretell that the doors of that library will be opened at an early date.

In the second place, the question at issue is not whether the library shall open, but whether it shall open on a basis of one thousand dollars annual expenditure, or whether the amount shall be, the entire one mill tax which in that case is about seventeen hundred dollars. This is the question on which the council divided, one half voting to levy a tax of one thousand dollars while the other members insisted upon the larger amounts. No one member of the council will admit for a moment that he is opposed to the library. No man of intelligence would be willing to go into the spring campaign asking for the votes of the people on such an issue. When the library proposition was first laid before the people that was a good issue. Now that they know from experience the splendid influence of such an institution no one seeking votes would think of revealing ally sentiment against it. In view of the above facts it is evident that the library will open soon after the spring election which will determine the amount of taxation the people desire for its maintenance.

The article in the Courier is speaking of the one thousand dollars annual expenditure for expenses exclusive of books say, "no one seriously supposes that it can be done for less than twice that sum." I wish to say that experience contradicts that statement. One thousand dollar can be made to maintain a library successfully in a town of the size of Charlevoix, providing for all necessary expenses exclusive of books. Books are not included in the list given by the writer in the Courier requiring double that sum, of course, one thousand dollars annual expenditure will not provide for the opening of the library from early morning till late in the evening as is such arrangement necessary for the operation of a successful library. In towns of this size experience shows that the morning hour is used by very few people. Such a library usually opens about 12:30 p. m., closing at 5 p. m. opening again at 6:30 and closing at 9 p. m. A library is able in this way to render a great service, especially to young people, greatly increasing the efficiency of the public school. We are free to admit that more money will enable the library to do a still larger work. Cities that can afford the expense employ two librarians and open the library in the morning, keep it open constantly until the closing hour in the evening. Many towns, however, which cannot afford to maintain a library on that scale do maintain it in a smaller way, realizing a large service from it. Such communities are proud of their libraries and justly so. Let the people of Charlevoix sustain a library even on the basis of one thousand dollars per year for five years, and they will no more think of giving up the institution than they will think of giving up the public school, nor will they wish to do so.

As to books, five hundred dollars worth of books are already in sight, and more will soon appear, if we can have a suitable building in which to place them. Such an institution will be sure to grow.

The Manuscoma Handle Co.'s factory was discovered on fire shortly after 10 o'clock last Sunday night, and in a short time was totally destroyed in spite of the efforts made to stop the flames. Two firemen and a night watchman were employed in the factory, but the flames had made such headway when first discovered that nothing could be done. The village fire department was quickly on the scene after the alarm had been given by the fire bell and water works whistle, but two hydrants were found frozen before a third one was connected with and thus some time was lost. The hose on the factory fire pump was kept constantly at work, but all efforts were fruitless.

Rev. J. Gullick Dead.

The pioneers of Charlevoix and vicinity will be pained to learn of the death of Rev. J. Gullick, who departed this life in Canon City, Colo., January 27th, of this year, aged 71 years.

Here Mr. Gullick was the first Methodist preacher here, having been located here in 1869, remaining three years. The little school house on the corner of State and Antrim streets, now occupied by the laundry, was his church, and the parsonage was on the present site of the Metcalfe property, but was a small one story building. The salary, even with the six ministry allowance, was small, and Mr. Gullick for some time checked to the old Pre-emptor, on the eight of the present J. W. Harris residence.

He was ordained by Bishop Ames in 1863, and officiated in many charges in the Michigan Conference.

Indians Want to Go It Alone.

There seems to be trouble in store for the Detroit Indian camp meeting at Northport so far as the white man is concerned. Rev. John Jacobs, of Northport, is an earnest and popular worker among his people. In a recent interview with the Traverse City Eagle man he said:

"The camp meeting will be run on different lines this year. We are going to have educated Indian speakers instead of white politicians. It is to be a camp meeting for the Indians, not for the whites. There are no definite plans made as yet, but it is expected that Dr. Dallas Monteroma, the noted Apache Indian of Chicago, will be one of the principle speakers. Senator Parker, of Kansas; Dr. Bastman, a full-blooded Sioux Indian; Simon Redbird, head of the carpenter department at the Genoa, Neb., school, Rev. Wm. Elliot, of Pelonkey, Rev. Thomas, of Odanah, Wisconsin and other prominent Indian speakers."

The Rev. Mr. Jacobs believes that leaders among their own people will get in closer touch with them than their white brethren, and this year they will attempt to carry on the camp meeting independently.

Byrns, chairman of the committee and chairman of the national board of Modern Woodmen, says the bill will be amended on the floor to include all fraternal societies, making a complete drastic measure.

—When the Manistique carferry arrived at Northport, her propeller was held by a single bolt, all the rest having been broken off in the recent battle with the ice. It was necessary to drift the shaft out, and to do this the stern had to be raised. Six load of coal cars were run into the bow of the boat, and the forward compartment pumped full of water. A coffer dam had once sent from Ludington and this was placed under the stern.

—Perch is about the only fish that have not suffered any decline in Storgeon bay, nearly all the other species having either disappeared altogether or been very greatly reduced in number. And that leads us to remark that the time is not far distant when perch will become a more important factor in the fish market than they are at present. There are no better fish in fresh water than perch, and why they do not occupy a higher standing in the market it is hard for us to understand.

—The seniors of the Charlevoix high school are busy in rehearsal of the play to be given March 27th. The cast will be made up entirely of members of the senior class, excepting Miss Gale, instructor. It will be remembered that the leading parts in the home talent plays given here the past year were filled by the seniors. The play, "The Werewolf Man," is not only farce comedy, but partakes of the operetta character, and abounds in good music and thrilling situations. We shall give further particulars later, which a want of space prevents this week.

—We do not hear the noon whistle from the water works any more—which means that the steam plant has permanently gone out of commission. And the fact gives rise to the query, what are we to do for a fire alarm? Various devices are suggested, the best in our opinion, being a bell on the water tower, with an electric ringing attachment. Jim Martindale could fix up an alarm that would wake the dead. This is a question that should be taken up by the council at once, and it probably will, as we are now solely dependent upon the city bells for fire alarm.

—Mr. Will H. Gillin arrived in Charlevoix Tuesday, to begin rehearsals on the Southern Folks production, which will take place Friday evening March 8th for the local lodge Knights of Pythias. All the principal parts for a excellent cast have already been secured, and under the direction of Mr. Gillin we can look for a real success. He claims that he has one of the finest plays for us that he has ever seen, and that it has met with wonderful success wherever he has produced it. In view of the great success of the "Crisis," which the Pythians put on under Mr. Gillin's direction, our people can look for something great better "Southern Folks."

—S. M. See & Sons call attention to their new ad this week.

—Geo. Carr and wife, of East Jordan, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. See over Sunday.

—F. M. Agent C. L. Gomer and wife returned from their western trip last Friday, and are on duty again.

—Capt. E. S. Small will sail the N. M. T. Co's steamer Argo the coming season, and Ava Smith Jr., will go as first mate with him.

—The steamer Columbia, recently sold to Geo. T. Atwood for the Mackinaw-Detour route, besides having her engine compounded at Washburn's yard, in this city, is having her cabins changed. Her upper cabin is being reduced in size, and the lower cabin enlarged.

—When the water tower was erected the necessary drains for three arc lights were placed—two facing the harbor entrance and one facing the south east. Now, the question arises, are we to get the lights? Capt. Campbell, president of the board of public works, believes it would not only be a great aid to navigation, but would effectually light up River street, on the north side, with its large number of dangerous corners. It would also be a great benefit to the life saving station. But the Captain passes it up to the council. It would certainly be a very enterprising thing to do. It would be a beacon to our incoming fleets, and a reminder to the big ships that pass up and down the channel that under its effulgent glow there is nestled down behind the bluff the handsomest and most promising town on the shore.

Concerning the Library.

Rev. H. A. Putnam has received a letter from a prominent citizen of Hudson, Mich, on the library question of which the following is the text:

"In regard to the value of our library to the community. Our library has circulated books at the rate of about 25,000 volumes per year, not counting the large number of books used in the library building and not drawn, nor does this take into account the magazines, daily papers and weekly papers read in the library, and as the reading room is very popular, this is a very important consideration. Our citizens are delighted with our library and since the library was established, greater interest has been manifest in the public schools, in literature, in the lecture course and in all things that uplift the community, as this is a common center where all can meet, regardless of religious, political faith, for the library is for everyone and everyone contributes a trifle for its support. DOOMED.

By WILLARD MacKENZIE

CHAPTER XVII

Arthur's visit to Mrs. Cecilton was now of daily occurrence. He knew no rest for happiness out of her presence. His soul seemed wrapped in the Nirvanic lingoing of peace.

It was about a fortnight before he arrived at the hour. The Judge was in his office then. Mr. Dunmore was in Philadelphia on a business visit to Dr. Gilson. Once that old house so quaint in form, the figures superb.

Arthur had gone to Cecilton the night before. He had spent the evening with her.

The parlors presented to her a solemn magnificence in all the final touches that wealth could lavish upon them. Rich, heavy, and yet not gaudy, the furniture, the pictures, the bronzes, the vases, the tapestries, the rugs, the curtains, the lamps, the mirrors, the chandeliers, the gas-jets, the fireplaces, the mantels, the cornices, the ceilings, the walls, the floors, the doors, the windows, the hangings, the carpets, the chairs, the tables, the sofas, the pianos, the harps, the cabinets

Charlevoix Sentinel
WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.

This article of the so-called social party of Michigan, which is a succession of broad liquids last week, referred to Mower and Haywood, who are in jail in Colorado charged with the crime of murder, as "not comrades," may not also have sympathy enough to mind the fellow who a few days ago killed a justice of the peace in New Jersey with a decoy bomb, or with the socialists who paraded the streets of Chicago last Sunday carrying red flags and who afterwards in a mass meeting denounced the form of government under which they are living, but they all agree upon the "our comrades" relations to Mower and Haywood. Red flags and hard epithets and convention threats from such sources are not without effect upon the law favoring American people, but the client is entirely different from that which is evidently expected by those who make use of them.

The same grade of living costs as much in England and Germany and France as it does in the United States. The prospect who sits advising the changes he made in our tariff law, and who are basing their advice on the claim that higher wages are paid to the American workingmen because the requirements of life are higher proved lower, want to know more of the facts. The difference is more in what is included in the term "requirements of life" here and in the countries named. Blackjack, pork, hash, hoecake, eggs, tea, coffee, flour and potatoes actually cost more in Germany and France and England than in the United States. In this country, however, these things are usually found on the workingmen's table, in the homes of the working classes of our trade competitors they are rarely found. Living is not cheaper there than here, but because of the primitive and poverty of our country which go far towards making the difference in conditions there and here, a cheap living is compelled in the countries across the sea.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

If Supt. Emery, of the Michigan Island park commission, has his way, the experience of leasing such parts as are adapaing its purpose go down the charges 15c or 25c round the island to $1.

Big Rapids Pioneer: The business of Hawkins & Fly and Abe Werkheiser of Lagrande, Ind., in partnership in an enterprise known as the Michigan and Indiana Island Company, have been in Town this week. The business of the company is locating parties from other sections in northern Michigan farms, and they are securing options on farms in this section.

Petoskey News: The report is in circulation that the city is to offer that the saloons at Bay Shore, was Harbor Springs, Nathrupp and Petoskey, a woman went to the saloon and asked for her husband, but the man had left just previous to her coming and she was informed accordingly. She did not leave the place, however, but got into a conversation with some one connected with the saloon, stating that the reason of her husband's remarks about his wife was because he was in the habit of making such remarks when the whisky got the mastery, bottles, etc., she could touch, then smashed the front window.

Manton (ex. Traverse City Eagle): Business men of Manton and the farmers in the vicinity of the village are enthusiastic over the sugar beet question, and the advisability of contracting acreage with the West Michigan Sugar Company of Charlevoix. Representatives of that firm are expected to hold a meeting in Manton for a conference with the people of the village and the farmers outside for the purpose of making an offer for the raising of beets the coming season. The Charlevoix company offers to contract for an unlimited supply of beets at a flat rate of five dollars the ton on cars at Manton. The company has established a name for fair dealing, and it is probable that contracts will be let to Wexford farmers for beets next season.

Chebogan News: John Norman, a young man who resides with his parents near the city limits in the First ward has been attracting the attention of the people of that neighborhood, owing to a peculiar condition which came over him within the past few days. Norman is about 25 years of age and has never had much school ing owing to an impediment in his speech. His education was so meagre that he is unable to read and it is difficult to understand him. He had been employed in a camp down the shore and the other night the other men were amused by Norman talking. He was under a spell and his talk lasted for some time. Since then he has been at home and every night at a stated hour he goes into what might be called a trance while lying on a lounge and it lasts for two or three hours. While in this condition he will delivery a discourse sometimes in the Swedish language and then in English. He quotes from the Bible and those who have heard him say that he talks in a coherent manner, his affliction seeming to have entirely left him, but as soon as he comes out of the trance he lapses back into his old condition. The home is crowded nightly by neighbors and other curious people who have been welcomed to the home by his parents.

The treasury of the state of Michigan will receive a total of $3,417,325.60 on tax account from railroads of the state when their tax paying year arrives this coming summer. This is not quite equal to the tax payment of last year on railroad account, the difference being due to the lower average of taxes throughout the state on which the railroad rate is based. But it is an addition to the state primary school fund greater than ever before made from that source with the exception of last year's tax.

The statement that the St. Louis sugar company paid out $298,000 to the farmers of Gratiot county and in that vicinity, during the beet buying season recently closed, is a further item of information bearing the importance and value to Michigan farmers of sugar beet production and of the beet sugar making industry to our state. It has been estimated that not less than $3,750,000 were paid out to the farmers of the state by all the Michigan factories during the past season. It is not to be wondered at that Michigan congressmen and Michigan business men are aggressively interested in all legislation which threatens in any way to interfere with the continued development of this important state industry.

WILL NOT REVISE TARIFF.

No Reason to Disturb Industrial Stability and Prosperity.

Our morning contemporary in the Midland city is sure that the tariff schedules will not be revised. We hope it ought to realize that the prosperous condition of the country is the best reason of all that can press the president against any change in the schedules. That press is simply seeking to embarrass the party which put in the chair. It can find nothing else to do to create. There is no prospect of any change in the tariff schedules and entirely the result. Which must be from evidence of the business world, seeking to disturb the business stability and prosperity of the country. There is no reason why the industrial stability and prosperity should be further threatened by tariff legislation. The country will be very fortunate if it completes the reciprocity measures by the administration without disturbing our general prosperity. It is that more than anything else that the president is desirous of. To accomplish business which are not genuine to the present time in promoting distractions and disturbances.

Let us tackle the president's pending reforms and then we will be better able to judge how much reforming there ought to be on the tariff. And rest assured of one thing; and that is that if all the duties were lowered by half there would be the same dissatisfaction and the same complaints against it. No system of taxation can ever be so fairly equalized as to give satisfaction to all. A tariff is merely a compromise and the most compromise would not be half more satisfactory than the present. It is time to report it.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

Far and Near.

If a fraternity lodge in the James J. Hill had been a member in Minneapolis, there would be a Canadian contingent long ago, but with a Lodge outside to the beyond there is no need of it. The Canadian service meetings every week in the Minneapolis Lodge are well attended and are growing every time the Canadian Pacific sends out a flying tour.

There are some men who are so far sighted as to overlook things close at hand, while seeing things at a long distance. It was to take the Canadian premiums in of this class of the week. He did not think gain to the traffic of his native custom in the privilege of hauling in Canadian produce to the American market, and hauling out American satisfactions to the Canadians. For such as this Canada does not want and will not have the duties on the manufactures from across the border. He has not that the anti reciprocity agitation of Canada is like Mahomet's coffin, hung between the earth and the sky, and that the reciprocity measures will be passed. Canada is disgraceful, on such farmers as to turn their national backs on the opportunity to Canadian farmers would be disgraceful, on such farmers as to turn their national backs on the opportunity of protection? That in such case they would be taxed to pay protection for anybody? Perhaps Senator Lodge seen the situation in Canada and Canada's nearby things, and for that reason opposes Canadian reciprocity. If so, he has taken a very good way on for his opposition.

The Merchant's View of Tariff Revision.

Not Now, but When?

No suggestion of tariff revision appears to be anybody's business this year. The business of the country and those who earn and spend wages are thankful for that. The short session of congress which ends March 4, 1907, is too short for tariff revision, and it will not be undertaken. That much seems certain. Neither is tariff revision likely to be undertaken at the session of the sixteenth congress immediately preceding the election of 1908. That election will have an important bearing upon the question of tariff revision. At present some of the most aggressive and progressive among the Republican presidential are not very far from a disposition to join hands with the Democrats in the reforming revision. Just now they are reluctant to take that step, but they may be more willing in the sixty first congress. It is hard to keep a squirrel on the ground, it is almost as hard to keep a progressive revisionist from embracing the opportunity to tinker the tariff. Last month's vote at the congress elections has long construed by the "progressives" as an improvement of their strength. Democrat indications do not, to say the least, point to any diminution of the progressive ranks of the Republican party for tariff revision.

Before Mere Number.

In the island of Malta two innocent women nicknamed "the Fly" and "the Magpie," respectively, invited a peddler age, investments at some 600 per cent, per annum interest. It was computed that as much as $1,200,000 was lodged with them and they showed the money as to petticoats, tins, soap boxes and flower pots and distributed it by the interest, which was met for some time. The swindle was never thoroughly cleared up.

HAS ITS ADVANTAGES.

Selling Abroad Cheaper Than at Home.

The grange, at a meeting in Denver, adopted resolutions against a tariff which allows a manufacturer to sell goods in home at higher rates than he charges for the same goods. This resolution, while apparently contrary to reason, is in logic. The tariff, of course, always be made for home not differences in prices in regard to a tariff question. Yet a tariff which allows a manufacturer to sell at home at a certain price and allowed it a less price, has advantages.

A manufacturer of hats for instance, could turn out a product and sell it in this country at a fair margin of profit. The tariff protects him and allows him to make a profit. But for the tariff he would be unable to compete with the cheaper hats of other countries.

Now in supplying the home market he gives work for a certain number of men, and no more. Without extra market he cannot employ extra men.

In a foreign country the price on his product, due to lower wages paid in a foreign land, is lower than he can sell for in this country. He sends that country and sell there at the market prevailing there. He cannot make a profit, because of the high wages he pays, by selling at home.

But he can sell them in a foreign land at, for example, the very lowest rock-bottom price. This compares with foreign competition in his home market under the tariff protects them.

He can sell the product at cost, he gets an added market. He must produce more hats. He must hire more hands. And as he is not selling at or no profit out of the variation, he is able to keep some of the profit he earns but buyers and local tax lowers, and he gets employment in America. Means that they could not have otherwise secured, bringing money into circulation that would not have otherwise have been brought here.

Now, this illustration is good only that his sells at home at a reasonable profit, which enables the firm for the labeling mine by selling surplus products abroad at foreign prices. Such lads have the tariff. Take the factory going, though not labeling to a profit to sell at cost for the home nation.—Norfolk (Neb.) News.

The Seller's Option.

After a reduction in our foreign trade for October, the New York Times says:

"The significance of these figures to our foreign friends lies in the fact that we have been accumulating an excess of exports of merchandise, we have exercised the seller option to take our foreign trade gold, and with something over to show that we were generally speaking, the buyers. This shows an excess of imports of gold of $9,175,000.

"Is it not time for the economist of the New York Journal of Commerce to set up and take notice? He does not, or at least until the American Economist showed him the fallacy of the views did not think gold is used to settle balances of trade.

"It is not to be doubted that our ability to dictate the terms of payment in gold, in payment for merchandise exported, is not the least of our difficulty in the London money market, a difficulty which would be intensified by a continued demand. Nor will any one claim that the present demand for gold is necessary or in part due to the presence of that option which our favorable balance of trade enables us to obtain.

"Free trade, however, will start that year of our favorable balance and trade is due to our selling to foreigners at a less price than foreigners sell at, are changed. As if we could sell anything to foreigners without employing American labor.

Does Not Exist.

"The people of the United States have been taught to believe and with great emphasis for the protective policy. No such philosophy is applied on this main question of policy. But the demand is for the application, modified on varying conditions and complex circumstances, might very well be left to a non-partisan commission of experts."—Minneapolis Journal.

Non-partisanship on the tariff question does not—the outside of insane hospitals or institutions for the feeble-minded. To be a non-partisan on the tariff is to be of a different views one way or the other, and a man who in this enlightened age has no views on the tariff question can hardly be considered as intelligently employed for profession as a tariff commissioner.

One Year of a Tariff Let Alone.

There is no argument for tariff revision demanded in the foreign trade statistics. During the 12 months ended with November we imported articles to the value of $1,257,918,924, or $100,000,000 more than for the corresponding period last year. In the preceding 12 months our imports reached $1,157,917,000, or $100,000,000 more than we exported in the preceding 12 months. We exported over imports amounting to $520,223,551, a gain of more than $120,000,000 over the previous year. Perhaps some ardent tariff revisionist will explain why this splendid showing should have been improved by downward revision.

Tariff revision business may look as flourishing as the Yukon-Alaska boom, every professional by so Mark Twain, the most brilliant inventionary of the Yukonia indirings, explained the land of an Angle-Saxon blood, a female Angelica Clemenina, who flung himself into the arena. He responded with a chivalrous and picturesque answer, and dedicated to the lady of the heart of his second to all. His stroke, which was successful, proved also the "source de fontaine," for Mark Twain Angelica. The pair were married amid great public rejoicing.

FOR BROKEN-DOWN HORSES.

Red Acre Farm a Home Founded by a Young Woman.

One of the most notable of the sensiblevate humane establishments for the rescue of broken-down horses is known as Red Acre Farm, a charitable home for horses opened on May 3, 1905, at Stamford, Conn., Harper's Magazine. The farm is situated 25 miles from Boston, and consists of 87 acres of land, divided up into pasture land and orchards, with a portion of it devoted to stables, office and hospital. Red Acre Farm was founded by a young woman, Miss C. Ford, who gave up to the use of the home the house and grounds which she inherited from her father, and who devotes all her time and energy to succoring the horses she daily oversees the conditions at the home and has the advice and support of well known humanitarians.

The farm is kept up by contributions and the board of pensioners of horses put out to pasture during the summer by persons who want good care taken of them while out of town. Members of Red Acre Farm also keep a small herd of Jersey cows, which provides enough milk to make a stall in the sick ward, where there are kept, when the doctor can keep filled by horses or his own choosing all the time. Notes to the office, offers accept stations, and all money coming into the farm is expended for the object of its incorporation.

ONE POINT HE MISSED.

Lawyer Willing to Admit Error Point ed Out By Judge.

The following amusing incident occurred at the Suffolk probate court at Boston, when the venerable Judge McKim still presided.

A young lawyer who had the reputation of being most careful, precise and exacting, was in a case which he had undertaken to prepare a will for his client, a bachelor, who had no relatives, and who had expressed his wishes to the lawyer, and the lawyer had prepared a will in accordance with the instructions given him by his client. The will was duly executed, and the testator died a few days after, leaving a will in his favor, and his property was left to the lawyer, who was the only relative of the testator, and the will was duly presented for probate. The will was duly signed and witnessed, but it was found that the testator had left his property to his cousin, instead of his nearest relative, the lawyer himself.

The young lawyer looked painfully, but with a brief of pride, now put his chest and answered, "I already have her heart in my keeping, sir!"

LOG-ROLLING DAYS.

ORIGIN OF PHRASE COMMON TO POLITICS.

On Southern Plantations in the Old Times It Meant a Period of Hard Work Followed by Frolic and Merriment.

Everybody knows the meaning of "log-rolling" in political parlance, in plain language, it means: "You tickle me and I'll tickle you" or "You vote for my bill and I'll vote for yours." The original meaning has not been well known to city readers, says the Lynchburg (Va.) correspondent of the Philadelphia Record. The word came from the plantation. It is now almost obsolete in this part of Virginia, because the thing it represents has passed away. The memory of the writer runs back 60 years, when a log rolling was an annual affair on every big plantation. The practice then was to clear new ground every year for tobacco. Felling the forest trees and preparing the ground for cultivation was no small undertaking. First the undergrowth was cleared away and then the big trees were attacked by the as brigade, consisting, on our plantation, of ten or twelve hands. I well remember the scene. It impressed me in my boyhood as real fun, and it was hard work. A dozen axes, wielded by strong arms, rang continually, and ever and anon a great tree, the growth of a century, fell to the earth with a tremendous crash. The new ground was about 20 acres in extent, or, as it was usually spoken of, a planting. 100,000 tobacco hills allowing 5,000 hills to the acre. When the trees were felled the work was not half done. The branches had to be cut off and prepared for fuel and the great trunks had to be cut into manageable lengths.

The log rolling was invested with all the interest that attaches to any strenuous game and festival as well. A big dinner was prepared for the occasion, and plenty of whisky was provided. The latter was seldom abused by any of the men. The hands from other adjoining plantations were invited and there was always friendly rivalry between the crews of the several plantations and between one men on the same plantation. The big logs furnished excellent means of testing the manhood of the contestants in a trial which taxed their muscular nerves. Hand sticks were placed under the log, and as many men were assigned to the log as its weight required. Couples were chosen nearly equal in strength. Then if a man one lifted the fellow at the other end of the stick and brought him to his knees, or as the phrase was, "pinned him down," he was proclaimed victor. If, then, the same man pulled down all other contestants in succession, he was carried off the plantation, so to speak, for that occasion, and if equal in ground at other log-rollings that season, was declared the champion of log rolls of the neighborhood. The contest was carried on with perfect good humor and sometimes with great hilarity, many exchanges of wit and sharp repartee.

It was a much-coveted honor to come out victor in a log-rolling contest. After the work of the day's dance to the music of the banjo usually followed at night and the merry-making continued into the small hours of the morning. The incidents of the day furnished themes for discussion and conversation for months.

Another great event on the plantation was the corn-shucking. The affair is called in the north a "husking bee," but in this part of the world it is a "corn-shucking." Here the husks of the ear are called the shucks, and the corn the husk. If you should send a negro to bring you some husks he would bring you cobs. The corn was hauled and thrown out in a long pile, containing from 500 to 2,000 or more bushels of corn. Then a bright moonlight night is selected and the hands of the neighboring plantations are invited. They are not slow to respond. Soon a big crowd is on the ground and work and fun begin. A leader is chosen who has a loud voice and some skill in music. He takes his place on top of and runs from end to end of the pile, singing a couplet, and all the assembly responds with another couplet or joins in the refrain. The music is wild and weird, but the effect is pleasing, especially at a little distance. The leader does not shock much corn, but he is the most important and most valuable man in the party, because he enlivens the crowd and keeps all awake and in good humor. The work continues till midnight and sometimes later. It is followed by the big supper and the inevitable dance.

Cow in Strawstack Ten Days.

Ten days ago William Hewlecker, residing southwest of this city, lost one of his milch cows, and, feeling positive that the animal had strayed away, advertised his loss in the newspapers. The advertisement, however, failed to bring the usual results.

Hewlecker had abandoned hope of ever seeing his cow again, when, on passing near a large straw stack on his farm, his attention was attracted by a noise which seemed to come from within the stack. Securing a lantern he ventured a long, dark passage by in the stack made by the stock, at the end of which he found the missing cow, which had got fast in the passage and could not extricate herself. She was given her freedom and does not seem to be much the worse for her experience.—Waukesha (Wis.) Special in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WANTED MORE OF THE EARTH.

Canny Young Scot Turned Down a Grand offer of 5½ Acres.

Just 41 years ago, in the Scottish village of Cupar Angus, word was passed round that young Bob Reid, the carrier's son, was going out to Australia to seek his fortune.

"Ka, lad," said one local worthy, "but it's a ridiculy poir outlock for ye. Yer'd do far better to stick here in the hopes o' gettin' your uncle's cottage and bit o' land."

The uncle of the prospective emigrant heard the news and scurtil Hot out.

"What's this I hear about you going to Australy?"

Young Reid told him.

"Now, look here" said the uncle, a retired blacksmith, "stay on in Cupar Angus an' I'll give ye a piece o' land for your life. Now, what do ye say?"

"I'm fond o' land," said the boy. "But I want more than I can get in this village. I'm going out to see a bit o' this world."

"Yell live to regret it," said the uncle.

"I hope not," replied Bob, "but many thanks all the same."

Thirty years later Robert Gillespie Reid, a prominent Montreal railway contractor, sat in his office in the Canadian metropolis. A large map of North America hung before him on the wall. Having moved to Ottawa, he says the Grand Magazine, he had as his contractor built large sections of the Canadian Pacific railway and was still looking about for new fields of endeavor.

He picked up a letter from his desk. It was from the government of Newfoundland, accepting his tender for building a railway across the island. By the terms of the contract, now about to be signed, Mr. Reid would build the road at $15,000 a mile. As a railway is useless unless engines and carriages run over it the contractor agreed to operate it "for a grant in fee simple of 1,000 acres of land for each mile for a period of ten years."

The government accepted this offer. Mr. Reid smiled, his thoughts at the moment got at back to his boyhood and to his uncle's offer. By a curious stroke of the pen he became the master of 5,000 acres.

He was the greatest private land owner in the world. But that was not all. He became possessed of an additional estate. His Uncle Henry died and bequeathed him the five and a half acres in Cupar Angus.

Tales of Clemenceau.

When Georges Clemenceau, the new prime minister of France, was appointed advocate of the interior and said his visit to the office he came upon a secret, document concerning himself which set forth minutely all the details of his political career and innumerable episodes of his life. One item related to certain weekly visits which he had paid to a mysterious person, supposed to be an enemy of the government, with whom he spent an hour or so on each occasion. The mysterious one, as a matter of fact, was M. Clemenceau's chiropodist, but the minister took pains to have this erroneous information inserted in the serious document.

A couple of months ago he knocked at the door of the prison of St. Lazare and desired the porter to give him a bottle of brandy. He seemed so little like a beggar that the porter burst out laughing, but at the same time complied the brandy. "Still," he added, "I don't think you'll like it." "That is exactly what I want to see," replied the little old man. "I am M. Clemenceau, the minister of the interior." The porter looked scared as he mechanically handed the minister the bottle, then rushed wildly off to the prison authorities.

M. Clemenceau ate his frugal meal in silence and, turning to the officials, who had by this time assembled, said: "The bread certainly is not good. A complaint has been made and I demanded to taste the stuff myself." Next day new flour of higher grade replaced the old and better bread resulted.

Cat Catches Her Own Fish.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Pantbecher, residing in Shawnee, Mo., have a beautiful cross cat, "Booster Brown," by name, about two years of age, which brought home, at an early hour yesterday morning, a spotted trout, eight inches long weighing a quarter of a pound. "Booster" has been known to do some successful fishing in Whitton brook before, but has always eaten his catch himself. In this instance he seemed to take a pride in his achievements and leaped up on the sill of the window, about two feet from the ground, where he waited until he succeeded in attracting the attention of the household. On entering the house he laid the fish on the floor with the air of a well-trained dog that has retrieved a bird for its master. The fish was still alive, and, when placed in the water, swam about as though entirely uninjured.

"Booster" comes of a cat family noted for its gaming instincts. His father, owned in Independence, Mo., once brought home a full-grown ground-hog. "Booster" should realize that he closed time on trout, but as reading is not one of his accomplishments, perhaps it would be unfair to hold him responsible for violations of the game law. He is doubtless the only cat in Moline to add to his value as a household pet the utility to bring home fish for his master's table.

Say Women Cooks Are Best.

Some of the most famous dinners of whom the late Sir Henry Thompson was not the least, have held that a first-rate woman cook is the superior of any "chef" that ever drew his thousands a year. HOTTMAN STABS SELF

WOMAN'S AID IN MURDER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Man Had Confessed Participation in Killing Three Years Ago of Theodore Meyers—Teacher Discourages Duelling Among Admirers.

Frank Hottman committed attempted suicide at Alma Monday morning by stabbing himself, but a woman was present who prevented the act. The affair occurred Monday morning. Hottman is a well-to-do farmer living near Alma. Some time ago he confessed to participating in the murder of his brother-in-law, Theodore Meyers, near Ithaca, three years ago, and was sentenced to prison for life. Mrs. Hottman confessed to the murder of Meyers, and was sentenced to prison for 25 years. The two men shot Meyers from ambush while he was driving home from Ithaca one evening

BOOM FOR SMALL STEAMERS.

Numerous Cement Factories at Lake Ports Make Business.

From the Detroit Evening News:

Owners of small lake freighters have reason to congratulate themselves. At different points on the north shores of the lower peninsula there is an increase in business which promises great things for the small boats. Where many of the little steamers have been operated at a small margin in the one trade, the cement industry now bids fair to become a distinct lake trade and engage a big fleet of light tonnage. There are several big cement plants already in operation on the lakes, and several more are projected, one being in process of erection.

A steamer derives a double freight in traveling in the cement trade, which fact further emphasizes the importance of the traffic. Cargoes of cement are loaded at the home port for a down-lake haul and when they are unloaded the carriers are shifted to a coal dock to load coal back. Getting perhaps better than a Milwaukee freight for half the haul, the run back combines to pile up profits for the owner. At the same time the coal cargo is delivered so cheap, the cement man is well satisfied.

At Alpena, before many months have rolled by, the coal trade will run up to three quarters of a million tons. The Alpena Portland Cement Co. will average 300,000 tons and the new Huron Portland Cement Co. will exceed this amount. Another plant projected by F. W. Gilchrist and others will run the total to a million before a year has elapsed, thus making a big amount of tonnage for what has always been considered an out-of-the way port. But a yearly output of in the neighborhood of 2,000,000 barrels of cement will make Alpena rival a town like Huron in importance.

Alpena, Charlevoix, Elk Rapids and Bay City are the ports where the cement factories are now located. Alpena will have three in 1908, Elk Rapids and Bay City each have one, and Charlevoix has one. Alpena has practically a land-locked harbor and deep water docks, and boat owners will gladly send their boats there. Charlevoix possesses a natural inland harbor, but a boat drawing 16 feet would probably get stuck trying to make it. Elk Rapids has no shelter at all, though there is good water for small boats. But all the factories will ship cement and receive coal by water.

Cheap lake freights which put the western and southern markets in easy reach are one of the factors which have drawn the cement companies close to the lake shore.

Say Lakes Will be Lowered.

There is every likelihood of a great battle over lake levels in the next session of congress, resulting from the stifling of the project for a navigable channel from Chicago to the gulf.

John Randolph, sanitary engineer, of Chicago, has been at work with a force of experts and says he will show that the proposed deepening of the channels in the Soo and Detroit rivers will lower the lake levels at least a foot.

He says he will also show that by means of dams and locks the deep waterway from the lake to the gulf would not necessarily affect the levels at all. The lake carriers will contest it with all their resources, of course, and the fight will therefore be a notable one.

"If the deep carriers have any right to object to the theoretical lowering of two inches in the carrying out of the scheme," said Chief Engineer McCormick, the people of Chicago have a right to object to work for the benefit of the deep carriers which already has lowered Lake Michigan a foot and which will lower it still more. We feel that the people of the west have as much right to the water of the great lakes as the people of the east, and it is intended to take every step, legislative and legal, to protect that right."

Wanting for Trouble.

"I've lived in California 20 years, and am still hunting for trouble in the way of burns, cuts, wounds, bolts, cuts, sprains, or a case of piles that Bucklen's Arnica Salve won't quickly cure," writes Charles Walters, of Allegheny, Sierra Co. THE NEW PENSION LAW.

Veterans Should At once Take Advantage of Its Provisions.

Old soldiers, that come in for an increase of pension under the new law that was signed by President Roosevelt, Feb. 6, should at once file their applications. According to the provisions of this law every man who served 90 days in the war of the rebellion or 60 days in the war with Mexico and was honorably discharged and is now 62 years old, is entitled to a pension. If he is 68 he is entitled to $12 a month, dating from the filing of his application in the pension bureau. If he is 70 years old he is entitled to $15 a month, and if 75 years or more to $20 a month.

No application for pension, however, is consistent which has not been made subsequent to the approval of the act, that is February 6, 1907.

The pension is not in addition to any other pension, general or special, and simply benefits those who are not getting a less pension than $12 a month at 62, $15 at 70, and $20 at 75, and those who are not receiving any pension whatever.

The allowances of pensions under this act will hardly begin before the adjournment of congress. Since it is possible up to that time that there may be some amendment or change in the law at some congressional construction to the act.

There are, no doubt, in Charlevoix county, many soldiers who are drawing pensions under a ruling of the department whereby men aged 60 get $6 a month; 65 get $8; 68 get $10, and 70 get $12. All these will be entitled to an increase under the new law.

The recent law which was known as the McCumber bill when in congress, is now known as the act of February 6, that being the date of its approval. The department of the interior has prepared blanks for use in making applications, which, undoubtedly will be sent to the county clerk.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

February 19.

Capt Dan Martin and D. D. Gallagher are on the sick list this week.

Mr. F. F. Davis, of Escanaba, was here a few days last week purchasing cedar.

Capt. J. M. McLean and D. C. Boyle are building two fine gasoline boats.

Mrs. Mary Norton, who has been ill for the past month, is reported to be well again.

The Lumber Co. have received repairs for their new engine, and they expect to have it in working condition in a few days.

The storms of last week played havoc with our ice bridge, and our mail carriers had quite a trying experience on crossing from Cross Village to the Island. The sea had broken the ice and the boys were compelled to single out their horses and cross them over on cakes of ice more than once. This is taking big risks for the paltry amount they get out of it. We are under the impression that if some of those fellows who are making such a howl about the exhorbitant prices paid for carrying our mails in winter were to take the trip such as our boys took last week, they would change their minds about the amount paid.

February 25th.

The mill has shut down for a time owing to the breaking down of both locomotives.

Sister Clementina is able to resume her duties as teacher, after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. James Donlevy, Mrs. Dan C. Gallagher, and Mr. C. C. Gallagher are confined to the house with "Grippe."

One of our High Island Indians, Mitchel Thomas, died at Nawbinway last week and was brought here for burial.

Neighbors Our Foes.

"I was literally coughing myself to death, and had become too weak to leave my bed; and neighbors predicted that I would never leave it alive. But they got fooled, for thanks be to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It took just four one dollar bottles to completely cure the cough and restore me to good health," writes Mrs. Eva Gallagher, of Grovertown, Stark Co. Ind. THE BOYNE CITY I. O. O. F. DEDICATION.

Special to The Sentinel.

The dedication of the new I. O. O. F. temple at Boyne City on Thursday, the 21st inst. attracted a large gathering of the brotherhood from this and the adjoining counties.

Grand Master Rogers, of Reading, Mich., and Past Grand Master Barr were present. The dedicatory services were conducted by the Petoskey brethren, who received unbounded praise for the able manner in which they conducted that beautiful and impressive ceremony.

Charlevoix Lodge No. 293 excepted feel the initiatory degree, and, although we have seen them do better there were no criticisms on the work, but when we come to speak of the reception extended to us by the boys of Boyne River Lodge words fail us. In short the city was turned over to the visitors, nothing was left undone to make the day a pleasant memory. The banquet at six o'clock was a glorious feast and when the time arrived to return home we left with feelings of sincere gratitude for our royal entertainment.

Letter to S. M. See & Sons.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Gentlemen: You are agents for Dewoe lead and rice for your town and county.

The whole doctrine of it lines on three three points:

(1) It is all paint and true paint;
(2) It is the strongest paint;
(3) It is full measure

Because it is all paint, true paint, proportioned, for strength and full measure,

(1) It takes least for a job;
(2) Looks best all the time;
(3) Lasts longest;
(4) Gathers the trade and holds customers.

There is no such argument for any other paint; there is no other such paint; there is nothing but talk for any other paint. Dewoe is the paint, if you want the face on your side.

The country is full of experiences; we bring these experiences to bear on your trade.

Yours truly

WITH THE FESTIVE GRIPPE.

Written by One Who Evidently Has "Been There."

The grippe is the most vicious of diseases. It begins in the night and sleeps not by day. Nor will it let its victim sleep. Where it comes from is not known, but everyone is aware when it gets there, that it has come to stay. It takes off its things and puts its trunk in your best room. It seems to be on an indefinite leave of absence from home to make life as uncomfortable for its host as possible. It puts its feet on your best furniture, uses your best linen towels to clean its shoes, and takes especial delight in leaving its dirty linen about for you to pick up. It assaults you from the front and from the rear. It pounds away at your head until you can stand it no longer; it runs up and down your spinal column, puts your legs out of commission and destroys your appetite. The grippe is the most unfeeling and thoughtless of all diseases. When some diseases are content with affecting certain organs or certain portions of the human frame and letting it go at that, the grippe comes in and lays siege to the entire system, of human economy. It knows no feelings of delicacy or consideration. It inserts you to sneeze, and when you are alone it makes your groaning. Of all diseases spare me from the grippe—Detroit Free Press.

Wherever is acquainted in the vicinity of St. Johnsbury, Vt. knows of Orville Lawrence, of whom most stories are told like the following:

Mr. Lawrence was driving up to the St. Johnsbury house with a little fox terrier behind his sleigh. A sporty young drummer was sitting on the piazza smoking a cigar in company with some friends, and he resolved to have some fun at the expense of Mr. Lawrence.

"Say, how much will you call that dog for? I should like it very much for my wife, who loves pups."

"Well," said the old man, "you had better take it and then your wife will have two."

—Messrs. Hubbard, Maeting and Stacks are holding some very good-like farmers' meetings on the line, to talk sugar beets. Meantime, farmers of Charlevoix county, time is rapidly passing.

—Elk Rapids Progress: A. H. Dougherty has received a letter from Congressman Bishop expressing the opinion that it is now too late to do anything looking toward the section of Old Mission light and predicting that it will go out.

—The Saginaw papers are now run by electricity, and it works like a charm. With the opening of navigation we shall add more machinery and operate night and day, making big strides along year this month, and it proposes to inaugurate the new year with a spirit of progress.

—Elk Rapids Progress: John Monroe of East Jordan was in town Monday to look after his bill against the village, which came in for consideration before the council that evening. Mr. Monroe shipped six cars of poles to that station last week, and expects to be here the latter part of this week with his pile driver to make repairs to the Central Company's dock.

—It seems that there is a hitch in the purchase of the Steamer Argo by the N. M. T. Co. The boat was sold at Harbor Springs and the above company was the highest bidder, but certain litigation still lingers, preventing repairs necessary to be made. Pending litigation grew out of claims for insurance after her wrecking at Holland in the fall of 1905. The Northern Michigan company still hopes to secure the craft.

—Boyne City Journal: The Journal learns with regret that the farmers are not signing their beets to sugar beet contracts as fast as the company would like and that there is imminent danger that the factory at Charlevoix will be closed this year unless the farmers respond very soon. It takes a large acreage to supply a beet sugar factory and in this country it means that nearly every farmer in the vicinity must do his part in order to supply the needed amount of beets to insure the operation of the factory. It will be a mistake which will be seriously felt by the farmers for years to come if they allow the Charlevoix factory to lie idle for want of beets.

—Ben Yettaw has bought the Fred Beaubien restaurant and has taken possession.

—Milwaukee Telegraph: Passenger steamboat managers are looking forward to an early opening of the passenger season this year. The indications now are that the boats will be in operation at least two weeks earlier this season than last. About the first week in April passenger boats will come out of their winter quarters and be made ready for the summer's traffic, said a manager of one of the prominent local steamboat lines today. With this possibility exhibiting, the owners of passenger boats are rushing repairs on their vessels with all possible speed. The probability of unfavorable conditions are, of course, taken into consideration, nevertheless the boats are being made ready so as to begin their trips with the first signs of spring. In addition to the likelihood of an early opening, Thursday was one for a larger passenger traffic this year than ever before in the history of steamboats. The general condition of the people, which has a prominent influence on this branch of the lake trade, the enormous number of book logs already made, and many other similar conditions all favor a largely increased business over previous years.

Judge Mayne Has His War Bonnet On.

In giving a Bellaire saloon keeper 90 days in the Detroit house of correction recently for selling liquor to minors, Judge Mayne said to the prisoner:

"I presume you are aware of the fact that this court has been trying to protect minors from the illegal sale of liquors to them, and, that I announced from the bench and caused it to be known throughout the circuit through the newspapers that the first man that was convicted either on their plea of guilty or after trial, of selling or furnishing intoxicating liquors to minors would receive as a sentence the full penalty of the law, viz: a fine of $100 and imprisonment in the Detroit House of Correction for ninety days. I have asked particularly that the friends of saloon keepers should make this known to them. I say this now so you will not be influenced by any idea of leniency if you plead guilty, and you may take such time as is necessary to decide upon what course you will pursue, whether to plead guilty or go to trial, but this court wants to make the sale of liquor to minors or habitual drunkards so distasteful to saloon keepers that they would as soon see a man with smallpox or the bubonic plague enter their saloon as a minor or habitual drunkard.

That is the situation of the business in the thirteenth Judicial circuit. The courts propose to make your sale of liquor to minors a business as dangerous as is a Nottawasaw railway, and has a water front of 3000 feet on Manistee river and the lake. The court will do its share with accommodating vessel on the lakes. The object of the purchase is for the purpose of erecting a drydock. The terms of sale are private.

—Western Michigan capital has taken hold of the railroad prospectus some years ago by the Gaylord, Alpena & Western Railroad company and will build a new line from Alpena to either Manistee or Frankfort on Lake Michigan. The survey was made and completed through to Frankfort a few years ago. The matter has been in a state of quiescence for some time but judging by the dispatches it has been revived. A late article in the Traverse City Record says: The revival of the Alpena, Gaylord & Western railroad project which was brought to the attention of Traverse City a few years ago, will serve to increase the interest in that enterprise. H. F. Paddy, president of the company, and Frank F. Heck, civil engineer of Chicago, are in the city gathering statistics relative to the possible resources of Traverse City and vicinity for the proposed line. There has recently been a reorganization of the company and new capital subscribed. Mr. Heck is here in the interests of the company as soon as he covers the line from Alpena to Frankfort will make a report for the benefit of the stockholders and financial backers. Mr. Paddy and Mr. Heck have already gone over the proposed line from Alpena to Traverse City and are on their way to Frankfort. Both gentlemen express great satisfaction with the result of their investigation to this point, and are more than satisfied with the prospects in Traverse City.

SHANNON.

The So-Called "Evangelist" Has War Paint On in Great Big Daubs.

Shannon, who travels under the cognomen of "The Irish Evangelist," began his crusade against sin at the Baptist church Sunday night.

We believe Rev. Mr. Berry, the local pastor, is a Christian gentleman. We believe that in securing Shannon for a season of evangelistic work here he was honest and conscientious in his intentions. So much for Mr. Berry.

The SENTINEL has for nearly forty years welcomed and encouraged evangelistic work. It has always believed, and still believes, that a quickening of the conscience; an awakening of the people to the fools and sinners, pagan to the beasts of men along the line of religious thought, works for the good of any community. It has believed, and still believes that, while the latitude of such effort should be "Jesus Christ and His crucified," a noble, impassioned and heart-spoken condemnation of depraving local influences was commendable, but—

If it has believed, and still believes that sensationalism does not touch the right spot in the human soul to begin work on. Mr. Shannon is not an evangelist; he is a sensationalist. He is more explicit, he is a blackguard.

In his opening address Sunday evening, Mr. Shannon expressed a doubt as to whether or not the people of Charlevoix "had the sense that God gives geese" and, lest the people should not fully understand and appreciate his accomplishments, he informed his congregation that he "was not a slugger, he was a Thinker and Witness."

And then he paid his respects to the Masons in a most sarcastic and offensive manner, with the chaplain of the local lodge sitting behind him in the person of the pastor of the church.

A phase of evangelistic work that weakens the influence of the evangelist in any intelligent community, Mr. Shannon will learn before he concludes his work here that Charlevoix is not a community of lumber jacks and river drivers, but that it has the intelligence to recognize the difference between a evangelist and a faker.

We know that the notion of the "evangelist" will advertise him, and perhaps increase the size of his congregations; but we believe he will regard it in the same light that would the vender of corn salve on the street corner.

We have very little use for "evangelists" of the breed of Shannon. We care not whether the water of life comes to us in the gourd or the gold en chalice; it refreshes and invigorates. We little care whether the Word comes to us through the mouth of the theologian or that of the unlettered exhorter, if it brings the penitent to the altar or quickens the conscience of the careless sinner; we care not if a wife desires to protect herself from a drunkard husband she can do so, and, also, as I have said, that extreme way be protected.

CONTRADICTS STORY.

Son of "King Strang" Denies Mormon Reports Concerning Beaver Island.

From the Petoskey News:

At different times during the past thirty years and many others in the country have published stories purporting to give some idea of the character of the man known as "King Strang," who ruled the destinies of Beaver Island during the days of Mormonism. A lady in this city is in receipt of a letter from this man's son, the eldest son in which he refutes many of the tales of imposition as practiced by the great man upon his people. The writer's mother was one of the first women of the settlement, the "king's" first wife, who never espoused the cause of teachings of Mormonism, neither has this, her son, but the letter leaving out all personalities, is as follows:

"Ever since I read the clipping about the 'plates lying' I have tried to get time to write you. You know there is an old maxim, 'you cant believe anything you hear, and only a small part of what you see.' This applies to newspapers as well as to other stories.

"The article in question—not a word of truth in it. If this and all the other stories were really true what a truly wonderful man he was. We had him changed into being an omniverous reader with a retentive memory." He read law and could quote page and paragraph for all his opponent's citations; he was a shrewd politician who always had the votes necessary to elect himself or himself; he was a most persuasive preacher and convinced from the pulpit of his religious ideas, he was always ready to meet any opponent in debate on any proposition and could quote Scripture from Genesis to Revelations; as a legislator he untangled his enemies, conducted his own contest and won out with the plaudits of the entire state administration after a contest which was at that time the most remarkable in the history of the state; as a business man he bought and sold goods and real estate with a keen eye for bargaining, and common honesty in every transaction, he bought timber, cut cordwood, and sold them goods of every kind in the emporium and made Beaver Island a wooding station for all the larger steamers before the days of coal; as a lawyer and local peace officer he was feared because every offender knew that justice was dispensed impartially and without fear or favor, while he was protected by arrests for alleged offenses he always defended himself and his people successfully, and during his lifetime he was successfully defended himself from the public press against every charge of violating the law, except that of polygamy, and that he admitted, defending and justifying his course with quotations from the Bible. There were charges of piracy on the lakes during his lifetime, but nothing was ever proven, or even attempted to be proven in court. It would be just as easy to charge him with the responsibility of all the wrecks that have been piled up on the rocks and shoals during the fifty years since he died as to refresh the silly stories that are told from time to time in the daily press.

"There is much up in the heritage to be ashamed of that I know of. True, he was a polygamist, contrary to state law, but he openly defended and justified his action and was unmerciful in his prosecution of the libertine and the prostitute, both classes feared him. He encouraged early marriages and large families and made regulations and rules that encouraged the young couple to set up a home and divide of their own with their garden, their cow, and their chickens. He made provision that provided the husband for moral aspect and necessities of family far more severe than so called Christian communities do to-day—and for that he was feared and hated. He forbade the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage in any form, and denounced the use of tobacco and snuff. He discouraged the use of tea and coffee by persons of normal health, preferring these stimulants for invalids and the sick only. I have been told by persons who knew him intimately and creditable as anyone's. Every family has its skeleton they would like to hide from public gaze—skeletons of them in families of high social position.

"I could write you many more pages on this topic if I had the time, but this will give you an outline of how I feel in the matter. When a man comes to me with a criticism I tell him to pluck the beam from his own eye before he presumes to see the mote in mine."

—The U. S. fish hatchery is to continue in Charlevoix with the usual work of hatching trout and whitefish. Mr. A. T. Washburn, who had charge of spawn gathering at St. James last fall, is in charge of the hatchery, having arrived Monday with a few million of eggs.

Mr. Parsons had been listening to the conversation with a very grave face and upon his face. "Oh Mr. Jessop is quite right," he said, "I am very much afraid so, too. But tonight I will telegraph to Scotland Yard."

"Yes, I'd advise you to do that," said Mr. Jessop, "and I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll go down to Scotland Yard myself and see the officer. Then I can tell them all about it and they can telegraph to Paris."

"Yes, I'd rather you did that," said Mr. Parsons, "I'm very much obliged to you, I'm very much obliged to you, I'm very much obliged to you,

Garments Made of Paper.

Sufficient attention has been directed lately to the warmth generated in the body by the great value in insomuch that that alone is common to many manufacturers of paper articles manufactured. These have been in the form of vests and coats made of paper, also cotton cotton stuff is used, etc. but it has emerged in a form in Saxony to take serious notice of in the anti-cotton cloth industry. Articles of paper are lighter and warmer than woolen and cotton and yet, we wonder are as durable. Of certainties cotton bulls, jackets, shirts and many other articles of cloth made you now being manufactured. The new textile, if we may be called a cotton substitute, and can be washed repeatedly without injuring the surface, and is unscented, for a fabrication small price. PROSPERITY IS REAL

UNPARALLELED FISCAL AND ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

Treasury Receipts from Tariff Duties Over $100,000,000, Imports More That $1,000,000,000 Exports Exceed $1,000,000,000.

The fiscal year 1906 as shown in the annual report of the secretary of the treasury brought into the treasury of the United States the largest customs revenue in the history of the government. From the customs' room the foreign revenues for the month of June, 1906, were $36,000,000 and the total customs receipts for the year exceeded $300,000,000.

During the same period the internal revenues produced another fifty $1,000,000,000 worth of the product of American labor.

Imports of more than a billion and a quarter dollars were also converted to a sound basis of revenue with protection remarkably.

Prices value age when the country was suffering under the calamity of great reform, a backward, retrogressive council find in the United States a market for not fewer than twenty of the goods that they sent to us in 1905.

Twelve years ago the free trade government was leading to a free government economy so great was the diminution of revenue.

Today a tariff revised upward in the Democratic sense of revision and adequate protection is yielding the usual results of more than $300,000,000 a year, and instead of local issues to point difficulty the treasury. Has a surplus in excess of expenditure for the current year.

Is not this a condition to be glad of? Is it not a condition to be let alone? Is it a condition calling for tariff revision?

If we reduce the tariff we shall reduce the revenues, that is, we shall reduce the imports remain at the present volume of $1,000,000,000.

For, if, through the reduction of the tariff duties the revenues remain unimpaired, or shall even be increased we shall have to import much more than $1,000,000,000, much more than we can of dutiable and compel the difference.

To keep the revenues at their prime we must with tariff rates revised would necessitate a much larger increase of dutiable and competitive imports.

For every ten per cent of tariff reduction we should have to import 10 per cent more of competitive articles in order to keep the revenues at high water mark.

If the reduction of tariff rates were to be 20 per cent the increased importation of duty paying commodities would have to be 40 per cent, and we should then be importing $800,000,000 more of competing articles, $800,000,000 taken away from American producers and labor and given to foreign production and labor.

Then, some will say, there is no intention of making an a lowered reduction of 20 per cent, or even 10 per cent, in the Dingley tariff rates.

We are not so sure of this.

Consider such a development of the tariff ripping crazy as to bring to grief the "protective" extremists of the Republican party and the all ready progressive extremists of the Democratic party, in a combined assault upon what are called the abuses and the extortions of the Dingley tariff—announcing in a single year, as Gov. Cummins has told us, to us three the graft and concerns of the life insurance companies since life insurance been—and add to the reduction in rates certain to result from such a reform the placing of the question of "the underbids" on the free list, this will, today, the results of the realization of the numerous abuses of tariff reduction through reciprocity combinations and through custom administration relaxed to facilitate manufacturers and tariff examiners against an assignmation of all the loose hair upon tariff reduction in one form or another and on one product or another, and who can say that the final result would not be equivalent to a 20 per cent reduction of the present rates? It is as easy as pie above 20 per cent as to fall below that figure.

Tariff Not Responsible.

If you are obliged to pay more for your shoes, harness, etc., than formerly, do not let our friend the shoemaker, harness maker make you believe that the protective tariff is responsible for the raise. It is the increasing demand of the manufacturers that must be held responsible. The extensive use made of leather other than footwear was not apparent a few years ago, we do not believe that the new uses are realized by many who anatomizing avail a return to former values. The price fixer in free trade England show that leather had advanced in that country fully as much as in the United States—Van Wert (O.) Republican.

Germany's Mistake.

Germany cannot produce the meat necessary to feed her people, excepting at great cost; hence the recent application of a high tariff on meats was a decided mistake. The British are anticipating an advantage from that mistake. In several of the great meat producing Australian colonies Investigations have been made as to whether large cargoes of frozen meat could be shipped to Germany. But Australia is not the only meat producing country.—Kingsville (N. Y.) Leader.

Happiness Sheds Radiance.

A baby's smile or woman is a better thing to deal than a five-pound note. Its is a radiating focus of good will, and their entrance into a room is as though another candle had been lighted.—Woman's Life.

Fine Distinction.

A regular fee is charged in Germany for the use of canals and canal-side rivers, but none for rivers that have been made navigable at Improvee.

SPEAKS FOR TARIFF

GAIL LAUGHLIN TAKES ISSUE WITH IDA M. TARBELL.

Writing from Professional Standpoint Miss Laughlin Discusses the Tariff Plans in Miss Tarbell's Argument.

There are many types of phenomena in these 80s, differ and dot and opportunities all the time and then there are those who know the 'Sixties and '72, those who know with a theory and who select and the facts exactly and who respect that theory, and that or charring even such facts, so would need to discredit their strong central theory.

If Miss Ida Tarbell's history of the tariff is to be classed as a history at all, rather than as an argument in support of a theory, then Miss Tarbell must be regarded as responsible for the error of the two tariffs in historical at least go far as the first installment of her history is concerned. There is an important variability of facts here, facts as are presented and need to be accounted for a theory advanced rather than as a basis upon which to mind a theory.

At the beginning of her article Miss Tarbell informs us that "the most any public question on which the minds of the people of the United States were made up 10 years ago it was that of the tariff, and that, after effecting in the lowering of duties in 1897, she says:

"Public opinion was the mind of the country satisfied with lower duties and an increasing list of free goods, but it has accepted the idea that a Christian nation should establish an equity as regards its fellow-creatures relations with its neighbors."

The idea of lower duties—that is, the country had but one mind on the subject—every one was agreed. Now we are dancing when Miss Tarbell states Tarbell states instances. Yes, we are very sad, and, in fact, form as that.

The tariff was one of the whipping posts and had been curtailed to accordion powered in 1897, and the movement objected to lower in was producing from of duty. He wanted and Venezuela, Cuba, Porto Rico, one of the few New England representatives who had spoken in such a mood against the bill in 1897, and the speech at that time has been acknowledged to be one of the most acknowledged and of the active protectionist sentiment left in the country.

Now, there is considerable world based, then, with according to Miss Tarbell, a sentiment called to note lower duties, and that the country had two minds instead of one, and now in three minds was not satisfied with lower duties, but was movements in favor of protection.

Miss Tarbell has drop another fact which would indicate that the people were hardly settled in favor of a free trade policy as she intimates. If the fact that a large majority of the leaders of representatives which met in 96 were in favor of protection. The members taking their seats in 1897 had been elected in 1894 one year, therefore after the time when, according to Miss Tarbell, the sentiment "mind of the country had been satisfied with lower duties and wanting 52 pounds. About June 1 comes the socks, or red salmon, every Wind, in a large majority of numbers and which is the common running variety. A little later appears the king salmon, which weighs fifteen with cat, and finally, in August and September, the beautiful silver salmon arrives, the prettiest fish in all the world and one of the most palatable.

When the salmon enter the fresh water, they do not take much of nature their skin becomes red, but this glob does not affect the wholesomeness of their flesh. It is nothing that salmon eat in the sea, but a glacier stream, fed by the streams that have taken at their heads literally swarm with them."

Made a Difference.

"Why, I don't see what difference it makes for you to pay," quoted the colonel to an enterprising editor after a long absence and found three farmer-lads in possession.

"Why, I'm a committee from the committee," explained one, "and we want to get out the address. You make you don't you?"

"Of certainly."

"What's your figure?"

"I delivered last Sunday fair addresses last fall and received $50 each."

"Pa, too high."

"There was no fault found with my prices last year. It takes time to produce one, you know, and then I must journey down and deliver it. The farmer I mean is a very reasonable man."

"Look here, colonel," said the chairman of the committee after consulting a list, "have you got one of your own addresses on hand?"

"I believe so."

"And can't you put 'em in for $25?"

"Hm, since one might get on to it."

"Well take all the chances of that. All the people who will listen to you will be old Mrs. Casey, who is deaf as a post, and the boys in the hill, they will take it for Fourth of July oration, anyhow, and you won't run the slight est risk. Won't this make a difference to your figure?"

The colonel blushed and stammered and said he thought it would and when the committee left they had the receipt for $50 and he agreed to be on time.

WHY THE GAME APPEARED.

Anecdote Illustrates Shrewdness of the late President Kruger.

Not long ago a monument was unveiled in Pretoria over the grave of the late Paul Kruger. The inscription there of the African republic is now complete, and it has cost far less than for his achievements. This built mainly with the old rules which always go against a part in the making of a world, which found him a lonely, the all law suits in which women are parties, assumed transcendental importance in his eyes.

"I wrote two letters, one to the young lady, as follows:

"'My dear Miss K. Will you ride with me Saturday afternoon? I have secured a new saddle, which, I think, you will like. If agreeable be ready at about one o'clock.'

"To the old lady, who had numerous ailments, I gently intimated my inability to give time and attention, I addressed the following:

"'Dear Madam: I am unable to give you any more of my time and attention. I have spent much time with you. I have other engagements of greater importance and of more and more urgent nature.'

"These letters got mixed—the letter to Miss K. being addressed to the old lady, the letter to the old lady to Miss K.

"Bearing nothing I was on hand with the horses, and a very disappointed young lady requested an explanation of the letter. Whether the old lady was ready that afternoon I never knew, as I sent a cover to captain mullen."

In the matter of fact, I met a great and very merry lost a wife."

Still Believe in Witchcraft.

How many Bluebell readers who have read the witch trial of Vienna know that such women as Maile Gabel, persecuted for her sixth child, are to be found here? Marie Jemes is a well known fortune teller, judge for fancy of the Hungarian shepherd, Stephen Szuhacsics, who lives in Vienna and who sells charms and in whom she believes. He made her "mark," which was to be often found before, that this world is not a solitary area and that the judge is wrong. A great part of mankind is in the middle ages, if it is not, it is at least in the nineteenth. The credulous Austrian women also believe that her husband could be a good of experience—he is a "wise" of the Hungarian, and Marie Nejedly, who would time for a small consideration to insure him a passport to some place of expenditure, habits, has many French and English fellow-lovers. White and black witches flutter in many parts of this country. Not a few of the latter are only charlatans but not a few of them really believe in their own charms, as the Marie Nejedly asserted that she did.—London Outlook.

Author's Carelessness That Might Have Had Dire Results.

Judge Shute, the author, tells this story on himself:

"My excessive habit of making letters outlets get me into a serious scrape some time ago. It was in 1896, I believe, and I addressed arrangements to the president Mrs. S. I had a friend, a very aged woman, for whom I was corresponding a trifling sum, and, in a note, the all law suits in which women are parties, assumed transcendental importance in her eyes.

"I wrote two letters, one to the young lady, as follows:

"'My dear Miss K. Will you ride with me Saturday afternoon? I have secured a new saddle, which, I think, you will like. If agreeable be ready at about one o'clock.'

"To the old lady, who had numerous ailments, I gently intimated my inability to give time and attention, I addressed the following:

"'Dear Madam: I am unable to give you any more of my time and attention. I have spent much time with you. I have other engagements of greater importance and of more and more urgent nature.'
